2-WAY RELIEF FOR THE MISERY OF COLDS

RELIEVES THROAT PAIN—RAWNESS

ENTERS BODY THROUGH STOMACH AND INTESTINES TO EASE PAIN

The speed with which Bayer tablets act in relieving the distressing symptoms of colds and accompanying sore throat is utterly amazing . . . and the treatment is simple and pleasant. This is all you do. Crush and dissolve three genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets in one-third glass of water. Then gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back.

This medicinal gargle will act almost like a local anesthetic on the sore, irritated membrane of your throat. Pain eases promptly; rawness is relieved.

You will say it is remarkable. And the few cents it costs effects a big saving over expensive "throat gargles" and strong medicines. And when you buy, see that you get genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK...

By Lemuel F. Parton

Biggest Star Traced to 2-Story Leap

NEW YORK.—If a prisoner hadn't jumped out of a two-story window and escaped, 123 years ago, newspapers today wouldn't be front-paging the description of the biggest star in the universe, 3,000 times larger than the sun. They should have named the star Napoleon, instead of Epsilon Aurigae. His was the touch-off of events terrestial which finally ranged out 3,000 light years and brought news of the giant star. Chronologically, as the astronomers would put it, it was like this:

Freiderich Georg Wilhelm Struve was a studious German youth who wanted to be an astronomer, but lacked opportunity for study. For no apparent reason, a ranging band of Napoleon's scouts seized him and locked him in a prison on the banks of the River Elbe.

He timed his high window-dive to the passing of a queer-looking ship, made a long, hazardous swim and was pulled aboard. The ship was homeward bound to Russia. The czar was a patron of astronomy.

The young man was encouraged and became not only director of the observatory of the University of Dorpat, but one of the founders of modern astronomy, with Herschel and Bissel.

His sons and grandsons became famous astronomers and it is his great-grandson, Dr. Otto Struve, who, with his assistants at Yerkes observatory of the University of Chicago at Williams Bay, Wis., discovers the facts about Epsilon Aurigae.

He is director of the observatory. He arrived here in 1921, after fighting with the white armies in Russia and fleeing to Turkey with their collapse. He became director of Yerkes observatory five years ago at the age of thirty-four.

'Grunt-Iron' Music Makes Kids Whinny

IN THE new movie, "Hollywood Hotel," Bennie Goodman, trumpeter and swingster, again demonstrates that he gets all the college trade. The boys whinny with excitement at Mr. Goodman's most off-hand toot. Expeditions sent by this department into the far domain of youth say it's that way all over the country, particularly among the collegians. The Dossier says he does it with his "gut-bucket, barrel-house, screw-ball and grunt-iron music." Be that as it may, it nets him $100,000 a year.

At the age of ten, he was a semi-pro vaudeville musician, earning around $2 a week in Chicago's Ghetto. He was the eighth of eleven children of a tailor who earned $20 a week. He bought a mail order clarinet on the installment plan, and, by the time he was thirteen, was a full-fledged journeyman musician, but still in short pants.

He first got out in front in California, running his first band in 1931. He slumped down to $40 a week in 1934, moved in with Billy Rose, hit his stride again, and, via radio, is a recent arrival in the top-money brackets.

He is twenty-seven, tall, dark, athletic, good-looking, with rimless octagonal glasses, and, the more savage his music, the more money he makes.

Mr. Gunther Created Big News in 1914

FRANKLIN MOTT GUNTHER, American minister to Rumania, decorously, and quite unofficially, he says, challenges the new anti-Semitism in Rumania. He is a suave career diplomat who once pulled headlines as big as a Rumania war would get today. That was in 1914, when there was less news.

He was a guest on a yacht anchored in Christiania harbor. The harbor master told him that spot had been saved for Kaiser Wilhelm's yacht.

There was an argument and the harbor master said Mr. Gunther had clipped the cap off his head and wouldn't pick it up. It boiled up into a big international story, but Mr. Gunther came through it nicely to continue representing his country in many foreign ports.

President Coolidge made him minister to Egypt in 1928. He is a native of New York, fifty-two years old, an alumnus of Harvard.

Author of "God Save the King"

The origin of "God Save the King" has been wrapped in mystery for centuries. It was first sung by Harry Carey at a dinner to celebrate the capture of Portobello by Admiral Vernon in 1740, according to Pearson's London Weekly. Carey admitted authorship of the words, but refused to commit himself about the music. The song achieved instant success on the wave of patriotism that followed the declaration of Bonnie Prince Charlie as king. English citizens sang it everywhere as a retort in favor of the legitimate monarch, and it was first sung in the presence of the monarch, at Drury Lane in September, 1745.

HOW TO SEW

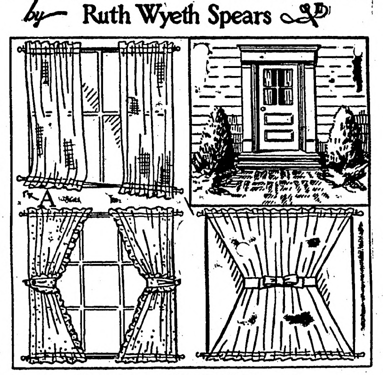
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



Curtaining Your Front Door.

YOUR front door greets your friends before you do. Is it dressed to look its best? Here are some simple rules that will be useful in selecting the material and style for front door curtaining.

Choose a fabric that looks well on both sides and that harmonizes with the outside color of your door as well as with the color scheme of the hall or room into which it opens. A simple net curtain material or plain silk are good to use but if your door is white on the outside think twice before you choose the usual ecru or pongee color. White net or silk of a color to match the shutters or the trim of the house will look infinitely more attractive and will not be too conspicuous. The curtains may be made double with a different color on the inside if need be. Pale yellow is another color that is always safe to use as it gives the effect of light shining through the door.

These curtains should be firmly anchored both top and bottom so that they do not blow about and catch in the door when it is opened and closed. Both bottom and top rods may be fastened over hooks as shown here at A.

Every homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; curtains for every type of room; lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents (coins preferred) to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

TIPS to Gardeners

Start Them Indoors

TOMATO, cabbage, broccoli, egg plant and pepper crops usually prove more satisfactory when they are started indoors from seed. The gardener thus may use seed of a known variety from a dependable source.

About eight weeks before plants are to be set in open, sow seeds a quarter-inch deep in good soil in a regular florist's flat. Water thoroughly but not too frequently—preferably on bright days.

Good sunlight and good air circulation are important in preventing "damping off." Keep temperature fairly even at 70 to 75 degrees. When young plants are about one and one-half inches tall, transplant to a larger box or cold frame, spacing about three inches apart.

If the plants are grown in a box, place them indoors in the shade on six or eight mild days to harden them off. When plants are set in open soil, space them far enough apart to allow for full development.

Illinois Fence for New York Fair

NEW YORK (Special).—Illinois-made fencing is being shipped to the New York's World Fair for enclosure of the 389.8 acres comprising the central exhibit area. This was learned when Grover Whalen, President of the Fair Corporation, announced the award of a first fencing contract to the Cyclone Fence Company, whose New York offices are at 370 Lexington Avenue.

Officials of the manufacturing firm announced that its Waukegan plant was shipping the fencing and that installation would start as soon a the first steel reached the 1216½-acre exposition site on Flushing Meadow.

The contract price of the nine-foot steel fence installed, complete with gates and concrete footings at ten-foot centres, as derived from figures submitted by pre-qualified bidders, is $32,812. About three miles of fence are required to enclose the central exhibit area along three sides and down to the Flushing river.

Immediate enclosure of the tract was made necessary, Mr. Whalen said, by the great and varied construction work that is already taking place on the site two years in advance of the Fair's opening date. The Illinois-made fence will inclose all of the Transportation Zone of the exposition and the area that will be dominated by the two Theme Centre wonders, the Perisphere and Trylon.

Many Italians and Indians regard coral as protection against the "evil eye." Safetygrams
BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Gin and gas do not mix. Even if each is in a separate container the two are bad company.

I have no sympathy nor mercy for a drunken auto driver. The laws governing this type of convicted criminal are too lenient. Judges should enforce what laws we do have to the limit. The killing of innocent citizens by drunken drivers should not be permitted.

But the question should not be when is a man drunk? A man who has had only one drink cannot have the same judgement or control that he would have without the liquor. I can see no plausible argument for his defense; it is dangerous to allow him to drive. It seems hard to get this lesson through people's heads, that drinking and driving are two very separate operations that have nothing in common.

Loans To Tenant Farmers

Loans to tenants to purchase farms will be made this year in Freeborn, Martin, Otter Tail, Roseau, and Stevens counties in Minnesota under the new Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, it was announced recently by Lloyd I. Nelson, executive secretary of the State Farm Security Advisory Committee.

The announcement followed closely the meeting of the State Farm Security Advisory Committee, which recommended counties after a study of Minnesota conditions. It was upon the recommendation of this group that the counties were designated by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

In effect the announcement means that from 25 to 30 tenant farmers in Minnesota will be given the opportunity to acquire farms of their own and largely of their own selection. The farms will be sold under a 40 year, 3 percent loan agreement. Payments will be made upon a variable payment plan, depending on crop, livestock, and livestock product yields for that particular year. The allocation for the state, based on the farm population and prevalence of tenancy, was $215,435.

The proceedure is for the application to be made by the tenant farmer to the FSA's county supervisor of rural rehabilitation who, in turn, will present the application to a county committee constituting three farm members. This committee, as yet unselected, will consider qualifications of the applicant and will appraise and examine the farms to be purchased. They must recommend and approve the applicant, the farm, and the the amount of the loan that may be made upon it.

The successful applicant must be a citizen of the United States, a farm laborer, or a person who has recently obtained the major portion of his income from farming. The Act provides that preference will be given to married persons who have dependent families and, wherever praticable, persons who are able to make a down payment or who are owners of livestock and some equipment.

The persons desiring to apply for a loan under the provisions of this Act must reside in one of the designated counties and obtain a application blank from the County FSA Supervisor. No loans this first year will be made in counties other than these named.

Rev. and Mrs. Hanson attend the Open House at the new parsonage of the Trinity Lutheran church, Thief River Falls with Rev. and Mrs. R. M. Fjelstad as hosts.

North Central Potato Control

Approval of two resolutions of the North Central Potato Control Committee now eliminates the shipment of U. S. No. 2 grade potatoes in interstate commerce for this area and makes possible a purchase program for potatoes having invisible defects, announces William J. Dunkel, manager.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace has approved a recommendation of the control committee that shipment of U.S. No. 2 grade potatoes in interstate commerce be eliminated in the North Central area, comprising the states of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and several counties in North Dakota. This goes further than the original marketing agreement passed last fall in which interstate shipment of potatoes not meeting requirements for U. S. No. 2 grade and those less than one and one-half inches in diameter was prohibited. The control group estimates that this action will eliminate a weighted average of 12 per cent of the total potatoes which would otherwise be available for shipment from this area. The order became effective Tuesday, Jan. 25, and will continue through May 31, 1938.

The Commodity Credit Corporation has also approved a recommendation that in certain areas where potatoes have ivisible defects such as hollow heart and stem end discoloration and are not eligible for any U. S. standard grade, a purchasing program be set up by which such potatoes would be bought and distributed to relief clients. In Minnesota a purchasing office for this purpose has been opened in Moorhead.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Holmgren of Glyndon, Minn.; Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Nelson, and Mrs. T. A. ### Uses Tractor On Mail Route

Several people who were in town on Friday inspected the new equipment that Guy Anderson, local mail carrier, started out with that day for the first time. Mr. Anderson has taken his new Allis-Chalmers rubber-tired tractor and built a good cab on it and will use that instead of his snowmobile on the mail route The tractor has more clearance than any other outfit that he could use and therefore makes a dandy rig for hauling mail. Several mail carriers in the northern part of the state are using this kind of transportation on the mail routes in deep snow.

Hunters Shot 30,000 Deer

That 54.81 per cent of the big game hunters who took out their licenses for the 1937 six day deer season bagged deer is indicated by reports compiled in the Conservation Department.

Of 21,195 hunters reporting to the department, 11,619 had taken game, There were more adult male deer taken than female and likewise in the fawn class there were more male taken.

5,248 took adult males, 4,234 adult females, 1,238 fawn males and 863 fawn females reported While the final returns are not yet in from all county auditors, it is estimated that about 55,000 licenses were sold.

On the basis of the percentages already reported, it is indicated that about 30,000 deer were taken during the season.

TIPS to Gardeners

Get Flowers Earlier

GARDENERS can get earlier bloom from many flowers by starting them indoors from seed and setting the plants in the open soil when frost danger is past.

Plant seeds of the following indoors about six weeks before the plants are to be set out: Delphinium, pink, gaillardia, lobelia, myosotis, pansy, Iceland poppy, salvia, stock and verbena.

A week or two later the following can be sown indoors: Ageratum, snapdragon, aster, dahlia, nicotiana, petunia, phlox drummondi, salpiglossis, scabiosa and vinca rosea.

Seed may be procured at your corner store sufficiently early to permit indoor planting.

With a number of popular flowers, however, there is no advantage to be gained by early starting indoors, according to Gilbert Bentley, flower expert of the Ferry Seed Institute.

In this class are sweet alyssum, calendula, calliopsis, candytuft, four o'clock, marigold and nasturtium.

NAVY EXPANSION IS PUSHED

Congress Gets Busy with President's Defense Program . . . Complaints of "Little Business" Are Heard

Edward W. Pickard SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

© Western Newspaper Union.

Rush Defense Plan Bill

Carl Vinson

LEADERS in congress lost no time in carrying forward the national defense program which President Roosevelt had offered in a special message. Legislation to authorize the expenditure of $800,000,000 in naval construction was introduced immediately in both the house and senate, and steps were taken to provide the additional requirements of the army. It was predicted the house would pass the expansion bill by the middle of February.

Chairman Carl Vinson of Georgia called together his house naval affairs committee and began hearings on the measure, certain that it would be reported favorably with little delay.

The President in his message recommended:

That the present naval building program be increased 20 per cent.

That congress authorize $8,800,000 for additional anti-aircraft equipment.

That congress provide for better establishment of an enlisted reserve for the army.

That congress legislate to prevent profiteering in war-time and to equalize the burdens of possible war.

Among his recommendations the President also included appropriations for experimental smaller vessels; for army ammunition and for the manufacture of army equipment.

Opposition to the bill in the house was expected to come from certain members from the middle western states. Tinkham of Massachusetts also didn't like the program, saying it was one of offense, not defense, and that the President was preparing to get the United States into the League of Nations.

Senators Vandenberg of Michigan and Frazier of North Dakota demanded that Mr. Roosevelt make public the foreign policy he expects to follow behind increased armaments.

New Fleet Commander

ADMIRAL CLAUDE CHARLES BLOCH, new commander of the United States fleet, assumed his duties at San Pedro, Calif., replacing Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn. In the colorful ceremonies Admiral Bloch made a brief address, saying:

"I wish to emphasize to the officers and men of the fleet that our only justification for being is to be ready to fight.

"We have fine ships and, knowing you men as I do, I know that you will continue your hard work and unselfish devotion to duty so that our navy always will be ready and second to none."

U.S. Avoids Entanglement

REPRESENTATIVES of Great Britain, France and Russia in the League of Nations council meeting in Geneva were ready to adopt a resolution to aid China by sending her war munitions, but awaited the co-operation of the United States. The scheme was proposed to Washington informally, and was as informally rejected after President Roosevelt had conferred with Secretary Hull and others. Mr. Hull indicated our policy would not be changed and that America would take no leadership in aiding China.

Turn of Little Business

Secretary Roper

CALLED to Washington from all parts of the country by Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, some 500 representatives of "little business" undertook to formulate a recovery program for submission to President Roosevelt. Mr. Roper and his assistant, Ernest Draper, took part in the preliminary discussions, and since the President could not receive all of them a small committee was named to take their proposals to the White House.

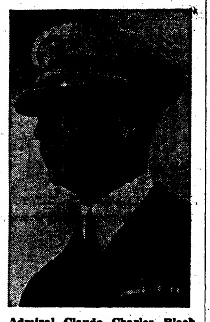
According to reports from the capital, the President desires legislation for federal financing of small industries to stimulate business. This would require the creation of a new government agency unless the power were granted to the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Three chief complaints of the small business men are:

The undivided profits tax has prevented them from accumulating a "rainy day" surplus.

The capital gains and losses tax has frozen capital and prevented the encouragement of new enterprises.

Monopolistic practices are presenting increasing hazards to their successful operations.



Admiral Claude Charles Bloch, shown above, has assumed command of the United States fleet, succeeding Admiral Hepburn. The transfer was made at San Pedro, Calif.

Congress and the administration already are busy with steps to correct these alleged abuses.

Big Business Scared Again

MEANWHILE big business—and the country generally—was discussing with considerable apprehension the declaration by the President that industry must reduce prices and at the same time keep wages up. An immediate result was the crash of prices on the stock exchanges, the decline reaching as high as 7½ points. Commodities declined in sympathy with stocks.

"If industries reduce wages this winter and spring," the President said at his press conference, "they will be deliberately encouraging the withholding of buying—they will be fostering a downward spiral and they will make it necessary for their government to consider other means of creating purchasing power."

Many congressmen, Democrats as well as Republicans, took issue with Mr. Roosevelt's logic and economics, pointing out that industries lack the resources to keep wages up on a falling market because their funds have been depleted by the undistributed profits tax.

Row Over Coal Prices

MINIMUM prices for coal and marketing regulations fixed by the national bituminous coal commission have aroused a storm of complaints. Resentment was especially strong in Illinois, which, though ranking third among soft coal producing states, is not represented on the commission.

Six coal companies started court action in Chicago to restrain enforcement of the price schedule, and Chicago itself contemplated similar action. The cities of Rochester, N. Y.; Cleveland, Ohio; and St. Louis, Mo., complained of high and unfair coal rates and appealed to the courts to suspend the commission's orders.

Democrat in Stiewer's Seat

GOV. CHARLES MARTIN of Oregon appointed Alfred Even Reames of Salem to serve out the unexpired 11 months of the term of Sen. Frederick Stiewer, who resigned to enter private law practice. Mr. Reames, a lawyer sixty-seven years old, thus becomes the first Democratic senator from Oregon since 1921. He is chairman of the executive committee of the Democratic state central committee. He will not seek to succeed himself in the senate.

John Roosevelt Wedding Plan

JOHN ROOSEVELT, youngest son of the President, and Anne Lindsay Clark are to be married in Nahant, Mass., on June 18. The groom's brother Franklin will be his best man. Rev. Endicott Peabody, headmaster of Groton school, who has officiated at the weddings of all the President's sons as well as that of the bride's parents, and Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, Episcopal bishop of Massachusetts, will officiate.

Following a six weeks' honeymoon the couple will live in a Brookline apartment, as young Roosevelt expects to work in a Boston advertising agency.

Union Controls Canned Music

THE American Federation of Musicians will control the output of canned music (music recorded by mechanical means for broadcast) in nearly 589 radio stations in the country in a new contract between the musicians and the principal recording companies, the chain radio broadcasting companies, and the independent affiliates.

Nation Celebrates 250th Anniversary Swedenborg's Birth

AMAZING as it seems that one mind could encompass so many varied realms of knowledge, nevertheless it is true that Emanuel Swedenborg, the 250th anniversary of whose birth is being celebrated this year, made important contributions in many fields of science, theoretical and practical, in statesmanship, philosophy, and religion.

In 1716-1718 he published the first scientific periodical in Sweden, containing records of his mechanical inventions and mathematical discoveries, which included the first airplane design to have fixed wings and moving propellor, the first air-pump to employ mercury, and the description of a method for determining latitude and longitude at sea by observations of the moon among the stars. In the "Principia," a work on physics and cosmology, he arrived at the nebular hypothesis theory before Kant and Laplace. He was 150 years ahead of any other scientist in his works on the functions of the brain and spinal cord, and on the functions of the ductless glands.

Swedenborg served as an active member of the parliament of his country for more than fifty years, introducing fiscal reforms and much general legislation.

At the age of fifty-five Emanuel Swedenborg discontinued his scientific pursuits and began his work as a theologian, publishing the "Arcana Coelestia, Apocalypse Explained"; "Heaven and Hell"; "Four Doctrines"; "Divine Love and Wisdom"; "Divine Providence"; "Apocalypse Revealed"; "Conjugal Love"; "True Christian Religion"; and other miscellaneous theological works. Information regarding the life and achievements and the works referred to, will be sent without charge by application to the Swedenborg Foundation, 51 E. 42nd St., New York City.

Ice Tears Away Niagara Falls Bridge

This twisted mass of steel girders among mountainous blocks of ice is all that remains of the 40-year-old Falls View International bridge which collapsed into the ice-filled gorge below Niagara falls after resisting an ice jam for 24 hours. This view of the famed "honeymoon bridge" was made from the American side. The noise of the crash of the 4,500,000-pound structure blotted out for a moment the roar of Niagara falls, 500 yards upstream. Thousands of spectators watched as the girders buckled. Workmen who had been sent into the gorge to strengthen the bridge's supports narrowly escaped death when the crash came.

Stitches in Time

A STITCH in time goes a long way toward making your days brighter and your burdens lighter when the bustling, busy days of Spring roll 'round. Practical House Coat.

There is a versatility to this clever pattern which makes it a prime favorite for the style conscious and the thrifty. Designed in two lengths, it lends itself perfectly to either of two needs—as an apron frock in gingham or seersucker for busy days around the house, or as a full length beach or sports coat in chintz or linen crash. The princess lines are smooth and flattering and there are just seven pieces to the pattern—a cinch to make and a joy to wear.

Slimming Silhouette.

This handsome frock in linen or crepe does wonders for the full figure, sloughing off pounds here and bulges there with the utmost ease. Streamlined from the shoulders and buttoned at the waist with two graceful scallops, this is the sort of frock which answers your need perfectly for almost any social or shopping excursion, a standby to see you through the Summer. There is a choice of long or short sleeves and the simplicity of the design—just eight pieces in all—insures success even for the inexperienced in home sewing.

Attractive Apron.

"Swell" isn't a word the teacher recommends but it is highly appropriate in describing this handy apron frock which goes about the business of being an honest-to-goodness apron, not just a postage stamp model to wear for effect. Appealing in design, easy to wear, extremely serviceable, with two convenient pockets, this perfectly swell apron was designed by a busy housewife who knew her oats! Six pieces to the pattern.

Are Women Better Shoppers than Men?

GRANTING a woman's reputation for wise buying, let's trace the methods by which she has earned it. Where does she find out about the advantages and details of electrical refrigeration? What tells her how to keep the whole household clean—rugs, floors, bathroom tiling—and have energy left over for golf and parties? How does she learn about new and delicious entrees and desserts that surprise and delight her family? Where does she discover those subtleties of dress and make-up that a man appreciates but never understands?

Why, she reads the advertisements. She is a consistent, thoughtful reader of advertisements, because she has found that she can believe them—and profit thereby. Overlooking the advertisements would be depriving herself of data continuously useful in her job of Purchasing Agent to the Family.

For that matter, watch a wise man buy a car or a suit or an insurance policy. Not a bad shopper himself! He reads advertisements, too!

Lincoln as the Loneliest Man

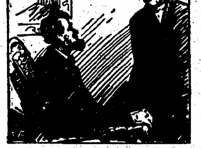
"I AM the loneliest man in America." These words dropped from the lips of Abraham Lincoln one evening in 1863, that period which was so dark and unpromising for the cause of the Union.

In March, 1863, writes W. H. Smith in the Washington Post, I heard the incident related to a small group of distinguished men by Bishop Ames of the Methodist church. I do not know if it has ever appeared in print, but if it has, it is worth retelling. The narration took place in the National Hotel, in Washington, in a suite of rooms then occupied by John Evans, territorial governor of Colorado, and father of Evanston, Chicago's beautiful suburb. My presence is accounted for by the fact that Governor Evans was a relative and I had called to pay my respects.

In the group were two or three Methodist bishops, a member of the senate and two of the house. I am sure no one who heard it related ever forgot it, or the impressive manner of the bishop. President Lincoln and the bishop were warm personal friends, and the President had employed the bishop on some delicate mission connected with the war. The bishop said that one evening in June, 1863, he went to the White House to call on the President. The President was in a very despondent mood. Hooker had just suffered his defeat at Chancellorsville. The conversation lasted until a late hour of the night.

The President reviewed the situation at length. The war had been going on for two years, and the North had made little material progress. The bishop asked if he despaired of a final victory. His response was made with great earnestness:

"No. I dare not despair when I know there is a God who controls the affairs of nations as He does those of individuals, but the thought of the thousands who must yet be slain is appalling."

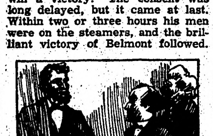


"I Dare Not Despair When I Know There Is a God."

It was then he uttered the words with which this article begins. He said: "I am the loneliest man in America. There is no one to whom I can go and unload my troubles, assured of sympathy and help."

He spoke of the quibbling, complaining and fault finding in congress, and the harsh and unjust criticisms heaped upon him. He spoke with extreme heat of what he termed "that meddlesome body," the committee on the conduct of war.

The President rapidly reviewed Grant's record since he joined the army. He was at Cairo with a small force. He urgently asked permission to move, saying he would win a victory. The consent was long delayed, but it came at last. Within two or three hours his men were on the steamers, and the brilliant victory of Belmont followed.



"Grant," He Said, "Fights, and That Is What I Want."

It was not a great victory, for the forces engaged were not large, but it was a beginning and showed the mettle of Grant.

Back to Cairo, with a larger force he again and again urged for permission to move, and when the permission came he rushed his men to the steamers, and three days later he captured Fort Henry. Not delaying an hour he pushed his small force across the country to Fort Donelson. He was not dismayed by the fact that the force in the fort was larger than his own, but immediately locked the doors on that force. When the rest of his men reached him, by a series of brilliant assaults, he captured, not alone the fort, but an army almost equal in number to his own.

At Shiloh, unlike any other general, he remained to fight after his disaster on the first day, he made no effort to get the remains of his army across the river, but at daylight the next morning became the attacking party, winning a victory. He was now at Vicksburg, and complaints of his delay were many. Only that day two senators had urged Lincoln to displace Grant, but he would not do it. "Grant," he said, "fights, and that is what I want." He said Grant had promised him he would capture Vicksburg by the fourth of July, and he intended to give him the opportunity.

The President, with deep earnestness, then declared: "When he captures Vicksburg, I will find some way to boost him over the heads of all others, and give him command of all the armies. With Grant in command, by Jinks!" (his favorite expletive) "the armies will move and move to some purpose. He fights."

The weather man has played a mean trick on the farmers this winter. When the weather is warm like it has been so far this year the chickens will lay a lot of eggs and at the present time farmers report that they are getting a lot of the bird fruit at this time. But here is the sticker. When they do get a lot of eggs the market goes hay wire and there is no price to speak of for the eggs. Last week the egg market went all to pieces and the farmers only get 11c a dozen cents for them now. This is not enough to pay for the feed and care of the chicken flock.

Issued Weekly From The Home Of The Biggest Co-operative Creamery In Marshall County

H. O. Hanson, Publisher; Mrs. Mabel Hanson, Editor & Bus. Mgr. Holt, Marshall County, Minnesota, Friday, Feb. 18, 1938. Volume 27, Number 42

Annual Creamery Meeting

The stockholders and patrons of the Farmers' Cooperative Creamery here held their annual meeting at the Community Hall last Thuraday afternoon. A very small crowd came in for the meeting as the weather looked bad that day.

The annual report was read and explained by Walter Larson, manager of the creamery, and proved very satisfactory to the patrons. Mr. Larson stated that the institution had a net gain of $258.59 the past year after all expenses were paid.

The creamery had 235 patrons who in 1937 produced 212,240.5 pounds of cream which they delivered to the creamery here. From this the creamery manufactured 261,849 pounds of butter for which they received $83,456.54. The average net price paid for butterfat was 36.32 cents. The average net price received for all butter manafactured was 31.63 cents.

Mr. Lager, field man for this district of Land O'Lakes creameries spoke on the good business that this creamery had done the past year and also stated that through the management of Mr. Larson the patrons of this creamery could look forward to a good year again in 1938.

E. O. Waagedahl, chairman of the board of directors, presided at the annual meeting. T. B. Folden, who has served as director of the institution for 37 years was reelected as member of the board. The other directors elected were E. O. Waagedahl, reelected and J. P. Augustine, elected to take the place of F. D. Voth who wished to retire. Mr. Augustine retired at the meeting last year after serving 11 years and is now back again for another term on the board. The other members of the board are C. O. Johnson and O. H. Nohre.

Matters of important business taken up at this meeting were: shall the creamery continue to buy turkeys here on the pool basis. This matter when brought to a vote by the stockholders carried over in favor of the creamery going ahead with the buying for 1938 market next fall. Another matter brought up was whether or not the creamery here should handle the Minnesota line of farm machinery and repairs. When the votes on this was counted it showed that the farmers were not in favor of this business so the matter was dropped.

After the business of the meeting came to a close the Creamery gave free lunch to all those who attended the meeting. It was estimated that only about seventy people were present at the annual meeting this year.

Friberg Drafted For Senator

Farmer-Labor leaders from Marshall, Roseau and Kittson counties met at Karlstand on Thursday last week to disouss who they should run as a candidate for State Senator from the 67th Legislative district. Members of the Farmer-Labor County Committees from the three counties were in attendance at the parley.

It was definitely agreed on by this group that Eric Friberg, Representative in the Legislature from Roseau county will be the man to run for the Senate from this district. Mr. Friberg has served as representative in the Legislature for three terms from Roseau county and is well liked and qualified to be the State Senator for these three counties in the 67th district.

Senator Richard Rice of Alvarado, Marshall county, has made public a statement that he will not be a candidate for re-election this year. Mr. Rice states that he wishes to thank all his supporters and friends for their fine cooperation while he served in the Senate from this district.

Heavy Snow Fall Here Sunday

Last week the weather was both cold and mild. On Saturday it seemed to break for the warmer and late in the evening a light sleet set in over this area. Early Sunday morning at about 2 a. m. a light shower of rain fell here for a few minutes. This was followed immediately by a heavy snow fall. As a matter of fact, the heaviest snow that we have had here this winter. The snow kept falling until about 5 a. m. at which time it had cooled off considerably. Most of the side roads here are blocked for auto traffic for the rest of the winter. The main highway thru here was in a mess on Sunday morning and the State Highway crews were out to open them up before traffic could make any headway.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Sorum attended the Winter Shows at Crookston on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Christ Engen visited relatives in Middle River Monday.

Adolph Olberg of Middle River visited at the Mrs. C. Hagglund home Sunday.

Late News: Mr. W. Wentzlin Superintendent of the Warren Schools will speak at the Luther League program Sunday eve.

Buckler To Be Candidate Again

In an effort to stop rumors and reports circulating throughout the district that he would not be a candidate for re-election, United States Representative R. T. Buckler of Crookston has just announced that he expects to run again. In reply to a number of telegrams and letters which he has received at his office in Washington, D. C., Congressman Buckler has stated that he expected to be a candidate for re-election this year.

He further said that he was hopeful that his many friends and supporters throughout the district would join in giving him the District Farmer-Labor Convention endorsement. This convention will be held early in March at Plummer.

Mr. Buckler is now serving his second term in Congress having been elected by overwhelming majorities in the 1934 and 1936 elections.

Virgil Larson, 8 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Larson has been very ill with pneumonia the past week. Some time ago Virgil fell on the ice at the skating rink and bruised his shoulder and from this it appears that the illness set in.

Gov. Benson Spoke At Dinner

Governor Benson's speech at the dinner given in his honor last Saturday at the Minneapolis auditorium by the Minnesota Farmer-Labor association, which virtually marks the opening of the 1938 state campaign, can be interpreted as meaning that the Governor intends to go before the people on his record in office and on the record, if such it can be called, established by the Republican opposition in the Legislature. It means also that he will carry the fight to the opposition.

In other words, it will be a campaign, so far as he is concerned, on issues and programs. If the opposition attempts to make it a campaign of personalities, mudslinging, and throwing dust in the eyes of the voters, in an effort to escape concentration on issues and programs, the Governor will in all likelihood refuse to be drawn into such a campaign

Emergency Loans To Farmers

Emergency loans will again be available to farmers, the Farm Credit Administration announced in Washington this week. Officials said $34,000,000 would be made available at once from the remainder of last year's appropiation.

The figure is much smaller than that of former years and the result was a move in congress to add another $25.000,000.

Loans have been made each spring in recent years for purchase of seed and other necessities for putting in a crop. Heaviest demands were expected to come from the Dakotas, Montana and parts of Kansas, although many Minnesota farmers will stand in need of assistance.

No loans above $400 will be authorized this year, according to farm credit officials, and loans will be limited to farmers unable to borrow elsewhere. Interest rate will be 4 percent.

The program is calculated to supplement aid from the Farm Security Administration, which some months ago replaced the Resettlement Administration.

Minnesota lies in the area served by the St. Paul office of the Farm Credit Administration.

Martin Swenson Is Busy Man

Mrtin Swenson, local carpenter and contractor, has just returned from Newfolden where he has wound up the work on building a large warehouse 100x50 feet for the Smeby Hardware Co. Mr Swenson did a lot of construction work here last summer when he built a new blacksmith shop for Hilmer Erickson; a new house for Mrs. Ole Christianson; a new addition to the Dew Drop Inn for Jesse Sorum; a new barn for Albert Neilson and many other smaller jobs.

He is at the present time staying at the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. G. Swenson on their farm. He will, as soon as weather permits, start right out again with a lot of work in the spring.

Albert Knutson Accidently Killed

A very sad tragedy took place here at about two o'clock Sunday morning when Albert Knutson, better known as "Little Albert" a single man, was struck by an automobile and killed as he was walking home on the State Highway here in the village. Mr. Knutson has for the past few years been employed at the O. H. Nohro farm to which place he was returning that night after having spent the evening in town.

Arvin Nybo of Hoople, N. D. was here Saturday evening and was taking some young folks home from the dance when the accident happened. He had gone only a block and half north on the highway in town when his car struck Mr. Knutson. He was not driving fast as he still had his car, a model A Ford, in second gear.

Evidence from the car tracks and marks on the road showed that Mr. Knutson had been walking with the traffic on the wrong side of the road about two feet from the center line. He was struck in the head and back by the head light and horn on the left side of the car. According to the coroner his death was caused by a bad skull fracture from which he died immediately.

After the accident Sheriff O. C. Toftner and County Coronor Dr. Blegen of Warren were called but, on account of the heavy snow storm were unable to get here before about four o'clock in the morning. After they had taken the testimony of witnesses and the parties involved, the coroner stated that it was an accident and that no one would be held.

Funeral services were conducted here yesterday from the Free Mission church with Rev. Lundell of Thief River Falls officiating. Immediate relatives who attended were his brother Dedrick Knutson of Duluth and his sister Hannah Knutson of Minneapolis.

The Cardiff Giant

IN THE late sixties a Chicago tobacco dealer named George Hull heard a clergyman express the belief that men of gigantic stature once lived on earth. It gave him an idea. Out of a 12-foot block of stone he carved the figure of a man. It was a hard job to simulate pores in the skin but he managed to do it and after giving the stone man a bath in sulphuric acid and ink, he shipped it to the farm of his relative, William C. Newell, near Cardiff, N. Y. There it was buried for a year to "age" it properly.

Next Newell hired some of his neighbors to dig a well for him and behold! the well-diggers "discovered" the giant. Four doctors, called from town, examined it and agreed that it was the petrified remains of a prehistoric man. A Syracuse antiquarian declared it was a statue "probably made by early Jesuit missionaries" at least 300 years ago and offered Newell $10,000 for it. A professor of natural science at Rochester university examined it and wrote that "although not dating back to the Stone age, it is nevertheless deserving the attention of archeologists."

Within a short time the "Cardiff Giant" was one of the wonders of the modern world. Newell began charging people 50 cents each to see it, and business was so good that a group of Syracuse business men bought a three-quarters interest in it for $30,000. But such good fortune couldn't last always. A Yale professor examined it carefully, found tool marks on it and other evidence that it had not been buried long.

When it seemed that the hoax was about to be exposed, the giant was shipped to New York. But P. T. Barnum, who had failed in his efforts to buy it for his museum, suspecting that the giant was a hoax, had one of his own made and began exhibiting it. This led to public suspicion that Newell's discovery was also a fake and the Yale professor confirmed that belief. So the "Cardiff Giant" soon became just another "forgotten man."

The Drake Estate

FOR more than half a century the "Drake estate" legend has been used to defraud Americans of millions of dollars but so long as the "get rich quick" desire persists it will probably continue to harvest its crop of gold for swindlers.

The story they tell is that Sir Francis Drake, naval hero and freebooter of Queen Elizabeth's day, left an estate which, held in trust by the British government, is now estimated at 10 billion to 25 billion dollars. They claim that they have discovered a "lost heir" to this fortune and offer persons bearing the name Drake or descended from persons of that name an opportunity to contribute to a fund which will be used in establishing the "lost heir's" title. Once that is established, they promise that everyone who has contributed to the fund will be repaid a thousandfold.

The fact is that Drake was never married, so he did not leave any heirs. Moreover, when he died aboard his ship in 1595 his estate was a very small one and that was settled long, long ago. Yet despite these well-known facts and despite repeated warnings by both the British and the American governments against anyone investing in such a scheme, thousands of gullible persons have been victimized in the past and it's only a question of time until the hoary old legend will be revived and other suckers will be taken in by it.

Flight Over the Atlantic

NEARLY three-quarters of a century before Charles A. Lindbergh thrilled the whole world by flying across the Atlantic, that feat was accomplished—in the imagination of an American newspaper man. His name was Edgar Allen Poe (later famous as a poet) and in 1835 he had printed the first installment of a fanciful tale about a trip to the moon. However, Richard Adams Locke's "moon hoax" in the New York Sun had monopolized public attention, so Poe tore up the second installment of his story.

But in 1844 when he wrote an account of the crossing of the Atlantic by a group of men in three days in a balloon or flying machine called the Victoria, he found that the public was just as gullible as it had been nine years earlier. His yarn, also published in the New York Sun, captured the imagination of the public and there was a great demand for copies of that paper.

Even when Poe explained that his tale was imaginary, many people insisted upon believing it was true. Later Poe said, "If the Victoria did not absolutely accomplish the voyage recorded, it will be difficult to assign a reason why she should not have accomplished it." In view of developments in aviation which were to come within the next 75 years, Poe was not such a bad prophet!

For Washington's Birthday.

FEBRUARY 22 would not be completely celebrated if cherries were not featured in some way during the day. It is true that the story of the cherry tree and George Washington is more closely connected in the memory of many of us than his great prowess as the Father of our Country. We seem to take for granted his ability as a leader and talk about the cherry tree episode of his youth.

This recipe for cherry pie is made to use the entire contents of a No. 2 can of cherries, which holds 2½ cupfuls.

Cherry Pie.

1 No. 2 can Pitted Red Sour Cherries
6 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter

Line an 8-inch pie pan with pastry. Drain the cherries from the juice and place them in the pastry shell. Mix together sugar, cornstarch and salt and sprinkle over the cherries. Pour on the juice; dot with butter and cover with a thin top crust or with strips of pastry. Bake in a hot oven (475 degrees) for 12 minutes; reduce temperature to 425 degrees and continue baking for 45 minutes.

TIPS to Gardeners

The First Step

THE first step toward a successful garden is an early start. Spade or plow as soon as possible. If a handful of soil gripped firmly can be crumbled readily upon release, the soil is in condition to be worked.

It is important that fertilizer be used cautiously, advises Harold Coulter, vegetable expert of the Ferry Seed Institute. An excess is often harmful, particularly in growing fruits, such as tomatoes, cucumbers and peppers.

Garden preparation effort is wasted if you do not plant seeds from dependable sources. Select your favorite varieties from the nearby store before the supply is depleted, even though it is not yet time to plant. Make sure the seeds you buy are freshly packed.

Weather conditions permitting, it is advisable to spade into the soil some rotted manure, rotted leaves or lawn clippings, or rotted garden refuse. Clay soils are improved in texture by this treatment, and sandy soils are improved in water holding capacity.

An Interesting Border for a Braided Rag Rug.

AN OLD house sitting in the midst of old fields against a background of piney woods not so far from where the Pilgrims landed. The present occupant is just as interested in handwork and just as thrifty as all of her New England ancestors who have preceded her there. She still makes braided rag rugs from discarded garments and they harmonize perfectly with her lovely old furniture. One that she showed me was different than any I had ever seen. Here are all the dimensions and method of making it in case it is new to you, too, and you would like to make one like it.

The center oval part of this serviceable braided rag rug is 32 inches long and 16 inches wide with 6-inch scroll border all around. The scrolls are made in pairs from braided strips 2¾ yards long. These strips are braided tight so they are not more than ⅝ inch wide. The center of each strip is marked as shown here at A and the ends are then sewn around and around, working toward the center as at B. The pairs of scrolls are sewn together and also to the edge of the rug as indicated here at the lower right.

This kind of rug has infinite possibilities for color schemes. One seen had a blue center, a band of mixed color and then a wide band of red. The pairs of scrolls alternated red and blue.

Health hints for LIVESTOCK

New Livestock Dangers in Spread of Disease

Common Precautions Which Will Save Losses

—Prepared by American Foundation for Animal Health

Modern advantages on the farm bring disadvantages, too.

Take the case of modern transportation. The greatly increased movement of livestock has materially increased the danger of spreading infectious diseases among farm animals. Trucks may pick up stock at one farm and carry it non-stop to another farm 300 miles away. Infection on one farm may be transferred to the other so easily by the truck, the animals, or the men handling the stock.

This is especially true of hog cholera, because cholera exists in some parts of the country all the time, and also because the disease is so easily transferred. Great quantities of infective materials are given off by cholera sick hogs—materials which may harbor the virus of cholera for a long time after the death of the animals.

This is one reason why cholera is so easily spread. The shoes of farm hands, or the wheels of vehicles may pick up infective material on a farm where cholera has been present, and carry it to another farm. That is why it is dangerous to permit visitors to enter hog lots. For the same reason it is never wise for a swine owner to visit his neighbor's sick hogs. Livestock haulers should not be permitted to clean their trucks or remove litter from them on the farm. Rendering trucks, likewise, should be kept away from hog lots.

The exchange of boars or other breeding stock has been responsible for the spread of cholera in some cases.

With increasing outbreaks of cholera being reported this season, all farmers should take double precautions to protect their herds against this dread disease. The safest course is to have all hogs vaccinated by a graduate veterinarian, before an outbreak occurs. The only protection is prevention. And the surest prevention is vaccination.

NAVAL RACE IS PROBABLE

Japan's Refusal to Tell Plans Is Starting Gun . . . Great Battle in Central China. . New Regime Set Up in Roumania

Senator Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina is here pictured as he expounded his views on the farm bill. "Cotton Ed," who is chairman of the senate agricultural committee, said congress should provide a billion and a half to finance the farm program, instead of the half billion to which the cost is now limited.

Jap Refusal Starts Race

JAPAN having flatly refused to reveal her naval building plans, it is believed that the greatest navy construction race ever seen is about to start, and the United States may feel called upon to take the lead, with England, France and Japan in the competition. Our government told Japan that a refusal to divulge her intentions would be regarded as confirmation of reports that she was constructing or planning super-warships, so now, according to some officials in Washington, we will have to invoke the "escalator clause" of the London treaty and build larger and more powerfully armed battleships.

The President may be expected to order increase of the three battleships now planned from 35,000 tons each to 43,000 or 45,000 tons, and such dreadnaughts probably would carry 18-inch guns.

In order to obviate the restrictions on the size of battleships that inhere in the width of the Panama canal locks and to minimize the contingency of interruption of coast-to-coast communication through destruction of a Panama lock by an enemy, the administration is preparing to push the project of a canal through Nicaragua.

Congressmen who fear the President is piloting the nation into war with Japan made probably futile moves to prevent our government from joining in the rearmament race. Senator King of Utah and Representative Maverick of Texas introduced resolutions authorizing Mr. Roosevelt to call a world naval limitation conference, which Japan has said she would be willing to attend.

Though Secretary Hull had denied that there was any understanding with Great Britain and France concerning Japan, opponents of the administration were still suspicious that it was planning joint action. Representative George Tinkham of Massachusetts voiced their sentiments when he uttered a warning that "every day brings the United States nearer to a war with Japan as planned by Great Britain to further British interests."

This view was shared by the Tokyo press, which charged that the controversy was brought on by a secret naval understanding among America, Britain and France, and that the demand made on Japan was engineered by the British to involve the United States in difficulties with Japan.

Hearings by the house naval affairs committee on the President's big navy program went into the third week, with opposition dwindling as a result of Japan's unfavorable reply to the request for her intentions.

Singapore Base Opened

WITH impressive ceremonies Great Britain formally opened her powerful naval base at Singapore. Sir Shenton Thomas, governor of the Straits Settlements, dedicated the great new $55,000,000 drydock, declaring the naval base was not a challenge to war, but insurance against war.

Prominent among the carefully selected guests were Rear Admiral Julius Townsend and his officers of the American battle cruisers Trenton, Memphis and Milwaukee. The American squadron arrived at Singapore from Australia where it had been participating in ceremonies marking the one hundred fiftieth anniversary of the commonwealth.

Great Battle in China

ONE of the greatest battles ever fought was reported to be taking place in central China, where the Japanese invaders smashed a Chinese army of 15,000 and forced it to retreat across the Yellow river under fire and without bridges, which had been destroyed by the defenders. Five Japanese armies were driving southward through the rich central China agricultural region and were seriously threatening Kaifeng, capital of Honan province.

From the south, three Japanese armies were advancing from the Hwai river.

Gen. Chiang Kai-shek had 400,000 troops along the north and south fronts fighting to prevent the Japanese from gobbling up the huge Lunghai "corridor."

China's revitalized air force, with Russian and other foreign fliers reported among its personnel, was said to have bombed the Yellow river bridge at Lokow, north of Tsinan, which the Japanese only recently repaired. This cut the Japanese line of communication along the northern section of the Tientsin-Pukow railway.

Another Dictator State

Miron Cristea

RUMANIA is now added to the European states under dictatorship. Octavian Goga's government was so anti-Semitic and pro-Fascist that it was forced out, and King Carol took charge of affairs by naming Dr. Miron Cristea as premier and dissolving the parliament. Cristea, patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox church, was given virtual dictator power, but it was expected George Tartarescu would very soon succeed him as premier and that Carol would create a crown council over which Dr. Cristea would preside. Much of the new government's authority was concentrated in the army, and a nation-wide state of siege was proclaimed. A commission was set to work formulating a new constitution.

Cristea, the key man of the government, was expected to take steps to regain the friendship of France and Great Britain, traditional allies of Rumania, without offending Italy and Germany.

Franco Masses Huge Army

Gen. Franco

DISPATCHES from Salamanca, headquarters of the Spanish rebels, said General Franco was getting together an army of a million men and planned a spring offensive that would end the bloody civil war. Military observers believed his main effort would be directed toward a drive to the Mediterranean coast from the south Aragon front above Teruel. This would effectually divide the territory now held by the government.

It may be that Franco will lose his Italian "volunteers," for London had a rumor that the British cabinet was considering a secret agreement with Mussolini by which Britain would recognize the Duce's conquest of Ethiopia if he would withdraw his troops from Spain.

More for Dole Asked

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in a special message asked congress to appropriate $250,000,000 more for relief to supplement the billion and a half relief fund. He said this was necessary to care for three million persons thrown out of work during the last three months.

A bill to carry out the President's suggestions was introduced in the house immediately and speeded toward passage.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

If You Are Making a Crazy Patch Quilt.

MAKING an old fashioned silk crazy patch quilt is a simply fascinating thing to do. From the moment you start collecting bits of silk and satin and velvet until the second you invent your last combination of embroidery stitches it holds your interest.

This type of quilt is not quilted after piecing, but tied like a comforter. No padding is needed if soft warm material is used for the foundation. The pieces are always in irregular shapes—often very tiny and the largest is seldom more than four or five inches long. They are pinned or basted to a foundation of soft muslin, flannel or an old wool blanket is good to use. One patch shown here is a piece of ribbon and the selvages are not turned or covered. It is best to arrange a number of patches before you start to sew them in place with the embroidery stitches.

The embroidery is really used to give balance and unity to the whole design. If a patch seems too light make it darker by embroidering it in dark thread. If it seems too plain you can trace the little forget-me-not design shown here onto it and embroider it in natural colors or use some of the more simple designs shown here as fillers.

Many more authentic old patchwork stitches are in a new leaflet which is now included with the book offered herewith. This book also tells you how the draperies in today's sketch are interlined.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; curtains for every type of room; lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents (coins preferred) to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Progress Ignores Doubters

Railroads were opposed because people said they would startle people and cause premature births among women, cattle and hogs; cause cows to cease giving milk, and stop hens from laying. Automobiles went through the same barrage of opposition. Airplanes are still looked upon with suspicion by the older generation.

Favorite Recipe of the Week

For Winter Meals.

SCALLOPED dishes are favorites for cold weather because it is a pleasure to use the oven, and because the blended flavor of foods makes such delicious finished products. The tartness of tomatoes complements most any meat that is being served, and while there are almost unlimited ways of making the dish, you may enjoy trying the following recipe:

Scalloped Tomatoes.

|---|---|
| 1 No. 2½ can tomatoes | 1 tbsp. sugar |
| 1 tbsp. minced onion | 2 cups bread crumbs |
| 1 tsp. salt | 4 tbsp. butter |

Combine the tomatoes with the onion and arrange a layer in a baking dish. Mix the salt and sugar with the bread crumbs and blend with melted butter. Place a layer of crumbs over the tomatoes, add another layer of tomatoes, crumbs, and so on until the dish is filled and ingredients used. Leave crumbs on top. Bake about 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees).

If you happen to have some sweet cucumber pickles on hand, slice two or three and add them to the above ingredients.

Three Frocks—a Wardrobe

IF YOU want to be all set for a full and gay Spring, have these three dresses in your wardrobe. Something for morning, something for street and a lovely frock for afternoon parties. All three are easy to make. And you can have the complete group for a fraction of what you would usually spend, if you make them at home.

Shirtwaist Style.

Trim and tailored, this is the favorite silhouette for Spring. The skirt with kick pleat back and front is fun to wear, very comfortable for walking and going about your daily work. Note the yoke top and inverted pleat in back of bodice to permit perfect freedom. It is a grand spectator sports dress and will make up beautifully in silk crepe, rayon print or cotton fabrics.

Princess for Morning.

You'll feel sweet as sixteen in this pretty square-necked princess dress with fitted lines. The silhouette is molded and slim. Note the pretty sleeves, puffed high, to make the waistline look even smaller. Choose a pretty cotton print or one of the new rayons to make a dress as charming as the one shown. You'll find the pattern complete with sew chart telling you exactly how to proceed.

Fitted Lines for Afternoon.

Look lovely and picturesque in this frock on molded lines with uplift at the waist and soft shirring in front of bodice. The roll collar and low V neckline is very slenderizing. You'll enjoy the good lines, the flattery of this dress and its grand wearability. Whether it is a luncheon for six or a dinner at eight, you'll be correctly dressed in this frock.

The Patterns.

1976 is designed for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 34 requires 4¼ yards of 35-inch fabric.

1452 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 16 requires 4⅝ yards of 39-inch fabric.

1451 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 5⅜ yards of 39-inch fabric. For collar in contrast ⅔ yard.

Real Steam

It is possible to light a cigarette with steam. This was demonstrated by Dr. Andrade of the Royal Institution of London, who produced high pressure steam hot enough to set fire to a match or a cigarette. The steam which escapes from a tea kettle is not really steam. It has ceased to be steam since it has condensed to tiny drops of liquid water. Water steam is invisible gas.

TIPS to Gardeners

Know Your Soil

A GARDENER who knows the quality and texture of his soil can get maximum returns from his garden.

Clayey soils require careful handling, but are productive. Sandy soils are early. Sandy loams are just about ideal for most home garden crops.

Peas, lettuce, cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower, beets, carrots, radish and onion like moderately cool, moist conditions during development. Plant them early so they will develop before the extreme heat of summer arrives.

Plant them again later, timing the planting so they will mature during the cool, moist fall months.

Sweet corn, beans, tomato, pepper, egg plant, cucumber, melons, squash and pumpkin are not as hardy as those listed above and prefer plenty of heat, sunlight and ample moisture for best development.

They should be planted later than peas, lettuce and carrots, so as to come into maturity during the warmest weeks of summer.

Tars Training for Battle

Gas-masked pupils shown during a six-inch gun drill aboard H. M. S. Calcutta at Chatham as part of the training of Britain's newly recruited naval personnel. Shortage of shore training establishments because of the size of the rearmament, has made it necessary to use ships at sea for training British tars instead of the customary land stations. With the construction of new battleships, cruisers, destroyers and aircraft carriers, the personnel of the British navy has been considerably increased, putting a strain on the facilities for training the new recruits.

One of them, at least, didn't make a hit with Mr. Lewis. It's the one he is shown holding—and disliking.

Health hints for LIVESTOCK

NEW DISEASE IS THREAT TO SWINE

—Prepared by American Foundation for Animal Health

Another new and serious livestock disease has recently been recognized in this country, and American farmers will do well to be on their guard against it.

This disease is the virulent form of Swine Erysipelas. For many years it has been well-known in European and South American countries. In fact, Swine Erycipelas has outranked Hog Cholera in Europe in the destruction of swine. Knowing the deadliness of cholera, American farmers can judge from this fact the seriousness of this newer disease, and the ravages it might cause, if it were allowed to make headway.

There has been a mild or chronic form of swine erysipelas in this country for a long time. But the killing form of the disease has now appeared in recent years in widely separated parts of the country. A most confusing fact is that, in some forms of the disease, the symptoms and tissue changes are very similar to those of hog cholera. The animals run a temperature, lose appetite, sometimes have difficulty in moving about, and separate themselves from the herd.

Satisfactory control of the disease is possible when proper measures are promptly employed but, in many untreated herds, the losses have been very serious.

Another fact which swine raisers should note is man's susceptibility to the same germ which causes swine erysipelas. Handling swine affected with the disease, or products of swine which have the disease, may result in a person contracting it, with serious consequences.

The only safe course, where swine show evidences of any of the above symptoms, is to call a veterinarian for immediate and accurate diagnosis and treatment.

The similarity between swine erysipelas and hog cholera symptoms is very close, and delay in proper diagnosis may result in a heavy loss. Cholera of course, can be prevented by vaccination. The safest precaution is to have hogs immunized against cholera, and to procure a quick, accurate diagnosis of any herd disease affecting swine.

Foxes Carry Scents

Foxes carry powerful scents on their bodies, an advantage in some cases but a danger in others for they leave a tell-tale trail that can be picked up by any dog. The scent also tells other foxes of its whereabouts, and mate can follow mate, no matter how great the distance.

The Safety Man

The following poem, entitled "The Motorists's Prayer," which appeared in the London Church Times, is an expression of the earnest desire one motorist has to guard the lives and safety of his fellowmen. If all of us who drive took this problem as seriously, there would be a decided decrease in the number of automobile fatalities.

Grant me a steady hand and watchful eye,
That no man shall be hurt when
I pass by.
Thou gavest life, and I pray no act of mine
May take away or mar that gift of thine.
Shelter those, dear Lord, who bear me company
From the evils of fire and all calamity.
Teach me to use my car for others' need,
Nor miss through love of speed.
The beauties of thy world; and thus I may,
With joy and courtesy go my way.

The modern, heavy-tonnage freight train had its origin in the evolution of the "Iron Horse"—bigger, more powerful, faster. But it also required better roadbeds, heavier rails, stronger bridges and longer sidings. The picture shows the Great Northern's first locomotive alongside of one of the modern engines.

It Can Happen Again

Of the many disasters that can befall a farmer, a car shortage, or an embargo perhaps cap the list. For if he raises a good crop and prices are up, the crowning misfortune is to be unable to ship it.

It has happened before. Elevators glutted. Warehouses bulging. Crops piled up in fields. Losses amounting to more than the cost of transportation.

Of course, that was a long time ago. With the increased efficiency of the railroads—mostly a matter of long, fast trains—you have taken it for granted that it could not happen again.

But it will happen again if Congress passes the proposed law to limit the length of freight trains to 70 cars.

Your crops, for the most part, move to distant markets over one-lane roadways—single track railroads. Trains have to meet and pass at sidings. The more trains, the more "meets," and the more delays.

Remember too that most of the crops in the territory served by the Great Northern ripen at about the same time. This results in a traffic peak each fall, when the railroad's main lines are taxed to capacity. Take for example, wheat. The Great Northern moved 45,000 carloads last year. One-fourth of this was loaded out in two weeks.

Most of the crops—last year, 145,000 carloads—were moved in trains of about 125 cars after reaching the main line. Empty cars—about 100,000—were returned in trains of similar size.

To have moved all of the Great Northern's traffic last year on 70-car trains would have required 22,000 additional trains. It would have been physically impossible to have moved last year's crops over the Great Northern's main line within the time shippers wanted their products moved.

Instead of your having the dependable transportation you are accustomed to, you could not have depended on anything between late August and sometime after the first of the year. That is what the Train Length Limit law will do to you.

The Train Length Limit bill—the real purpose of which is to create more jobs for trainmen—already has been passed by the Senate. It is now before the House of Representatives.

Unless you are willing to go back to the days of car shortages and embargoes, you will do well to find out how your Congressman stands.

It has happened before. It can happen again.

Leagu To Meet At Holt

The Eastern Marshall County Protective Association is strengthening its organization to protect the homes, farms, business and health of the residents of this section of the county. Conditions prevailing last summer must not be forced upon us again. We are entitled to the full protection of our constitution and laws against man made evils.

Drainage has made other large sections of the Red River Valley too and the Thief River watershed is entitled to equal consideration. This area always prospered most when the weather was "on the dry side". Damming the natural and artificial drainage systems will bring ruin and desolation to this last frontier where dairying, sheep raising, grass seed production and turkey farming have been coming to the front, where rain fall is plentiful, good water and cheap fuel is present, good markets are close by. Conditions favoring deer also favor cattle; but those favoring the nesting and breeding of wild waterfowl will not favor the development of sleek herds and flocks or sustain our creameries or bring much money into our communities. Ducks and geese will devour the crops of farmers near the reserves; they know no lines between public and private lands. Mosquitos likewise can be carried by the winds far from their breeding grounds.

There remains a large farming territory tributary to Middle River and Holt that will be affected by these projects hostile to our welfare. No self respecting people should be expected to tolerate such an immoderate program of swamp conservationists.

We must put the heat under the enemy, bring pressure on our public officials and pool our interests in a court case if necessary. The meeting will be held at the Community Hall in Holt on Wednesday afternoon, March 9th, 1938, commencing at 1:00 o'clock. Come prepared to listen, express yourself and cooperate. Towns west of the Thief river should elect men to serve with the other directors of the association. We have organized to fight while we have strength. "Each for all; all for each".

A. C. McMillan, Pres.
Ole Eastby, Secretary.

Benson Fights For Project

The United States Department of Agriculture not only recommend a WPA weed eradication project for Minnesota farmers, which State Public Works Administrator Victor Christgau rejected, but hold such a project as desirable.

This was revealed this week by Governor Benson, who made public a letter from Paul H. Appleby, assistant to Secretary of Agriculture Henry A Wallace.

"The Appleby letter," Governor Benson said, "exposes Victor Christgau's duplicity in diapproving a WPA weed eradication project for Minnesota Farmers. His 'objections' to the state project are thus completely exploded by the United States Department of Agriculture, behind which he has tried to hide. Mr. Christgau is unable to pass the buck for knifing the project which, unlike most WPA projects, is for the direct benefit to agriculture and to the farmers of this state."

Christgau, the Governor charged, used a ruse to defeat the project the excuse that the U. S. Department of Agriculture specializes in weed eradication. Appleby declared that the Chrisgau statement to that effect is not correct, that the Department conducts "research" in the field of weed eradication but does not engage in any "action" program. Christgau was aware of that fact at the time he rejected the project, Gov. Benson alleges.

The Governor stated that the fight for a WPA weed eradication program for Minnesota farmers is far from over and that he had confidence in its ultimate approval by Washington regardless of Crhistgau's effort to block it.

The Appleby letter in part reads: "If WPA projects for weed eradication in the State of Minnesota shonld be referred to us by the Works Progress Administration for our judgement as to their desirability, this Department would take the same position as was taken in connection with similar projects in the State of Utah, already approved by the Works Progress Administration.

"In the case of the Utah project, Under Secretary Wilson wrote Mr. Harry Hopkins that 'these projects do not parallel or duplicate or interfere in any way with any work being carried on by the Department, either by use of emergency funds or regular appropriations, and there is no objection by the Department to the aprroval of these projects, and from the Departments viewpoint their approval would be desirable."

Appleby also denied Christgau's claim that a WPA weed eradication program would necessitate the hiring of qualified supervisory personell paralleling the employes of the United States Department of Agriculture declaring, "such co-operation as they would be in a position to give, and as we would wish them to give, they can give to a project administered by the Works Progress Administration."

"Our preference," the Appleby letter concludes, "therefore, is definitely for state or local sponsorship if weed eradication projects are to be undertaken at the present time."

Governor Benson, it is known, has appealed direct to Washington to get approval of the project.

Minnesota's delegation to Congress this week also became active and have gone to the front to get the project approved, over Christgau's head.

Scouters Given Big Banquet

Mothers and fathers of the local Boy Scouts gave the Scouts and their scoutmaster and assistant scoutmaster a banquet on Friday evening. About sixty people were in attendance at the banquet which was held at the Nazareth Lutheran church parlors.

Many fine banquets have been held here but this one was one of the most sociable affairs that has been held in Holt for some time. The committee in charge of arrangements had decorated the tables with twigs of high bush cranberries and wild seed pods picked in the woods here, and with rocks and pinecones from the western states from the collection owned by H. O. Hanson.

A large table set in a horseshoe shape was set for the banquet so that all the guests could be seated at one time. Mrs. Sam Lorentson was the toastmaster of the evening. Speakers on the program were: Rev. T. C. L. Hanson who spoke on the better understanding between the young people and their parents; Milton Hanson, Boy Scout, who gave a paper on the activities of the local scout troop since it was organized; G. W. Karvonen, Supt. of the Holt School who is president of the Men's Club, gave a fine talk on the scout laws and the progress of the scout work here; H. O. Hanson, vice-chairman of the Thief River Falls District of the Boy Scout Committee, gave an outline of the National set-up of the Boy Scouts, and who also told of the gathering of the Boy Scouts of this country had at the National Jamboree at Washington, D. C. and at the World Jamboree in Holland last summer.

Mrs. Alfred Anderson gave a talk to the scouts on the value of their learning in cooking and self care in scout work.

Mrs. T. C. L. Hanson sang a solo and Lewis and Raymond Sagstuen gave a musical number. Glenn Carlson of Argyle, who was here with his parents Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Carlson, showed several reels of moving pictures taken on outings last summer and which included scenes of the Boy Scouts from here at their Lake Tuluby camp last summer and the picnic of the Holt School last spring as well as many other scenes around Holt.

At the close of the program Mr. Hartley Peterson, scoutmaster, was presented with a cash purse from the gathering in appreciation for the work he is doing here with the local troop.

Historic Hoaxes

Horrors of the Drouth

DURING the great drouth of 1936 an enterprising photographer sold to news picture companies three "views from the drouth area of North Dakota" which were printed in newspapers all over the country. One showed the water in the Missouri river near Stanton so low that automobiles could ford the "Big Muddy" without difficulty; another depicted "a herd of cattle from the drouth area contentedly grazing on the state capitol grounds at Bismarck"; and a third, the whitened skull of a steer lying on a bare spot of pasture that had been parched and cracked by the heat.

Widespread publication of these pictures caused great indignation throughout North Dakota because its citizens knew that they were gross exaggerations. One of the leading papers of the state, the Fargo Forum, exposed the hoax by reprinting the pictures labeled "It's a Fake."

Along with the Missouri river picture was printed one showing a Stanton ferry crossing the stream which, it declared, was 15 feet deep at that place. The second was labeled "a photographic trick—superimposing a picture of a herd of cattle on a picture of the North Dakota capitol building. Where those cows are presumably grazing is a graveled parking lot at the rear of the state capitol, thickly dotted with cars at all hours of the day." As for the steer's skull it was called a "movable 'prop' which comes in handy for photographers who want to touch up their pictures with a bit of the grisly" and it was pointed out that it was "a typical alkali flat, left when melting snow water and spring rains have passed. Without difficulty, one can find these in Maryland, Pennsylvania, Indiana, wherever one chooses."

The Floating Cabaret

BACK in 1924 the New York Herald Tribune printed a story which sent the United States coast guard on a wild goose chase all up and down the Atlantic seaboard. It was in the days of prohibition and this story described a 17,000-ton "floating cabaret" with an old-fashioned American bar, a ballroom, a jazz band and beautiful chorus girls—all provided for the entertainment of wealthy New Yorkers who visited this "joy spot" every night.

The story had been turned in by a young reporter named Sanford Jarrell who claimed that he had been an eye-witness of the merry-making going on there. Then Jarrell was sent out to get more details of the illicit bar. But instead of coming back with one, he sent back a signed confession that it was all a hoax. He had concocted the yarn to win the attention of his city editor. So copies of his confession, with the Herald-Tribune's apologies for being the unwitting perpetrator of the hoax, were sent to all the other New York papers which had been playing up the story, based upon Jarrell's "revelations."

However, a movie company which was just about to release a new picture called "Wine" capitalized on the excitement over this story. It placed an advertisement in all the papers in the form of a letter signed by "the captain of the 12-mile limit cafe" and advised readers to go to the manager of your favorite picture theater and whisper "show me Wine." He will do the rest. A great many did—and he did; thereby increasing box office receipts materially.

The Iron Maiden

FOR many years Nuremberg, Germany, was famous all over the world for a relic that was considered the most terrible instrument of torture ever devised by man. It was called the "Iron Maiden," a huge iron box, in the form of a cloaked and hooded woman, with hinged sides. Inside was an ingenious arrangement of razor-sharp projections so placed that, when a complicated clockwork slowly closed the doors upon the unfortunate prisoner, his eyes, heart and other vital organs were pierced.

According to tradition, more than one witch died a horrible death within the embrace of the "Iron Maiden" and the sight of it caused many a shudder when this and other sinister examples of medieval cruelty from the notorious tower of Nuremberg were taken on a tour and exhibited in the leading cities of the world. In 1931, however, the "Iron Maiden" was exposed as a hoax by Fraulein Hildegard Kartner, who announced that this instrument of torture did not date from medieval times, nor had anyone ever been killed in it. Instead, the "Iron Maiden" was the invention of her great-uncle, an antiquarian who had constructed it back in 1867 to satisfy an apparent public taste for "horror relics" and who had made up an appropriate story to go with it.

What Is Proper Use of Furniture Polish?

In a recent investigation, it was proven that many, many homemakers use furniture polish incorrectly—pouring it on a dry cloth, for application to the furniture! This is a gross waste of the housewife's time, energy and her polish! And the latter is usually blamed. We refer, of course, to oil polish—for this type is best to clean, beautify and preserve the furniture. The best oil polish is not greasy, because it's made with a fine, light-oil base. The polish should be applied on a damp cloth—thoroughly moistened with water, then wrung out. Saturate this cloth with the polish—spread on—and rub lightly. The "wet" of the cloth smoothly distributes the polish—and the finish absorbs, receives it evenly! This correct procedure takes the "labor" out of polishing—and requires far less tiresome rubbing! A dry cloth is then used to easily work up the glow, which is even and uniform—the desired effect! This—and only this—is the proper way to use a good oil polish!

MORE WOMEN USE O-CEDAR POLISH THAN ANY OTHER KIND!

. . . because O-Cedar not only cleans as it polishes, but preserves your furniture—"feeds" the finish, prevents drying-out, cracking. Insist upon O-Cedar Polish, for furniture, woodwork and floors (with the famous O-Cedar Mop).

HOW to SEW

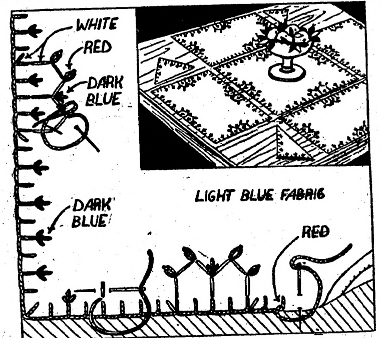
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



WE HAVE been hearing a good deal about American handcrafts lately. Of course, quilts have always been important among our needlework handcrafts. So many readers have written asking me for more of the old fashioned embroidery stitches that were used in making crazy patchwork that I have collected dozens and dozens of these quaint stitches from old quilts. Some of them are so attractive and colorful that it seemed a pity not to use them for modern decorative purposes.

This gay little double house effect built upon blanket stitches with chain stitches flaunting from all gables was the invention of someone's great-grandmother and I couldn't resist using it for a luncheon set of light blue linen. It originally adorned a light blue satin patch in a quilt and all the other colors indicated here in the sketch are the original colors.

All the strands of six-strand mercerized embroidery thread were used for the luncheon set. The mats were hemmed first and then the blanket stitches were taken through the hems to make a firm edge as shown at the lower right. All the other stitches used are clearly illustrated. Just the edge stitches without the little houses were used for the napkins. Many more authentic old patchwork stitches are illustrated in a new leaflet which is free upon request with the booklet offered herewith.

Have you a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book SEWING? It contains forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; curtains for every type of room; lampshades, rugs and other useful articles for the home. Copy will be sent postpaid, upon receipt of 25 cents (coins preferred). Address Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

TIPS to Gardeners

Grow Better Flowers

GROW better flowers by planting them in the kind of soil in which they can perform best. Though your soil may be good and rich, certain flowers will not do as well in it as in poorer ground.

In rich soil plant zinnia, petunia, portulaca, snapdragon, stock, heliotrope, marigold and salvia.

Nasturtium, love-lies-bleeding, Joseph's coat, celosia, alyssum, California poppy, calendula, love-in-a-mist and hollyhock are suggested by the Ferry Seed Institute for growth in poor soil.

Heavy soil containing clay is good for sweet peas, pansies, stocks, carnations, scabiosas, snapdragons and most of the popular perennials.

The following prefer a soil of light texture:

Petunia, Portulaca, celosia, hollyhock, love-in-a-mist, annual phlox, calliopsis, nicotiana and all the climbers.

In garden plots that are partially shaded grow calendula, balsam, mignonette, pansy and vinca.

Unwelcome, Perhaps, But Insulted—Never!

The young man had been overjoyed at getting a job as commercial traveler, but after a week he began to feel rather fed up.

"Badly," was the reply. "I have been insulted at every place I have visited."

"That's strange," was the reply. "I've been on the road 40 years. I have had my samples flung into the street. I have been taken by the scruff of the neck and hurled downstairs, and I don't deny that I have been rolled in the gutter. But insulted—never in all my years of experience have I been insulted!"

FUEHRER STIRS EUROPE

Demands Colonies, Threatens Czechs and Says Germany Doesn't Fear War . . . Anthony Eden Resigns

Chancellor Hitler delivering the sensational speech in which he defied the world, declaring Germany was not afraid of war. Above him is seen General Goering. This is a radiophoto from Berlin.

Hitler Defies the World

POLITICAL turmoil spread over Europe after Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, in an address to the reichstag, declared his intention to make Germany one of the most powerful nations in the world, gave warning that it was re-arming and did not fear war though it desired peace, and demanded the return of Germany's lost colonies. Furthermore, Hitler upheld the aggressive actions of Italy and Japan, and asserted that Germany would not tolerate ultimate victory of the loyalist faction in Spain over Franco's rebel forces.

Adolf Hitler

The Fuehrer told with gratification of his success in compelling Chancellor Schuschnigg to give the Austrian Nazis representation in his cabinet and to permit them to act as a political party. He gave no assurance that the independence of Austria would be preserved. He openly threatened similar action against Czechoslovakia unless the Germans in that country were granted "political liberty."

Hitler's speech might be summarized as a declaration that Germany will ignore Great Britain, France and other western powers in carrying out her international policies, will continue her efforts to destroy the last vestiges of the general settlements which followed the World war; will insist that the "have not" nations must be restored to a basis of equality with the "have" powers, and is prepared to defy any combination of powers which may be formed against her.

Here are some of the other things Hitler told the reichstag:

Germany refuses to accept "credits or other promises" in substitution for the colonies taken from her by the treaty of Versailles.

Reports of dissension between the Nazi hierarchy and the Reichswehr are "nonsense" and in his new role as supreme commander of the Reich's armed forces he has decided to "strengthen the army to prevent the menace of war."

Germany's relations with Great Britain can not be improved so long as British statesmen and newspapers attempt to meddle with what the Reich regards as its own internal affairs.

Germany has no intention of returning to the League of Nations.

Halifax Succeeds Eden

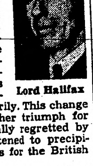
REFUSING to go along with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain in his plans to "buy" a friendly settlement with Germany and Italy, Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary who has fought the ambitions of European dictators for two years, resigned from the cabinet. With him went Viscount Cranborn, the principal foreign undersecretary. Viscount Halifax was appointed to succeed Eden temporarily. This change was in effect another triumph for Hitler, was especially regretted by France, and threatened to precipitate a serious crisis for the British government.



Lord Halifax

Viscount Halifax, lord president of the council and former viceroy of India, is a personal friend of Hitler and an insistent advocate of immediate friendship with Germany and Italy, even at the cost of great concessions by Britain. He was sent to Berlin not long ago to talk over matters with the Nazi leaders.

Eden told the house of commons that he had resigned rather than deal with Italy in the face of Premier Mussolini's "rife, hostile propaganda" against Britain and Il Duce's "glorification" of victories in Spain.

Chamberlain boldly told the house of commons that his government would begin negotiations with Italy at once in hopes of obtaining a friendly settlement. He put forward a four-power peace plan designed to eliminate the dangers of war in Europe. As members of the pact, he advocated Germany, Italy, France, and Britain.

Chamberlain went to Buckingham palace and gave King George his account of the events leading up to Eden's resignation, and then summoned Dino Grandi, Italian ambassador, to a conference. With them were Halifax and Sir Alexander Cadogan, permanent undersecretary for foreign affairs. It was learned that the break between Chamberlain and Eden came to a climax a few days before when Grandi and the prime minister had a conference concerning the basis on which negotiations might be opened for a general understanding between London and Rome. Some British leaders feel that agreement with Mussolini for Mediterranean security would give Britain a stronger hand in dealing with Germany on the question of colonies.

French Worried

PREMIER CHAUTEMPS and other high French officials saw, in Hitler's words concerning German minorities in other lands a definite threat against Czechoslovakia, a military ally of France, whose security the French are bound to defend. There are about 3,000,000 Germans in that country.

From Prague, the Czech capital, came word that Czechoslovakia would not even negotiate with Germany regarding autonomy for those Germans and would not yield to coercion as did Austria. Officials said that if negotiations are Hitler's aim, they would be regarded as "infringement of Czechoslovakia's sovereignty, and therefore not acceptable."

As for the prospective British-Italian agreement, the French government was fearful that Chamberlain's overtures to Mussolini would take a course that France could not follow without risk of alienating its own Socialist and Communist elements. The government, however, was determined to keep unbroken its close relations with Britain.

For Price Increases

BEFORE going to Hyde Park for a short vacation, President Roosevelt announced two moves designed to restore prosperity. He declared the administration's economic policies are being directed toward a limited increase in prices, to be achieved without inflation or any substantial increase in the cost of living.

He ordered the Reconstruction Finance corporation to renew its lending to industry and the railways.

The President specifically mentioned farm prices as needing to be increased. On the other hand, he said certain other prices, such as those in the building industry, have remained at a high level for the last few years.

No specific monetary action is contemplated to increase those considered too low, he added.

Earle Wants Toga

GOV. GEORGE H. EARLE of Pennsylvania announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States senator, standing on his record as governor and continued support of the Roosevelt administration.

"If elected a member of the senate, I shall continue my services on behalf of the principles which have marked the Roosevelt administration and my own administration in Harrisburg," Earle said.

Favorite Recipe of the Week

PIMIENTO BISQUE

THE soup described below is delicious. It has a delectable flavor and the rich color of the pimientoes gives just the desired red touch to the finished product.

1 can cream of celery soup
1 cup milk
3 pimientoes
1 tsp. salt
2 slices of onion
⅛ tsp. paprika

If canned condensed soup is used, prepare according to directions on the label and then add 1 cup of milk. If canned ready-to-serve cream of celery soup is used, pour the contents into a pan and add the cup of milk. Rub the pimientoes through a sieve and add to the soup. Add salt, onion and paprika and heat until the soup is hot. Stir frequently to prevent scorching. Remove the onion before serving. Serves 6.

The food with red color in the main course might be a ring mold made with canned beets.

The red color for the dessert might be supplied by a raspberry gelatin made with a can of red raspberries.

Safetygrams
BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

No illness is taken less seriously nor neglected so often as a common cold. Strange, too, when one consideres how many serious illnesses are often directly attributable to a cold. At the very first sign of a cold, proper care should be taken.

The wise thing to do, of course is to follow a few simple rules of health so that the body can build up the resistance necessary to ward off colds entirely. A few of them are:

1. Eat sensibly. Include plenty of milk, fresh fruits, and vegetables in your diet.
2. Get sufficient rest.
3. Keep kidneys and bowels in good working order.
4. Drink at least six glasses of water a day.
5. Keep your fest dry - wear your rubbers.
6. Keep away from persons with a cold.

Annual Weed Meeting Called

The annual weed meeting for East Marshall county, called by Chas. Ommodt, state commissioner of agriculture, will be held at 1:30 p. m. Monday. March 21 in Middle River Village Hall word from the state office revealed today.

This meeting is called each year so township chairmen, county officers, municipal chief executives and others interested in the weed problem can get together and talk over the state weed and seed laws, latest eradication methods, spread of weeds and other points connected with the problem.

"The seriousness of the state's weed situation can not be over-estimated," Commissioner Ommodt said. "Governor Benson is actively supporting the department's control program and fostering the 'Minnesota Plan for Cooperative Weed Control and Eradication.' This plan will be among those discussed at the meeting.

"A demonstration of the seriousness of the state's weed problem was the data drawn by our experts which showed that a fairly accurate estimate of Minnesota weed losses during 1937 reached $36,500,000!"

Among the losses listed by the commissioner were direct curtailment of production and fertility through weeds in crops, reduction of dairy returns through tainting of milk from weeds like Frenchweed, injury to animals and dockage on seed.

"Reducing these losses is one of the state's major problems today," Ommodt continued. "The annual weed meetings give the best possible start to each year's weed work by bringing together those responsible for carrying out the work on a statewide, countrywide and township wide basis. In addition, the department customarily invites all other persons interested in weeds to attend the meeting so that local phases of the problem can completely covered and the best cooperation built up for the years work."

State inspectors in charge of the meeting are W. J. Cleary, State Weed Inspector, and Jens Anderson.

Safetygrams
BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Not long ago I saw an editorial in the Baltimore Sun on drunken driving, from which I want to quote a paragraph:

"Nobody has ever been hanged for one of these affairs, although some of them were just as much murder as if the victim had been shot from ambush. When a fool gets blind drunk and sends a 5000 pound motor car hurtling through the streets at fifty miles an hour, any killing he does is not an accident - - it is cold blooded first degree murder. If justice prevailed the driver's neck would be broken by the common hangman."

That's pretty tough, but stop and think a moment what chance anybody has on the road, in an automobile or on foot, against a terrific speed of fifty or sixty miles an hour governed only by a man whose judgement is blurred and practically obliterated by liquor.

I will leave the answer with you.

Crop-Feed Loams Available

Applications for emergency crop and feed loans for 1938 are now being received at County Agents Office at Warren, Minn., by Oscar T. Johnson, Field Supervisor of the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Section of the Farm Credit Administration.

The loans will be made, as in the past, only to farmers who cannot obtain credit from any other source. The money loaned will be limited to the farmer's immediate and actual cash needs for growing his 1938 crops or for the purchase of feed for livestock, and the amount which may be loaned to any one farmer in 1938 may not exceed $400.00.

Farmers who can obtain the funds they need from an individual, production credit association, bank, or other concerns are not eligible for crop and feed loans from the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Section of the Farm Credit Administration, formerly known as the Resettlement Administration.

As in the past, farmers who obtain emergency crop and feed loans will give as security a first lien on the crop financed, or a first lien on the livestock to be fed if the money borrowed is to be used to produce or purchase feed for livestock.

Where loans are made to tenants, the landlords, or others having an interest in the crops financed or livestock to be fed, are required to waive their claims in favor of a lien to the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration until the loan is repaid.

Checks in payment of approved loans will be mailed from the Regional Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Office at St. Paul, Minnesota.

PACIFIC FIR GOES TO NEW YORK FAIR

NEW YORK (Special).—"Good old Douglas fir" from the Pacific Northwest will provide the foundations for the most spectacular of wonders at the New York World's Fair of 1939.

This was learned when the Fair Corporation offices in the Empire State building announced the purchase of more than $100,000 worth of fir pilings from the National Pole Treating Company. This particular lot of fir sticks will be driven into the ash fill of the 1216½-acre exposition site to guarantee the support of the two unique structures forming the Theme Centre of the "Nation's Fair." These are the 200-foot Perisphere, a globe seemingly supported on the waters of fountains, and the Trylon, a 700-foot triangular needle or beacon and broadcasting tower.

Shipments of the 1260 sticks, 95 to 99 feet in length, are taking place this month, after creosote treatment has been accorded them either at the National Pole and Treating Company's plant at Hillyard, Washington, or at the Minneapolis yards.

This is the Fair's second purchase of fir from Northwest sources. An order for 770 sticks of similar length was filled early this year from Oregon cuttings. This earlier shipment of piling supports the Fair's $900,000 Administration Building already erected on the grounds.

Olaf Dahl Had Accident Again

Olof Dahl and son Leslie of Argyle were visitors in town on Wednesday evening. While helping with sawing wood on his farm Wednesday afternoon Mr. Dahl slipped and came in contact with the circle saw and had the whole end sawed off the thumb on his left hand and was returning home from Thief River Falls where he had gone to have it dressed by a doctor when he stoppdd in here. Last fall while helping to move some buildings in Mud Lake, Mr. Dadl had the end of one finger on his right hand cut off and one on his left hand badly injured when he got them under the overload springs on a heavy truck used in the work of pulling the building. Mr. Dahl was just as cheerful regardless of the hard luck he has had and was thankful that it was not worse.

Holt Township Election

At the annual township election for the town of Holt held at the Pioneer school on Tuesday, the following men were elected to office: O. H. Nohre as Supervisor for 3 years; Willie Larson, Supervisor for 1 year; T. B. Folden, Clerk for 2 years; Alf Movick, Justice of the Peace; and Stanley Lysne, Constable.

Those holding over as board members are E. O. Waagedahl, chairman and Carl Johnson, Assessor-Treasurer. The Town Board voted to raise $300.00 for their levy for 1938.

There were 49 votes cast at the election and many candidates were written in on the ticket.

The Life Of Mrs. Tobiason

We herewith publish a short sketch of the life of Mrs. Theodore Tobiason, pioneer of this community who passed away at her farm home northwest of Holt on January 29, 1938. Ada Miller was born on September 19 1876 in Delfield Township, Jackson County, Minnesota. In 1892 she was united in marriage to Thedore Tobiason.

In 1911 they moved to Marshall county and took up a homestead a mile and a half northeast of Holt. There they spent many years before selling out and have since spent their years farming other places in the community and lived for a short time in the village here. About ten years ago they moved to their present home northwest of town.

Fourteen children were born to this union of whom only six are now living. They are Andrew Lawrence and John at home, Mrs. Ruth Kays, Newfolden, Evelyn (Mrs. Lawrence Hagglund) of Holt, and Muriel (Mrs. Jack Anderson) of Minneapolis.

Mrs. Tobiason will be remembered by many here as a kind and friendly neighbor who was always willing to do her share of the pioneering work of the community. Funeral services were conducted from the home and burial was made in the Ridge cemetery north of their farm.

Farmers Meet Here Monday

The 1938 Agricultural Conservation Program will be explained at a meeting to be held in Holt at the Community Hall, Monday, March 14 at 2 p. m. ## New "Dead" Ball Gets Once Over

National league pitchers may look upon the new "dead" ball as a boon that will prevent batting sprees by opposing teams. These three pitchers of the New York Giants, Hal Schumacher, left, Cliff Melton, center, and Carl Hubbell, are shown looking at the new ball at their spring training camp at Hot Springs, Ark. The new "dead" ball was selected for the 1938 season in the National league at a meeting of club presidents several months ago. At that time the American league decided to retain the so-called lively ball. The dead ball is expected to reduce the advantage which hitters have enjoyed for several years over pitchers and result in a return of base-stealing and "tight" baseball.

Hitler Puts His Grenadiers on Skis

Apparently no phase of fighting is being left to chance by Dictator Adolf Hitler of Germany. Various branches of his armed forces are even now receiving war training on skis as witness this picture made on the snow-covered mountain slopes near Oberwiesenthal. Members of the police force, the army and storm troopers practice grenade throwing on skis, by using small clubs shaped like the deadly weapons. To make the exercises more interesting, the training takes the form of a contest.

HOW TO SEW

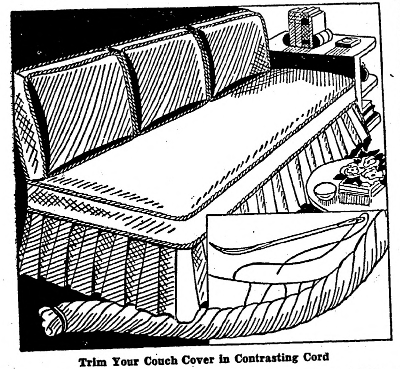
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



Trim Your Couch Cover in Contrasting Cord

IF SPRING is not in the air yet it soon will be. It is the season when every room in the house seems to need a lift. If your couch or daybed looks as though it has had a hard Winter now is the time to give it a thought.

The couch of the type shown here may be made to fit into almost any decorating scheme if it has a smart and appropriate cover. The one shown here is ideal for a room with modern furniture or for one that follows no particular period. It would also give an interesting accent in a Colonial or provincial room. The cushions match the couch cover. A roughly woven navy blue cotton material is used and the seamlines are outlined with heavy cream colored cable cord. If you would like a gayer color scheme, use red cord with navy blue. Cream or yellow cord with brown material also makes an attractive cover.

A curved candlewick tufting needle such as is shown here at the lower right is good to use for sewing the cord in place. Thread about size 8 or 10 to match the cord should be used.

So often mystifying technical details stand in the way of making things that would add beauty and comfort to your home. It is with this in mind that Mrs. Spears wrote and illustrated her book, SEWING, for the Home Decorator. With clear sketches and text it explains the simplest and most professional methods of making new slipcovers, correctly styled curtains, difficult dressing tables, pleasingly proportioned lamp shades and dozens of other things that will give your rooms new charm and freshness. This book will save you many dollars. Readers wishing a copy may address Mrs. Spears, 210 So. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill., enclosing 25 cents (coins preferred) and a copy of the book will be sent postpaid, by return mail.

TIPS to Gardeners

Miscellaneous Tips

BEFORE planting, work soil deeply, making the top three or four inches as fine and loose as possible.

For better germination, pour water into the drill or furrow just before sowing. Use enough water to moisten the soil, but not enough to cause caking.

If you have had little experience and wish to try the vegetables easiest to grow, select radishes, carrots, beets, Swiss chard, and turnips. With a good-sized garden you might add spinach, peas, beans and corn.

If your garden is small and you wish to increase the total yield, try the following quick-growing vegetables:

Radish, leaf lettuce, beets, carrots, peas and beans. You can replant most of these after space has been made for them by early harvest.

Do not plant seeds deeper than directed. After planting cover seeds immediately, pressing the soil down firmly.

Modern Methuselahs

Next time you read a news story about someone dying at the age of one hundred twenty-five years, put your tongue in your cheek, says the Commentator. The best records we have of human age limits are those kept by the life insurance companies. Their records show that only 30 persons out of every 1,000,000 reach the age of one hundred. Of the millions who have held policies in the United States for 150 years there is not a single instance of anyone living beyond the age of one hundred six. It's incomplete and verbal records which set most old age records.

C. Houston Goudiss, famous author, lecturer, and radio personality, will conduct this department each week. Many housewives will want to make scrapbooks of these articles. Don't miss a single issue.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Many years ago, in South America, this writer was always hearing somebody mutter "Perros!" (dogs), as he passed by. It expressed dislike of all North Americans. Upton Sinclair's book, "The Jungle," about the Chicago packing houses, had been carefully mistranslated, in a widely circulated version, which made multitudes of South Americans believe all North Americans ate dogs. Even in remote jungle towns, I found European trade scouts and salesmen making diligent use of the book. It was the neatest trade propaganda trick of the century.

Propaganda Trick Hurt U. S. Trade

The one-sided battle has continued through the decades. Late reports are that South American radio stations are belting Uncle Sam with everything at hand, and, to the same degree, apostrophizing Italy, Germany and Japan.

For this reason, there appears to be more than meets the eye in the printed story of our new airwave rearmament, and the assignment of a new short-wave channel for broadcasts to South America.

With Secretary Hull, Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American union, pleads for "stronger cultural ties" in the first broadcast. Spanish translations follow the English version.

While all this is in the name of "peace and good-will," and official announcements carry no hint of a defensive propaganda war, it appears to be the answer—perhaps the only possible reply—to the widespread smearing campaign against the U. S. A. in Latin American countries.

Radio Aids in Fighting U. S. Smear

The sixty-six-year-old Dr. Rowe is a happy choice to head America's "cultural," if not propaganda, outreach in this direction. He has become widely known and decidedly persona grata in South America in his 32 years of pleading and proselyting for solidarity, friendship and understanding in the Americas.

He has fraternized with South Americans more than any other northerner, lecturing, writing, evangelizing and expounding his doctrines of friendly co-operation—always on the high plane of cultural and intellectual intercourse. He has been head of the Pan-American union since 1920, succeeding John Barrett.

* * *

LIFE begins at forty for Gracie Fields, English Music Hall actress, who curtsies to the king and becomes a commander of the Order of the British Empire. It is another Jane Alger story, this tale of the Lancashire mill girl who became the highest-paid entertainer in the world.

Jane Alger Career of Stage Star

Her earnings from her 5,000,000 gramophone records, and from the stage and cinema have reached $750,000 a year. Her film, "Mr. Tower of London," ran seven years.

She lives simply with her mother, who manages her affairs, and never has anything more than pocket money. Every so often she visits Rochdale, the mill town where she sang for pennies at the age of seven, and has a rollicking time, singing for her old friends.

She was a "half-timer" in the cotton mills, half the day in school and half at work.

In 1930, she made a brief appearance at the Palace theater in New York. It wasn't much of a success. She explained afterward that she had been warned in England that entire audiences in America chewed gum together and in time, with dreadful facial contortions. This frightened her and spoiled her act, although, she admitted, there was only one observable gum-chewer.

Act Spoiled by Fear of Gum-Chewers

She was glad to land safely in England, where she is widely beloved and known as "Good Old Gracie."

Just a few days before her fortieth birthday, she returned home from a party at four o'clock in the morning. The milkman, the policeman on the beat and a street-sweeper ceremoniously handed her a morning paper with her name in the king's honor list. She is tall, blonde and merry.

Oilcloth is a thick canvas coated on both sides with thick oil paint. First the canvas is passed through liquid glue, etc., pressed by heavy rollers, dried, and rubbed with pumice-stone. C. Houston Goudiss, outstanding food authority, author, and radio lecturer, author of "What to Eat and Why." He knows food from soil to serving, from table to tissue. Watch for his articles each week.

SINCE the world began, food has been man's first consideration. For it he has fought and died. To find it he has traveled over great continents and braved unknown dangers. His quest for food has changed the map of the world and colored the history of nations. But in all of these historic struggles, he has been motivated solely by the desire to get enough food to satisfy hunger.

Today, actual hunger is rare. But hundreds of thousands of people starve in the midst of plenty because they do not realize the tremendous power of food for good or for evil.

They do not realize that as a man eats, so he is, and that his choice of food materials gives or takes away the power to live vigorously—to think clearly—to feel warmly—to be strong, healthy and wise.

It can be truly said that your food is your fate. It has the power to shape your body—to make it strong and beautiful, or weak and ugly. It has the power to influence your language, your gait, your tone of voice, in short—your life. With the right food, life becomes a glorious adventure, for it increases your leadership, intensifies your magnetic qualities, strengthens your morale, and increases your physical defenses and resistance. Without it, one drags through miserable days—never realizing even half of his potential mental and physical powers.

Food—the Fuel of Life.

The body machine cannot be run efficiently without proper food fuel any more than a car could be run without gas, or a house could be heated without oil, coal or wood.

Food also has the power to speed up or slow down the workings of the mind. It likewise influences the state of our nerves, the warmth of our affections, the type of characters we possess.

Finally, the power to have strong, healthy children is based on proper food. And nutritional scientists have discovered that the wrong food can even take away from us the greatest blessing that Nature has bestowed—our earthly immortality. For it can deprive us of the ability to bear children who will carry on after we are gone.

Six Groups of Food Substances.

What food substances are necessary to build and maintain top health—to develop the greatest physical and mental power? There are six groups of food substances which must be included in the balanced diet which promises increased health, happiness and longevity:

1. PROTEINS which build and repair body tissues. These are found in such foods as milk, eggs, meats, fish, cheese and nuts.
2. FATS which yield heat and energy. The fats are represented by butter, cream, oils and the fat of meats.
3. CARBOHYDRATES — the starches and sugars. These also supply heat and energy, and are found chiefly in such foods as bread, potatoes, cereals and sweets.
4. MINERALS which build, repair, protect and regulate. Among the minerals which are absolutely necessary to health and vigor are calcium, phosphorus, iron, copper, iodine, sulphur, manganese, magnesium, sodium and potassium. These are found in varying amounts in milk, eggs, fruits, vegetables, whole grain cereals and meats.
5. VITAMINS which are necessary for body regulation, and as a protection against dread deficiency diseases. Six have been discovered to date—A, B, C, D, E and G.
6. WATER which is a part of all body tissue and must be present in order to have the other food elements function properly.

The ideal dietary is one that includes a correct proportion of the different food elements required to supply bodily needs without any of them being supplied in excess, or in insufficient amounts.

To illustrate how important it is that not one of the necessary food substances be omitted, let me tell you how an eminent bio-chemist proved in his experimental laboratory, in one of our leading universities, that the difference between stupidity and genius depended upon the presence or absence of one vitamin.

He placed a pregnant animal upon a diet adequate in every respect, except that it lacked one of the six vitamins. As soon as her young were born and weaned, they were fed a completely adequate diet.

Then the scientist tested the mentality of the young animals. He wanted to find out whether or not their mental power had been injured in any way by the fact that their mother—during pregnancy—had been deprived of one vital food element. So he put them in a runway. To get out of this—and reach a tasty morsel at the other end—they had to make their way through a series of passages. He had already made this same test on the same type of animals born of properly fed mothers. He knew that it never took them more than 25 trials to learn their way out of the maze. Most of them had gotten out after 15 to 18 attempts.

But what lack of skill was shown by the animals whose mother had been deprived of proper food! The stupidity of these pathetic little creatures was unbelievable. Some of them never learned to thread the maze and reach their goal, even after as many as 250 trials. They were being given—at the time—everything that was necessary to their diet. But they had entered life with minds totally unequipped to cope with the world—because their mother had not been properly fed before they were born.

This is a striking example of the power of food to make or mar existence. I could cite hundreds of other laboratory experiments, many of which have been confirmed by clinical experience.

Nor is this power of food to affect mental activity confined to prenatal life. Even if a child enters this world with a strong body and a clear mind—the wrong food during childhood has the power to wreck health.

Investigation after investigation, by leading specialists throughout the country, has proven that a surprising percentage of retarded children—those who cannot keep up with their school grades—do not really have inferior minds. They only seem stupid because the action of their minds is clogged and slowed down by sluggish, under-fed bodies. Their brains are like machines which cannot attempt the speed of which they are capable—because the proper fuel had not been provided.

Physical fitness is a far greater asset than material possessions. For in times of stress and trouble, those who can stand up under the physical strain win the battle. For those who collapse, all is lost.

The Homemaker's Responsibility.

Every wife and mother is therefore faced with the tremendous responsibility of keeping her family mentally and physically fit. Her husband must have the right kind of food in order to earn a living. Her own diet must be adequate and well-balanced if she is to have the energy, wisdom, and patience required of a mother at all hours of the day. Her baby will not grow into a healthy man or woman unless he or she has the right nourishment from the moment of birth. And school children can't keep up with their classes without the right food.

If you will follow this series of articles, and put into practice the principles of correct eating that I advocate, I can promise that you will increase both mental and physical efficiency, and as a result, achieve greater health and happiness for every member of your family.

Food Affects Your Body and Mind

Each morning when you awake, a new life is ahead of you. Whether that day and the days to follow will be better or worse than those that went before, depends largely upon what you eat. For nothing short of a miracle is performed at every meal.

Within a few hours the bread, meat, vegetables and liquids that you swallow are transformed into your personality. They begin to think, feel and act. They become YOU. What was food yesterday, today is carrying on the important business of the world.

Each meal that you eat helps or hinders the efficiency and ease with which these various duties are performed. That is why it is true that as you eat, so you are. And that is why I say that three times a day, at your table, you SIT DOWN TO LIFE.

How Often Should Your Furniture Be Polished?

Housewives differ on the question of "when to polish their furniture." Some have no set time for it—polishing when they think of it—or when, casting a glance about, they decide that the furniture can "stand it." Others, polish every cleaning day—which ordinarily occurs once a week. Others dedicate but one day a year to this important procedure. And still others, polish the furniture in their home regularly, once a month. This last group is the largest—but their schedule is not sufficiently frequent. Furniture can not be polished too often! True, the outward benefit of the best oil polish—the luster—will last through a single week—and more—but this same polish, with its light oil base, preserves and "feeds" the furniture, revives it, prolongs its life! So that every application is highly beneficial to woodwork and the various pieces of fine wood in the home. Our advice, therefore, for the sake of endurance, as well as appearance, of your furniture, is "polish up" with a good oil polish at least twice a month!

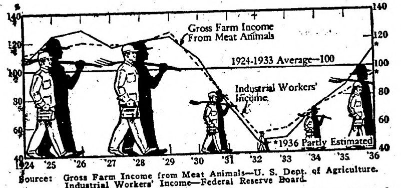
Gross Farm Income from Meat Animals Runs Parallel to Pay Envelopes of Industrial Workers



Source: Gross Farm Income from Meat Animals—U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. Industrial Workers' Income—Federal Reserve Board.

How the consumers of meat influence the gross farm income from meat animals is shown graphically here. When factory payrolls, an index of consumer buying power, are low, the total value of the nation's livestock is low. On the other hand, when factory payrolls are high, the total value of the nation's livestock is high.

Prices per hundred weight, of course, are influenced by the volume of livestock marketed as well as the amount of factory payrolls.

HOW NEW YORK FAIR MOVES BIG TREES BY HUNDREDS

NEW YORK (Special).—As the housewife repots geraniums or the gardener moves berry bushes, so does the New York World's Fair 1939 Corporation transplant stately trees from five states to the 1216½-acre exposition site. The Fair's landscape engineers explain that the moving of the big trees differs from the replanting of small shrubs only in the matter of size, and that modern mechanical aids make possible the creation of a mature-looking park on the newly made land of Flushing Meadow.

Shown at the top of accompanying photographs is a grown maple that has just been restored to upright position after a 120-mile ride on a specially-built truck. Note truck's winch and the secure balling of earth about the tree roots. In the centre is a 35-foot Norway maple, 12 tons weight, moving the last few yards to its new home by means of the forward gear of a modern tree mover. All trees shown, a number of the 474 veterans moved this spring, are new to the great expanse of filled land. The Fair will move 10,000 trees and 250,000 shrubs.

Music From the Sky

A CARILLON is an "organ of bells," played by both hands and feet and differs from the ordinary one-note-at-a-time chime in that chords of many notes can be played.

Carillons have come down to us through the corridor of time, having been in use in Europe since the Sixteenth century, where they are regarded with both pride and affection as a community possession and have contributed greatly to the public appreciation of inspiring music.

The largest and most complete carillon in America hangs in the tower of the Park Avenue Baptist church in New York city—the gift of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in memory of his mother. Cast in England, it contains fifty-three bells, having 110,199 pounds of vibrating bell metal. The bells range in size from eight feet two inches in diameter, weighing 20,720 pounds (low E—said to be the deepest-toned carillon bell in all creation), to one but six and one-quarter inches in diameter, weighing only nine pounds.

Bell experts declare that there are five tones in each bell that are distinguishable to the trained ear and that in order to insure perfect harmony each bell must be tuned to itself and also with all other bells in the carillon.

Obviously, carillon music is both melodious and inspiring. In the hands of an experienced carilloneur such bells speak with surprising intelligence. No words can entirely describe the unbelievable tonal vibrations as this music from the sky floats out from a church tower and fills the air with its uplifting song.

High School

Last Friday Milton thought it would be a good idea to anoint the waste basket with olive oil. As a result, six silly sophomores were put on the Black List.

The biology class has finished experimenting with the germination of beans and corn.

In American history, the juniors are studying America, as a power among the nations of the world.

All the classes had six-weeks tests last week.

Who is it?

Among the lads of the junior group is a gay fellow known as "Gear" by his school mates.

"Ten Pretty Girl" as played by Benny Goodman rated high in his estimation. He literally dotes on pie ala mode and root beer. He seems to be one of those non-partisan fellows for he has no favorite movies, stars, books, or authors. The one word biking, tells us how he spends his leisure time. Many nearby towns have been visited by Gear and his bike. For some unknown reason his pet peeve is English.

Gear aspires to be a forest ranger but holds no one in particular as his inspiration. By this time we're sure you,ve guessed that this certain Gear is no other than Harold Gavere.

Grades 3, 4, and 5

The Little Citizens League met Friday to elect new officers for the following six-weeks period: Duane Larson was elected president; Geraldine Larson, vice president; Sylvia Sandberg secretary. The program committee will consist of Dale Lorentson; Betty Johnson and Joyce Peterson.

Geraldine Larson has had a perfect score every Friday during the entire last six-weeks period.

In art class we are making pictures of Dutch boys and girls, Dutch windmills and tulips.

We have learned to sing several songs by syllables. Next we shall learn how to determine the keys in which music is written.

Honor Roll

Grade 3, Donna Moline, Irvin Larson.

Grade 4, Delores Engen, Betty Johnson, Kenneih Larson.

Grades 6, 7, 8.

The following pupils have been present every day of the fourth six-weeks period: Lois, Marian, Roy, Wayne and Oliver.

The honor roll consists of the following pupils: 8th grade, Romal, Lois and Russell; 7th grade, Marian, Roy and Wayne; 6th grade, Alma Johnson.

H. M. Hanson, associated during the past 20 years or more in the Register of Deeds and other county offices, filed Tuesday for the office of Register of Deeds to succeed L. M. Olson, veteran official who recently announced that he would not seek the office another term.

Mr. Hanson, a native of Marshall County, was born in the township of New Solum, on October 20th 1892, where he lived with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hanson, until in the fall of 1908 when the family moved to Warren. He finished his education in Warren, graduating from high school in 1913, and the following year from Commercial department at North Star College in Warren.

H. M. HANSON

Since completing his education, Mr. Hanson has lived in Warren continuously with the exception of two years, 1915-1917, when he lived at Newfolden where he served as a bookkeeper in the Peoples State Bank. Upon his return to Warren, he emmediately entered the Register of Deeds office where he served as a deputy and abstracter of titles. He served four months as County Auditor, filling an un-expired term, and four years as deputy County Auditor under Levi G. Johnson.

Mr. Hanson owns his own home in Warren, and has taken an active part in the civic affairs of the city. ## League Meeting Held Here

Following is a short summary of the Eastern Marshall County Protective Leauge meeting held at Holt on Wednesday, March 9.

The meeting was called to order by A. C. McMillan, Gatzke who is chairman of the league. H. O. Hanson was appointed as chairman of the meeting here and addressed the delegation of hundred and thirty farmers from all parts of the eastern end of the county. These farmers had come here to discuss what could be done in the matter of protection for future drainage and voice thier opposition to damage done to thier drainage system by projects and dams.

Several new member were also elected to serve on the League committee from townships along the west side of the Thief River and some more east of the river. New members elected are: Clarence Lian, Whiteford; Anton Rodahl, East Valley; Arne Rantenan, Cedar; Hjalmer Johnson, Holt; Albert Wilkins, Moylan; Chas. Gerber, Eckvoll. These men will serve the former committee who are: A. C. McMillan, Chairman, Gatzke; Ole Eastby, Secretary, Gatzke; N. P. Mugas, Ole Larson and Hans Dahl, all of Gatzke; Martin Sandmark, Ole Tellefson and S. K. Sandland all of Grygla; John Kast of Goodridge. The committee now has fifteen members on its executive board.

O. W. Teckemeyer from Des Moines, Iowa, a representative of the U. S. Biological Survey, was here and outlined what his department would try to do in regards to projects in the eastern end of the county causing flood damages to farmers around the Mud Lake area when it is completed.

The farmers in the east end of the county want to be sure that they will at all time to come, have an adequate outlet for the water coming down on them from further east after projects are flooded and restored to lakes. It appears to them that after these projects are completed and that they would get heavy rains in the area, there will be no place for the surplus water to go and, that as a result they will suffer from flood damages caused by water backing up from these lakes and also from seapage thru the surrounding peat lands.

The committee will keep in close touch with these matters and they hope to have some permanent outlet fixed for the flood waters and that they will again be assured of adequate drainage for the large farm area in the eastern end of the county.

The following were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Nohre on Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Peterson and twins Doris and Dennis, Mr. and Mrs Fred Swanson and Ruth and L. O. Peterson all of Roseau; and Mrs. O. H. Nohre and Getrude and Orrin Fredrickson.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Johnson, on Thursday of last week, a boy, at Physicians hospital at Thief River Falls.

Col O. C. Brenna, Middle River, Minn. announces that he is ready to cry any farm sales or other sales that you may have this spring. Mr. Brenna has 38 years experience in this work and gaurantees that you will be satisfied with his work. For dates see Geo. Fricker at the Marshall County State Bank, Holt, Minn.

Buckler Gets Endorsement

Congressman R. T. Buckler was given the endorsement of the Farmer-Labor Convention held at Plummer on Saturday, March 5th, for a third term as Representative in Congress from the 9th Congressional District. The endorsement was all but unanimous. That he will win the nomination in the June Primaries and the election in November is a foregone conclusion.

Eric Friberg of Roseau served as convention chairman and Oscar Bjorklund of Henning was secretary. A. M. Hastad of Halstad was elected permanent chairman and R. M. Aalbu, Superintendent of Itasca State Park, was elected secretary of the 9th District Central Committee.

Every one of the fifteen counties in the district were represented by its full delegation, there being 96 delegates present. A large crowd of party adherents also attended, making this the biggest and most successfull convention ever held in the district.

The contest for congressional endorsement was between Mr. Buckler and Fred Proehl from Parkers Prairie. The sentiment was strongly in favor of Buckler who won the endorsement by a vote of 84 to 8.

Several resolutions were endorsed and among them one was the adoption of the resolution of the Eastern Marshall County Protective League in which was voiced opposition by the people from this end of the county to the obstruction to their drainage system by restoring Mud Lake.

The two members for the state central committee chosen from the 9th district are Dr. Ben Esse, Perham and Emil Prestemoen of Bagley.

George Hagen, Crookston, was endorsed for Lieutenent Governor and A. H. Carlson, Plummer received the endorsement for Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner.

Delegates from here attending the convention were Tom Risdal, H. O. Hanson and Chas. Skoglund. Mr. Hanson was chosen to serve as a member of the Credential Committee at the State Farmer-Labor Convention in Duluth March 25 and 26. Mr. Skoglund will also go to the convention as a county delegate.

Rain Shower-Crows Arrived

The weather the past week has been of the spring variety and the snow has soon all gone away on the open ground. On Tuesday evening we had the first rain of the season here when it drizzled heavy for a few hours. The farmers are hoping for an early start in the fields.

The first crows to come north for the 1938 season arrived here last week.

The local school board at their regular meeting on Monday evening, rehired the entire school faculty here for next year. We have a fine troop of teachers here and the people of this community can feel proud to know that they are to come back next year.

She also leaves two grandsons, Lowell and Robert, her husband and her mother at Mahnomen, one sister at Thief River Falls, one brother at Holt and a brother at Davenport, Iowa.

Her six sons were pall bearers. Rev. A. Stortroen of Mahnomen officiated assisted by Rev. T. C. L. Hanson. Mrs. O. H. Nohre sang a solo and Mrs. Marvin Sandberg was organist.

About two hundred farmers from this end of the county gathered here on Monday afternoon to hear County Agent R. A Reierson of Warren explain the 1938 agricultural program. The program for 1938 is a little different from that of 1937 and is much stricter as to rules and regulations of croping lands on which the farmer is to be paid benefits.

People interested in weed eradication should not miss the eastern Marshall county weed meeting to be held at Middle River on Monday, March 21 at 1:30 p. m. This meeting is called by Chas. Ommodt, State Commissioner of Agriculture. State Weed inspectors W. J. Cleary and Jens Andersonwill be there to speak on weed eradication.

Vatican Railroad

The Vatican State has the smallest railroad in the world. It is about 600 feet long and the rolling stock consists of a locomotive and three cars. Small as the line is, it is probably unsurpassed anywhere for magnificence in appointments. There is a throneroom coach, a chapel coach and the pope's private dining and sleeping car, laid out in gold and mother-of-pearl.

There are 300 feet of tunnel under the Vatican hill and the line runs from behind St. Peter's Basilica to the frontier of the little state.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—The absence of salon diplomacy or petticoat politics in the European struggle for a new power balance would be an oversight by the muse of history, readying the drama of the century, and at last it seems to have been attended to.

Lady Pulls Strings in Duce Deal

Enter Lady Chamberlain, the cleverest woman politician in England, widow of Sir Austen, obscurely noted in the news as mysteriously busy for the last few months in the British-Italian rapprochement.

Several weeks ago, a sagacious traveler of this writer's acquaintance, back from Rome, reported Lady Chamberlain as adroitly fostering an understanding with Britain which would bring recognition of Ethiopia and a two-way split on Spain and the Mediterranean. She has been in Rome since November, in intimate social intercourse with the more important Fascist moguls.

For many years, she has been known as the "most perfect political hostess" in London and has been subtly influential in many big deals in continental diplomacy. It was she who cooked up the Locarno conference, at Lake Maggiore, in Switzerland, in 1925.

How Picnic at Locarno Made Peace

When the delegates were haggling, she packed some hampers and invited Sir Austen, Briand and Streseman to the most important picnic in all history. In her handsome little yacht, they disappeared around a bend in the lake, landed in a secluded spot, and, with the aid of three jurists, re-rigged Europe.

Whatever came out of the conference, for good or ill, is traced to that picnic. When she returned to England, she was made Dame of the Grand Cross of the British Empire.

She is a comely matron of sixty-two, married to Sir Austen in 1906. He was fourteen years older. She was Ivy Dundas of one of the leading political families of England.

In the earlier years of their marriage, she was credited with having coached her husband in the ultra-English mannerisms which all of the great Birmingham family found it expedient to master when they moved to London. She is said to have been his political as well as his social mentor, and frequently electioneered in his campaigns.

Lady Chamberlain is an extreme conservative and is believed to have nurtured plans for a British alliance with the Absolutist powers. She has an extraordinary flair for dramatic political stage-settings and delicate sensitivity to political currents. Italy conferred on her the Gold Medal of Merit.

G-Men On Front Page in Spy Hunt

THE New York spy round-up by the federal bureau of investigation marks the first front-page workout of the G-men as an ally of the secret service. An attache of the latter told me in Washington last summer that J. Edgar Hoover's organization, developed in post-war years, would be an invaluable aid to this country's defenses against foreign espionage, and that, in the event of trouble, actual or impending, no foreign country could hope to duplicate Germany's exploit in sabotage, propaganda and spying before our entry into the World war.

Reed Vetterli, in short pants when the World war started, heads the New York office of the F. B. I. and deploys his 75 agents in a red-hot spy scenario, in which they score as usual, with indications today that this is just the overture.

Six feet tall, blond, reticent, Mr. Vetterli is a veteran of the F. B. I. war against thugs and kidnapers, in the bureau since 1926, in charge of 18 offices in his 11 years of service.

He was born in Salt Lake City in 1903, and took his law degree at the University of Washington in 1925. In 1933, he was wounded in the Kansas City massacre, trading shots with Pretty Boy Floyd's gangsters.

He has participated in most of the bureau's famous kidnaping, vice and bank robbery cases. He succeeded Rhea Whitley as head of the New York office on September 11, 1937. He has a reputation in the bureau for always having an airtight case against anyone he arrests.

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses PROTEINS—

The Foods That You Cannot Live Without

Eminent Food Authority Explains Why No Protein Means No Life—Describes the Kind and Amount Required for the Best Growth in Children—Good Resistance, Vigor and Endurance in Adults.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York.

FOOD is—and always has been—the central problem of life. But only in recent years has its true power been revealed, as a result of scientific investigation.

Fortunately, we now know what constitutes sound nutrition, and it is possible for every homemaker to plan meals that will enable her family to eat their way to health.

Topping the list of food essentials are the proteins. The Dutch chemist, Mulder, who hit upon this name, made a wise choice, for it means "to take first place." And certainly the proteins are first in importance. For they are the stuff of which our bodies are built. Without them, there would be no life.

Every man, woman and child has a fundamental need for protein, because it is an essential component of every living cell and makes up a large part of the solids of a muscle cell. Evidently, a great many of the glandular principles and substances, which control the functions of the body, are also protein in character.

Protein is the only food element that contains nitrogen, and next to water, nitrogen is the chief constituent of the human body.

Protein Builds Bodies.

A new born baby weighs, on an average, from 7 to 7½ pounds, and the adult into which it grows may weigh 20 to 30 times as much. The vast amount of tissue necessary to construct a man is built chiefly from protein.

Once the adult body is built, however, protein is not required for the growth of new tissues, except under certain conditions, such as during pregnancy, when one is recovering from a wasting illness, or when an athlete is in training and the muscles are increasing in size.

Keeps the Body in Repair.

There is, however, a maintenance requirement for protein which continues throughout life, and which applies to both children and adults. For the body may be compared to a machine, on which it is necessary to make allowance for the wear and tear of parts. Protein is the only substance that will rebuild the millions of cells which each day cease to function.

Thus, we see that protein performs two vital services—First, it builds new tissues; second, it repairs worn-out tissues.

The Building Stones of the Body.

Protein is found in many different foods, but unfortunately, not all proteins are equally valuable. That is because protein is a very complex substance, resulting from the union of 22 or more simpler substances containing nitrogen, and called amino acids. These are the true building stones of the body. Some protein foods may have only 7 amino acids represented in their substance; others may have as many as 15 or 16, and these also may be varied by the proportions of the kinds present.

Proteins Vary in Value.

Some of these amino acids are necessary to build new tissue; others will not build tissue, but are capable of repairing worn-out cells. Some protein foods are, therefore, more valuable to the body than others.

It is absolutely essential that the homemaker, charged with the responsibility of feeding a family, should be able to distinguish between those types of protein which are adequate for both growth and repair, and those that are only useful for maintenance.

For if the diet does not contain an adequate amount, or the right kind of protein, our bodies will be badly built and they will be improperly repaired and cannot wear well. As Dr. Eugene V. McCollum of Johns Hopkins university, the world-famous investigator and discoverer of vitamin A, puts it: "Unless the right kinds, with respect to the size and shape, are furnished by the food proteins, the exact pattern on which the muscle must be constructed cannot be formed and, in this case, growth is interfered with."

If you were building a house you would consider nothing less than the finest materials. You would know that cheap lumber and poorly made bricks could not produce a lasting building. In the same way, you must learn to discriminate between the various types of protein used for the supremely important purpose of building your children's bodies, or keeping adult physiques in perfect repair.

Some foods cost more than others and you should not be guilty of spending hard-earned money for expensive protein foods when the same amount of nourishment could be more economically obtained from an inexpensive source.

Where to Find Protein.

Proteins are found in many different foods, but unfortunately, only a limited number of foods supply proteins containing all the amino acids necessary for both growth and repair. Proteins that will build new tissue, as well as replace worn-out cells, are known as complete proteins. In this class we have meats, fish, cheese, milk, eggs and some nuts.

Other proteins are adequate for repairing worn-out tissue, but will not support growth. Such incomplete proteins are found in grains and products made from them, and in the legumes—that is peas, beans, lentils and peanuts.

The proteins of these foods are of high nutritive value, however, and when supplemented with other proteins, such as those of milk, will meet every bodily requirement.

How Much Protein?

The protein requirement varies according to size, age, and the kind of protein foods consumed.

To allow for growth, children require twice as much protein per pound of body weight as adults. That is to say, an adult requires daily one-thirtieth of an ounce for each pound of body weight, but a child needs one-fifteenth of an ounce for each pound of body weight.

The amount of protein food should usually constitute from 10 to 15 per cent of all the calories taken. If this plan is faithfully followed, there will be more than enough to take care of every requirement, because experiments indicate that a man who weighs 154 pounds, or 70,000 grams, needs a minimum of 44 grams of protein every day.

Eskimos eat two or three times as much protein as most dwellers in the temperate zone, but that is because other foods are scarce. In the tropics, on the other hand, the consumption of protein is often not more than half that of the temperate zone.

An Adequate Protein Ration.

Milk and eggs are among the finest forms of protein, and they should have an especially important part in the diet, not only of the growing child but of invalids, prospective mothers, and the mother who is nursing a baby. If the choice must be between milk and eggs, milk should have first place because it is usually cheaper in proportion to the food value it supplies.

In planning the family dietary, a safe rule to keep in mind is to include in the daily diet: a quart of milk for every child, a pint for each adult; one egg, one serving of meat, fish or chicken, one serving of another protein food such as cheese, dried peas or beans, or a main dish made with nuts.

You can achieve wide variety and still provide an adequate protein ration within the limits of this rule. For milk may be served as a beverage, in soups, puddings, and as cream sauce. Eggs may likewise be varied in their method of preparation, or concealed in other foods. There are many fine meats, and the number of ways in which fresh, canned, frozen or dried fish can be served is legion.

Both cheese and nuts make sandwiches, salads and desserts, as well as main course dishes. Peas, beans and lentils can appear as soup, mock roast or croquettes. Grain products, which include cereals, macaroni and bread, may appear in any course in the meal.

In planning menus, always keep before you the ideal that an adequate amount of first class protein makes a first class man, whereas an inadequate amount may lead to stunted growth, functional nervous diseases, lessened efficiency and the earlier approach of old age.

In choosing proteins to feed your family—remember that they take first place among foods, and that upon their wise choice rests your future welfare, your destiny—your life!

Polishing Ethics—Pro and Con

When fine furniture leaves the shop of the manufacturer, its finish has been professionally treated, to preserve its beauty—prolong its endurance. And from that time on, this furniture is best maintained by a quality light-oil furniture polish—first, on the shop floor of the furniture dealer—and then in the home. This is acknowledged and accepted as the best way to heighten its beauty—lengthen its life! But unfortunately, many housewives coat the finish of their furniture and woodwork with various shellacs and veneers—using them as a substitute for a fine oil polish and rubbing. And what a great mistake this is! For these coatings form a false finish over the true finish of the furniture; and rosin and other destructive elements in them dry out the wood—toughen it—leave a sticky residue. When many layers have been applied, they accumulate as a crust over the finish, clogging it and clouding the natural beauty of the grain. This is the slack way to care for furniture. If the home-maker really "cares for" her furniture, she will frequently rub on a reputable light-oil polish, to preserve it—keep it lastingly lovely!

HOW to SEW

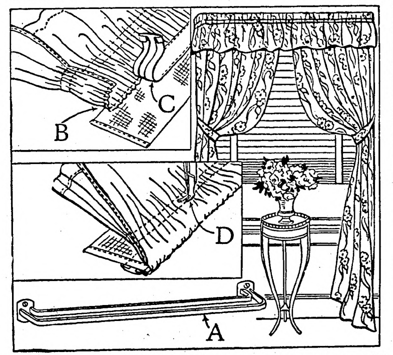
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



PLANNING draperies is as exciting as planning a new frock. Color, fabric, suitability, style. Curtains sound the keynote of a whole room, and this is the time of year to be thinking about them. The chintz draperies with shirred valance shown here are dignified and yet charmingly informal. They are easy to make; they have the smart tailored effect that is usually obtained only by using a valance board, yet they are hung on ordinary double curtain rods of the type shown here at A.

The side drapes are made of full widths of the chintz and are hung on the inside rod with plain casings at the top. Cut the valance material the desired depth and twice as long as the space it is to fill after it is shirred. Hem the ends and bottom. Now, make a row of gathers along the raw edge at the top, another row 2½ inches below the first and a third row ½ inch below the second. Cut a piece of buckram 4 inches deep and as long as the outside curtain rod. Bind the ends of this strip. Place the shirred valance edge wrong side down on the strip of buckram as at B. Cut a casing strip wide enough for the rod to slip under it after the edges are turned, and place it over the valance edge as at C. Stitch the casing strip and the valance to the buckram as shown. Turn the valance over to the other side of the buckram and stitch through the other two rows of shirring as shown. Slip the outside curtain rod through the casing and the valance is ready to hang.

Are you in a rut about your curtains? Do you know the different methods that decorators use to give windows individuality? In her book SEWING for the Home Decorator, Mrs. Spears has told the whole story with sketches and text. Slipcovers, difficult dressing tables, and making of lamp shades, how to bring furniture up to date and many other technical problems are treated in this useful dollar saving book. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents (coins preferred), to Mrs. Spears, 210 So. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

LID OF TVA BLOWN OFF

Chairman Morgan Demands Congressional Inquiry . . Refuses to Resign . . Spanish Cruiser Torpedoed

Evidently these three leaders in the fight about the administration-backed "Third Basket" tax bill did not get enough pro and con on the house floor. They continue their argument in the corridor, with the bill's author, Representative Fred Vinson of Kentucky, right, rebuking Representative Allen T. Treadway of Massachusetts, left, for his opposition to the measure. Representative Robert L. Doughton of North Carolina, center, who introduced the bill to the house, backs Vinson.

Berry Claim Cause of Row

LONG existing warfare between Dr. A. E. Morgan, chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, and his fellow directors, David Lilienthal and Harcourt Morgan, has come to a climax, due to the claims of Sen. George L. Berry for $5,000,000 because his alleged marble quarries were flooded in the Norris dam area. Doctor Morgan has demanded a showdown in the form of a congressional investigation of the whole TVA setup and its activities.

A. E. Morgan

A commission appointed by a federal court in Tennessee reported the claims of Berry and his associates were worthless because their properties could not be profitably operated commercially.

Chairman Morgan then issued a long statement revealing that the quarrel in the authority was due not to differences between himself and his colleagues over policy, but to his efforts to obtain "honesty, openness, decency and fairness in government."

Dr. Morgan intimated that the Berry deal was only a part of the issue of honesty and decency which he had to face and that there was a lot more he would like to tell a congressional committee.

Lilienthal and Harcourt Morgan retaliated with a long defense statement, severely criticizing the chairman and suggesting that he retire from the commission. President Roosevelt made public this statement, leading observers to believe he rather sided with them. But Chairman Morgan replied that he would not resign under fire and in a letter to Representative Maverick of Texas reiterated his demand for an investigation by congress. Resolutions for such an inquiry were introduced, and Senator Norris, patron saint of TVA and similar projects, sought either to smother the proposed probe or to see that it was carried on by friendly hands.

In the midst of the rumpus Lilienthal announced that the government is willing to buy the properties of private electric power companies in the TVA area provided the owners will sell them at sacrifice prices. The utility officials interested were invited to meet him and Harcourt Morgan for a discussion. Lilienthal said that if the proposed purchases were carried out, private power enterprises would be eliminated in northern Alabama, northeastern Mississippi and nearly all of Tennessee. He also announced that the TVA would be ready to advance cities in the area, otherwise unable financially to purchase local power plants, funds from an appropriation of $50,000,000 voted by congress in the recently amended TVA act.

Franco Warship Sunk

SPANISH insurgents sustained a severe loss when their cruiser Baleares was torpedoed and sunk in a big naval battle off Cartegena. The 10,000-ton cruiser went down in flames and probably about 300 of her crew were drowned. Some 400 others were rescued by two British destroyers.

The loyalist attack by warships and planes was carefully planned to break the rebel blockade of government ports on the Mediterranean coast. The loyalist authorities were highly elated by this victory in what they called the first real naval battle of the civil war, and War Minister Prieto said they were now prepared to fight the conflict to a finish on the seas.

The British admiralty announced that two British destroyers were attacked by five airplanes off the Spanish coast while on "anti-piracy" patrol duty. There were no casualties.

General Franco was reported to be reorganizing all his troops from Africa so that he can carry on if Mussolini withdraws the Italian contingents in accordance with the expected agreement with Great Britain. Conversations to lead to that agreement were started by British and Italian diplomats.

We Take Two Islands

UNDER orders from the President, Secretary of the Interior Ickes added to the island possessions of the United States which he supervises two little bits of land in the Pacific—Canton and Enderby islands, in the Phoenix archipelago. Their value is as stopping places for transoceanic air flights to Australia.

Great Britain has held a disputed claim to the two islands, as well as to others of the Phoenix group. The President's order for control of the islands is based on settlements made three years ago by American citizens. The government now is in a position to discuss the conflicting claims with Britain.

Included in the President's order are lands in the Antarctic first visited by Admiral Byrd and other Americans.

New French Ambassador

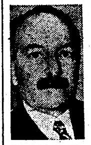
COUNT RENE DOYNEL DE SAINT-QUENTIN, who replaces Georges Bonnet as ambassador from France, arrived in Washington and proceeded to the White House in full regalia, to present his credentials to President Roosevelt. The count is fifty-four years old and a bachelor. He is a distinguished citizen of France and the scion of a long famous family.



Saint-Quentin

Other callers at the White House who aroused much interest were the three unmarried sisters of King Zog of Albania. The princesses are on a pleasure tour of the United States and it is officially denied that they are seeking suitable husbands over here.

Borah Hits Navy Bill

JUST before the house began consideration of the administration's billion-dollar naval construction bill, Senator Borah virtually gave notice that the measure would not get through the senate without a lively fight. He gave out a statement attacking the naval building program as an unjustified step toward "the beginning of another World war—an armaments war."

"Such a program is not in the interest of peace," he said. "It is not for the welfare of our people These vast sums are being drained off from the people at a time when they are in sore distress to find means to carry on."

Borah is the senior member of the senate foreign relations committee.

Widens Tax Field

IN A 5 to 2 decision of far reaching implications, sweeping aside more than a century of precedents, the United States Supreme court held that income from leases of state school lands is not immune from federal taxation.

Justice Pierce Butler, dissenting with Justice James Clark McReynolds, said it was impossible to foresee the extent to which the court's opinion upsets the long settled principle of reciprocal tax immunity in our dual system of government.

The decision was the latest of a series in which the Supreme court has greatly narrowed the field of reciprocal tax immunity.

TIPS to Gardeners

Choosing Flowers

IF YOU want flowers that come into bloom early, plant seeds of nasturtium, Virginia stock, zinnia, sunflower, bachelor's button and alyssum.

Among the easiest flowers to grow are the nasturtium, alyssum and California poppy.

To achieve brilliant color in the garden with a minimum of effort, grow petunia and zinnia. They require some care early in the season, but once established they grow luxuriantly, and nothing provides more color.

If snapdragons and asters, though among your flower favorites, are barred from your garden because of the prevalence of rust and wilt, return them to their deserved places by getting rust and wilt resistant varieties from your seed dealer.

In your rock garden, try some of the following: African daisy, linaria, lobelia, statice, verbena and Virginia stock, among the annuals; and columbine, English daisy, forget-me-not and Iceland poppy, of the perennials.

No Sale

A salesman once tried to sell Ed Howe, writer and philosopher of Atchison, Kansas, a fountain pen. "Young man," replied the sage of Potato Hill: "When I dip my pen in the bottle, that is the only time all day that I get any chance to rest. Do you want to work me to death?"

2-WAY RELIEF FOR THE MISERY OF COLDS
RELIEVES THROAT PAIN—RAWNESS
ENTERS BODY THROUGH STOMACH AND INTESTINES TO EASE PAIN
The speed with which Bayer tablets act in relieving the distressing symptoms of colds and accompanying sore throat is utterly amazing . . . and the treatment is simple and pleasant. This is all you do. Crush and dissolve three genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets in one-third glass of water. Then gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back.
This medicinal gargle will act almost like a local anesthetic on the sore, irritated membrane of your throat. Pain eases promptly; rawness is relieved.
You will say it is remarkable. And the few cents it costs effects a big saving over expensive "throat gargles" and strong medicines. And when you buy, see that you get genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

MAGIC CARPET
It doesn't matter what you're thinking of buying—a bar-pin or a baby grand, a new suit for Junior or a set of dining-room furniture—the best place to start your shopping tour is in an easy-chair, with an open newspaper.
The turn of a page will carry you as swiftly as the magic carpet of the Arabian Nights, from one end of the shopping district to the other. You can rely on modern advertising as a guide to good values, you can compare prices and styles, fabrics and finishes, just as though you were standing in a store.
Make a habit of reading the advertisements in this paper every week. They can save you time, energy and money.

ANNOUNCING:
$180,267.00
REDUCTION IN ELECTRIC RATES

Residential and Commercial Customers To Benefit

Lower Rates To Promote Greater Use Of Electricity

New President and Rate Plan Announced By Company

Electricity Now Cheaper Than Ever Before!

The Interstate Power Company announces an annual rate reduction totaling $180,267.00 to electric customers in the area served by this company. This voluntary reduction in rates applies to residential and commercial customers. . . it is a step in a program of establishing rates which will further promote the use of electricity for lighting, labor saving and convenience appliances in the homes of our customers.

Average Reduction Is Equal To Month's Free Service

The reduction we now offer, applicable to April billing, is approximately 8% for the average residential customer. To illustrate the amount of this saving, the average residential customer will save enough during the year on the electric service bill to pay for one month's electricity. It will save enough monthly for some of our customers to pay for the cost of the use of the washing machine, vaccum cleaner or other appliances.

The savings to our residential customers through these reductions will enable them to make better use of our service and aid them to banish household drudgery. We are trying to cooperate with you to make your home a happier, more comfortable and more contented place in which to live.

Expenses Steadily Mounting

These savings to customers are being made in spite of steadily mounting expenses. Our taxes have increased until our annual tax bill is now more than $600,000.00, an increase of nearly $70,000.00 over the amount of taxes paid last year. Other costs have also increased. . . . . coal prices, freight rates, and wages are higher, all of which are considerable items in the Company's operating expenses.

New Board Of Directors... James F. Orr, New President

The stockholders of our Company on March 3 elected a Board of Directors of members who live in the territory we serve. At the same time Mr. James F. Orr was elected president. He is a man who has had considerable experience and who is highly respected in the industry. Among his first announcements is the rate reduction which the Company is now making effective.

May We Have Your Cooperation?

We hope that you will cooperate with our Company in its policy of being a good citizen of each community it serves. If you have any suggestions, Mr. Orr and the new members of the Board of Directors will appreciate a visit or a letter from you. Please help them in their determination to give you the finest electric service at the lowest possible rates.

30 Miles Of Roads In 1938

A highway construction program consisting of approximately 30 miles of grading under contract is in store for Marshall county during 1938 as a result of action taken by the county board of commissioners at their session in Warren in March when it was voted to call for bids on April 5 for the proposed work, according to H. T. Swanson, county highway engineer.

The construction program proposal calls for grading up to standard grade of 11.18 miles of state aid road and 18.6 miles of county roads. The new construction is placed in various parts of the county. The state aid roads will also be graveled later during the season.

Among the state aid jobs scheduled for 1938 construction include the grading of 3.42 miles on SAR 2 in Viking township from the Pembina ridge east to the Soo Line railroad track and the grading of 3.91 miles on SAR 3 in Warrenton and McCrea from the Warren city limits to the Burnside school connecting with the Great Eastern highway. The third state aid raid project is grading 3.85 miles on S. A. R. 4 in Foldahl and Marsh Grove from the ridge east to connect with Trunk highway No. 59. All of these roads are difficult to maintain, especially in winter months, it has been pointed out.

The County Aid roads to be graded include 7 miles on route 31 in Middle River and Tamarac townships, 7 miles on route 40 in New Maine township and Spruce Valley townships and 4.6 miles on route 40 in Tamarac township.

Several other grading projects are also being contemplated with the work to be done by the county's own construction machinery.

At the letting on April 5, the bids will also be received for the season's supply of culverts.—Warren Sheaf.

Friberg Filed For Senator

Eric Friberg, popular Roseau County Representative, filed last week for State Senator from the 67th legislative district and his name will go on the ballot accordingly. While in St. Paul last week he visited the office of Secretary of State Mike Holm and made his filing.

The chances that he will have serious opposition in either the primaries or the general election is very remote since it is generally conceded that he will be an easy winner in the November election.

With such sentiment at large in the district no one seems willing to make the sacrifice of either time or money in addition to an almost assured defeat in the finals.

The candidate for Senator is well versed in parliamentory procedure having served in all the regular and special sessions from the time he was first elected in 1932 to the present time. During that time he has served creditable on several very important conference committees and is held in high esteem by all members of the House. He is known as a man of his word.

It is conceded that he will be a great asset to the district as Senator also since he is already well known to Senators who are serving and all the liberal leadership in that body. His modesty, yet forcefulness of personality, is an asset that many a public person would desire to have themselves.

Mr. Friberg has just completed a period of work as district organizer for the Farmer-Labor Association in this Congressional District, and as a result the district is the best organized in the entire State. And indication of the high esteem in which he is held was the fact that he was chosen, without opposition as 9th District Convention Chairman at Plummer March 5th. His handling of the Convention made still more friends for him.

While Mr. Friberg is well known throughout the 67t legislative district it is planned to hold meetings in all sections of the district so that all voters will have an opportunity to meet him during the spring, summer and fall.—Marshall County Star.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Saustad returned home here on Sunday after spending several weeks on an auto tour to California.

Wanted—Girl for general housework on farm for 4 people. Steady work if satisfactory.

Meet To Organize 4-H Club

Several 4-H members and others interested in that kind of work met at the schoolhouse here on Tuesday evening to discuss the plans of having a club here this year. Mr. R. A. Reierson county agent from Warren, was here to help lay out the work for the season.

Another meeting will be held at Holt in the schoolhouse on Tuesday evening, March 29, when the club will be organized and officers elected to take charge of the work here. Mr. Reierson urged all those interested to come out and help get a good club going here again.

Noted Speaker Coming Here

The Nazareth Lutheran Church will have a guest speaker on Sunday evening when Rev. John E. Gronli, Foreign Mission Secretary of the N. L. C. A. of Minneapolis will speak in the church. His topic will deal with the Centennial of the general church body. The first congregation was organized in 1843 at Muskego, Wis. and elaborate plans are now in action for the commeration of this event five years hence. Rev. Gronli has spent much of his time in the ministry being a missionary in Africa and is a well known speaker. We invite all to attend this meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nohre entertained the following friends and relatives at their home on Saturday evening: Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Daily and son, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Sorenson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith and family, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Moen and family, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sorenson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Tunheim and family, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Garve, Mr. and Mrs. Gust Qualy, Mrs. Olaf Tollefsrud, Leonard Olson, Harry Tollefsrud, and Nohre's week end guests, Ardith Reierson and Esther Lufkin of Thief River Falls.

Basis Of New Farm Act

The new AAA Farm act, the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, continues and strengthens provisions of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act under which the AAA has been operating since the spring of 1936, according to Harry S. Muir chairman of the Minnesota Agricultural Conservation Committee.

Under the new program, cooperating farmers may earn payments as they earned them under the 1936 and 1937 conservation programs. They will be paid for seeding their soil-depleting cash crops within the acreage of allotments for their farms established on the basis of determinations made by county conservation committees, and carrying out a prescribed number of units of soil-building practices, such as seedings of grasses and legumes.

Strengthening and broadening the programs of the last two years, the new Act proviaes for the establishment of marketing quotas, when necessary, as an additional means of stabilizing market supplies of cotton, tobacco, rice, wheat and corn. Marketing quotas will not be effective if disapproved by more than one-third of the farmers voting in a referendum.

The relation of the new farm program to the Agricultural Conservation Program may be summarized by the statement that the special provisions for the five crops in the new Act will strengthen the operation of the Conservation Program. Muir says. The new Act makes it possible to continue the soil conservation measures of the past, and in addition gives farmers an opportunity to protect themselves against the income-reducing effects of both short crops and surpluses.

About 75 neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. Benitt gave them a party last Friday evening to help them celebrate their 20th wedding anniversary. A purse of money was presented to the honored couple.

HOW to SEW

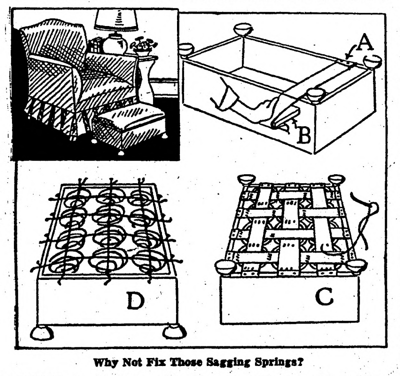
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



Why Not Fix Those Sagging Springs?

SPRINGS in furniture seldom break. The twine that holds them does break and webbing wears out throwing the springs out of position.

To set the springs you will need a ball of twine and a needle such as used by the upholsterer, enough webbing to replace the old, tacks ⅝-inch long with large heads, a block of wood for stretching the webbing, a tack hammer and a tack lifter. Remove the cover from the seat carefully so that it may either be used again or serve as a pattern. Most of the padding may also be used. Observe how each layer of material is fastened in place, so that you may put it back the same way.

Remove the springs and all old tacks. Tack the first strip of webbing to one edge of the bottom of the frame, letting the end extend ½ inch beyond the edge, then fold the end over the first tacks and tack again as at A. Draw the webbing across the frame using the block of wood as a lever to stretch webbing taut as at B. When all the strips have been stretched and tacked across the frame one way, stretch strips of webbing across the other way weaving these over and under the first ones as at C. Now, sew the bottom of each spring to the webbing with the upholsterer's twine and curved needle as shown in this diagram.

Next, turn the frame right side up, drive tacks part way in along the edges; then tie the springs across each way with upholsterer's twine as shown in diagram C. The twine is tied to the tacks and to each spring and regulates the height of the springs—the outside edges usually being lower than the center to make a rounded top. When the springs are regulated evenly, drive the tacks in; then replace burlap or muslin coverings and padding.

TIPS to Gardeners

Plant With Care

EXERCISE care in planting and also in preparing to plant.

Though soil may be rich, it will not produce as it should unless it is prepared thoroughly.

A primary consideration in planting is to have the soil favorably moist; damp, but not wet. If circumstances demand that you plant when the ground is dry, moisten trenches or drills before dropping the seed.

To retain moisture after planting, cover seeds immediately with fine earth and press down firmly.

Harold Coulter, vegetable expert of the Ferry Seed Institute, advises that temperature be considered at the time of planting. Too high a temperature is often as detrimental to seed germination as one too low. A temperature between 65 and 75 degrees is most favorable.

Soil must be loose so seedling sprouts can push through, and roots develop. Where the soil forms a heavy crust, it may sometimes be broken sufficiently to let seedlings through by gently pricking the soil with a rake.

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses CARBOHYDRATES and FATS

Foods That Provide Motive Power For the Body Machinery ★ ★

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York.

THE human body might be compared to a framework filled with machinery. It takes food to build the framework, food to run the machinery and food to keep it working efficiently and this food must be of the proper type.

Last week, I discussed the body building proteins and explained how to distinguish between those which build and repair body tissue, and those that are adequate for maintenance, but not for growth. It is equally important that you should learn something of the fuel foods which are necessary to fire the body engine and furnish motive power to propel the body machinery.

Fuel Foods Keep Us Alive

The body could not function in the absence of fuel foods any more than a machine could run without power, or a car without gas. Every breath requires an expenditure of energy, and so does every movement — from the beating of the heart to the winking of an eye. Even in repose, the body machinery is kept functioning only by an ever-present supply of fuel. For, as long as life continues—even when you are lying perfectly still—you need fuel to carry on the internal work of the body.

Activity Demands Energy Foods

Every type of daily activity, including work and exercise, requires additional fuel. If you walk slowly, you expend twice as much energy as when you sit still. And when you walk fast, you may use up four, five or six times as much energy.

The chief fuel, or energy producing foods, are the carbohydrates—that is, the starches and sugars; and fats. Protein also has some fuel value, but its primary function is to build and repair tissue.

Carbohydrates are quick burning. They might be compared to the flare of a match in a dark room, which gives bright light for an instant, but is soon extinguished. Fat, on the other hand, burns slowly, like a lamp whose wick is turned low.

Danger of Inadequate Fuel Supply

Recently there has been a tendency to minimize the importance of the fats and carbohydrates, due to the craze for dieting. Some of the results of disregarding the absolute necessity for these foods are extreme irritability, and a greater susceptibility to fatigue, nervous diseases, tuberculosis and other infections.

Too Much Fuel Causes Overweight

It is true, however, that an excess of fuel foods will tend to produce overweight. For if we assimilate them, and do not utilize their potential energy in muscular effort, they will be stored —as fat—usually in most inconvenient locations! On the other hand, an excess of any food is a detriment. Therefore the goal should be enough, but not too much, of all necessary foods.

Since both carbohydrates and fats are energy foods, one might expect them to play an interchangeable role in the diet. To a certain extent, they do, although fat, being more concentrated, provides two and one-fourth times as much fuel value as an equal weight of carbohydrate.

But because of the variation in the way these materials are handled by the body, it is generally considered that health is best served when 40 to 50 per cent of the total energy value of foods is provided in the form of carbohydrate and 30 to 35 per cent in the form of fats.

Carbohydrates Are Quickest Fuel

Carbohydrates, which originate chiefly in plant life, are readily converted into heat and muscle energy. Foods rich in carbohydrates include bread, potatoes, macaroni, rice, cooked and ready-to-eat cereals, peanuts, dried and preserved fruits, sugars and syrup.

Sugar furnishes heat more quickly and more abundantly than any other food. But it has a tendency to dull the appetite and is also apt to cause fermentation. Therefore, a large measure of our heat and energy is best secured from starchy foods such as bread, cereals, macaroni and potatoes.

Quick energy can also be obtained from the easily digested sugars of fresh and dried fruits, such as prunes, apricots, raisins and fully ripened bananas.

Here is an interesting and important point which is frequently overlooked in unscientific reducing diets. Fat requires carbohydrates for its proper utilization by the body. That is why women who try to reduce without following a scientifically planned diet frequently become seriously ill as a result of cutting down on carbohydrates while overlooking the fats contained in milk, butter, and other foods.

Relation of Fat To Health

Fats are so necessary to the body economy that it is no exaggeration to say that without fat, life in its higher forms, is impossible. The noted Arctic explorer, Stefansson, found that he could exist satisfactorily on an all-meat diet, provided he ate liberally of fat. On a diet of all lean meat, he became violently ill within a week.

Besides furnishing concentrated energy values, fats help to create the fatty tissue which cushions the nerves and abdominal organs, and forms the pleasing contours of face and figure.

Because it leaves the stomach more slowly than proteins and carbohydrates, fat retards the digestion of these food groups somewhat, and thus gives staying power to a meal. At the same time it promotes the flow of pancreatic juice and bile, thus helping in the assimilation of other foods. Foods rich in fat include butter, cheese, egg yolk, cooking fats and oils, margarine, olives, pastry, peanut butter, most nuts except chestnuts and lichi nuts, various kinds of sausage and fried foods.

Anger Destroys Fat Reserves

Experiments have demonstrated why nervous, irritable individuals are usually thin, while those with a serene temperament often accumulate weight. It has been proven that anger and fright increase the amount of fat in the blood and remove a corresponding amount of fat from its usual storage place beneath the skin. A fit of anger may take off more fat than an hour's exercise, or two or three days of enforced diet. Thus the person who allows himself to become upset continually withdraws the fat reserve from his body. Such persons could profit, perhaps, by taking more of the fat-forming foods.

But whether the members of your family are good natured, or irritable, young or old, they need a constant supply of fuel foods—at every meal, every day. Fuel foods produce energy—and energy is the motive power of life and work and thought

Your Food Is Your Fate

THE third of the series of articles entitled "What to Eat and Why," written by C. Houston Goudiss, the eminent food authority, author and radio lecturer, appears in this issue.

In these articles Mr. Goudiss tells how you can be strong, beautiful, wise and rear healthy children by combining the right food materials in the diet. He points out the vast influence which food wields over one's life.

The housewife and mother who desires to know what foods will benefit her family the most will do well to read these articles week by week and make a scrapbook of them for ready reference.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Brightening the Closet.—If the walls and woodwork of the dark clothes closet are painted white it will make it much lighter and easier to find things.

* * *

When Cooking Cheese.—In cooking anything with cheese use a low temperature, because intense heat makes cheese tough and stringy.

* * *

Washing Blankets. — Do not crowd the washing machine full of blankets or other woolens. Allow plenty of space for the articles to soak. There will then be less strain on them.

* * *

Lemon Slices in Punch.—Lemon halves and slices are apt to give a bitter taste to punch if they are left in it. It is best to wait until serving time to add them.

* * *

Sugaring Doughnuts.—To dust doughnuts with sugar place the sugar in a paper sack and put in six doughnuts at a time. Hold the top of the sack together and shake it. The doughnuts will then be quickly coated with sugar.

* * *

Measuring Flour.—Wheat flour is one of the easiest ingredients in baking to mismeasure. For best results always sift flour and measure by spoonfuls into a cup, being careful not to shake the filled cup.

"Home-Wrecking" Qualities of Poor Furniture Polish

How often a houseful of fine furniture and handsome woodwork is spoiled by the use of a poor furniture polish! There are many polishes on the market today—some fair, some good, others excellent for luster and long life of the finish! The best is non-greasy, because made with a fine, light-oil base! In time, furniture and woodwork can be ruined by the persistent application of a cheap, poor polish! Such polish will contain kerosene, harsh abrasives and harmful acids—destructive elements, that are unseen and unsuspected! The housewife may use one of these polishes, feeling that she is economically keeping her furniture polished—but this is poorest economy, if she values her furniture (and what housewife does not?). The furniture in a home constitutes the largest part of the furnishings—and will show up like "sore thumbs" when dried out, cracked or checked. This is just what occurs, when other than a reputable oil polish is used! Too, a quality oil polish is less expensive! Less is used at one time—for it's undiluted. The resultant glow is deeper, richer, more lasting! Best of all, the finish of the furniture and woodwork is properly "fed" and kept in prime condition! So beware of harsh, "bargain" polishes—for through them, the furniture suffers!

WHEN YOU CLEAN HOUSE USE O-CEDAR—THE POLISH THAT CLEANS AND PRESERVES YOUR FURNITURE

More women use O-Cedar Polish than any other kind—for furniture, woodwork and floors. It CLEANS as it POLISHES

Austrian Youths Celebrate Hitler Coup

International News Radiophoto.

A contingent of the Hitler Youth Organization of Austria are shown parading through the streets of Vienna in celebration of the Nazis' triumphant march into Austria. The successful Nazi coup spelled the end of Austria's existence as a nation and its beginning as a state of the German reich.

"The Law" in Austria Today

These German anti-aircraft machine gunners and thousands of others like them are enforcing Germany's will on Austria now, since that country became a part of the German reich in Hitler's bloodless coup. When this photograph was made these gunners were merely playing at war in maneuvers at Kissingen, Germany.

NAZI ARMY CHIEF

Field Marshal Herman Wilhelm Goering, under whose direction the plans for the Nazification of Austria were successfully completed. Addressing an audience in Berlin following the coup, he declared that Germany is determined further to increase her army.

When Hitler Made Austria a German State

1—Adolf Hitler, who made a triumphant entry into Vienna after Germany took undisputed possession of Austria in a bloodless coup, defying the world to interfere. 2—On to Austria went 100,000 crack German troops like these as Hitler captured his homeland for the reich. 3—Armed German trucks and tanks such as these patroled the streets of Vienna.

HITLER LIEUTENANT

Arthur Seyss-Inquart, made chancellor of Austria by decree of Adolf Hitler, following the resignation of Kurt Schuschnigg and the successful Nazi coup.

Czechoslovakia May Be Next

With informed observers predicting that Czechoslovakia will be the next object of Adolf Hitler's Pan-German campaign, following his bloodless subjugation of Austria, the government of Czechoslovakia has reiterated its previous warning that it will resist to the last any attempt to conquer it. President Edouard Benes (center) is shown conferring with some of his military chiefs during army maneuvers recently.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Among his companions in barnstorming, Glenn L. Martin was known as "The Dude," although his carefully tailored flying suits were always black, including their elaborate braid trimmings. His somewhat mortuary get-up and behavior gave an impression of great conservatism, and it is not surprising that he got backing from the bankers when other aviators failed.

Martin Had Get-Up of Mortician

A few months ago, he said his Glenn L. Martin company, of Baltimore, making planes, had a backlog of $15,500,000.

He told the house naval affairs committee there should be a 100 per cent increase in air armaments, that foreign nations are spending ten times as much as the United States. He would build a 250,000-pound bomber, carrying 30 men and a 4,000-pound bomb load 11,000 miles.

In 1912, this writer saw him put an inflated inner tube around his neck, strap a compass on his leg and take off to sea, at Avalon bay, Los Angeles, in a flying laundry wagon on which he had rigged a single wooden pontoon. He was bound for Catalina island, 20 miles away. It looked like suicide.

He not only made it, but picked up again at Catalina and finished the round trip, blanking Bleriot, whose flight over the British channel was a one-way excursion. He had made the plane in an abandoned church.

Round Trip Sea Flight Is Success

The flight got him world attention. Then he staged a plane coyote hunt, dropped a ball into a catcher's mitt and a bouquet into the arms of a beauty contest queen.

This air extravaganza did not last long. In 1913, he built and sold two model TT war planes to the army, and has been building fighting craft ever since, with the exception of trans-Pacific Clippers.

He grew up in Mackburg, Iowa, built a pusher plane in his backyard and flew it in 1908. He is fifty-two.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, in his seersucker suit and his rumpled hat, frequently looked as if he had been sleeping under a bridge, especially in the midst of a hard campaign. His son, William Jennings Bryan, Jr., is fussy about his dress, severely and fastidiously groomed, with a jaunty little moustache and a nice collection of malacca sticks, sports clothes, and varied haberdashery.

Bryan, Jr., Fastidious About Dress

He is in the news now as he becomes collector of customs at the port of Los Angeles, his first recognition by the California Democracy, in whose vineyard he has labored for years.

When his father laid down his staff and scrip at Dayton, Tenn., he picked from the legacy only two things—free silver and anti-evolution. He is quite unmoved by oratory, speaking with calm, legalistic precision, with no gift for the resounding or oracular.

He has made spirited forays against this or that, notably Upton Sinclair's "Epic" heresy of 1934, but with no such impassioned fervor as that which inspired his father. But, when occasion offers, he puts in a word for silver, or against evolution.

Will Speak Good Word for Silver

After the Dayton trial and his father's death, he made a knightly vow that his lance always should be leveled against this ignoble theory of man's origin. But nobody seems to be bringing that up now. The argument is shifting to where man is going.

He attended the University of Nebraska three years, studied law at Georgetown university, went to Arizona on account of his wife's health, and practiced law, first in Arizona and then in Los Angeles. He is fifty years old.

Origin of Word Assassin

The word assassin originated in Persia in the Eleventh century. It derives from hashish, the intoxicating Indian drug which at that time was used by notorious murderers under one Hasan-i-Sabbah to work themselves into the high state of ruthlessness required for their crimes. As a tactic in attacking vested authority assassination is as old as man. It is notably the most ubiquitous and immediate of dangers to autocratic government, as has been proved by the violent deaths of a high percentage of dictators from Julius Caesar to those of modern times.

Strange Facts

He Sat On His Own Brains

FROM the rocks of a pre-historic era have been taken the fossil remains of huge reptiles. Some of these mighty creatures reached a length of 80 feet and it has been estimated that some of them weighed over 40 tons. An idea of the size may be gained by comparing them with elephants, which usually weigh four or five tons.

There were many kinds of these reptiles, but the most interesting ones were the huge land reptiles called dinosaurs. One of these monsters, called Stegosaurus, had a brain lying in its backbone between its hips that was twenty times as large as its true brain in its head.

Dinosaur fossils have been found in all the continents, but chiefly in North America, Asia, Africa, and South America; and the most wonderful dinosaur on record is in the Great Plains region of the United States. In Nebraska, Dakota, Wyoming, and Colorado so many fossil dinosaur bones have been unearthed that this region is called a dinosaur "cemetery." As early as 1872 great bones were picked up from the surface of the ground to the east of Medicine Bow, Wyo., and since then hundreds of tons of rocks of this region containing fossil bones have been shipped to the museums for mounting and study.

Grade crossings are the second most prolific source of fatal accidents and serious injuries in which trains are involved, being exceeded only by accidents to trespassers on trains and rights of way.

A Matter of Life or Death

1,700 persons met death at grade crossings in the United States last year. 5,000 more were injured.

The more trains that run over these crossings, the more accidents there are bound to be.

Yet Congress has before it a bill that would compel the railroads to run 600,000 additional trains a year. This bill, called the Train Length Limit Bill, already has been passed by the Senate and is now in the House of Representatives. It limits the length of freight trains to 70 cars.

Paraded as a "safety" measure, its real purpose is to make more employment for train crews.

To cloak its true purpose, it is represented that the "slack" between the cars in long trains results in excessive "shock," particularly when starting or stopping suddenly, and that this is an unwarranted hazard to train crews.

What are the facts?

The Great Northern's accident reports for last year show that not a single trainman was killed or permanently disabled in an accident of this kind. Twenty-one sustained injuries which kept them out of service for more than three days, these accidents occurring on short trains as well as long trains.

Accidents from other causes were more numerous and much more serious. Six members of freight crews were killed—3 on short trains and 3 on long trains. Two were permanently disabled—both on trains of less than 70 cars. Forty-four sustained injuries which kept them out of service for more than three days—37 on short trains; only 7 on long trains.

The Great Northern ran 29,000 trains of more than 70 cars last year. If a 70-car limit had been in effect, it would have been necessary to have run 22,000 additional trains. Accidents to trainmen would have increased proportionately.

More trains would have meant more accidents to maintenance men and workers in the railroad yards. The 22,000 additional trains would have increased the possibility of disastrous collisions involving passenger as well as freight trains. Accidents at grade crossings would have increased in the same ratio as the increase in the number of trains.

This is the price—in life and limb—proposed to be paid in order to create wasteful employment.

The Swedish Tercentenary

Plans for Minnesota's participation in the Swedish Tercentenary celebration to be held during the coming summer were announced recently by Senator Victor E. Lawson, chairman of the Minnesota commission for the celebration. The festivities will mark the three-hundredth anniversary of the arrival near the present site of Wilmington, Delaware, of a party of Swedish settlers on March 29, 1638. There they established the first Swedish colony in America.

The celebration will open on June 27, when an official party from Sweden, including the crown prince and princess, government and church leaders, educators, and others, will arrive at Wilmington on the "Kungsholm," the flagship of the Swedish-American Line. On the same day a monument designed by the great Swedish sculptor, Carl Miles, to mark the spot where the first Swedish pioneers landed will be unveiled. Participating in this ceremony will be President Roosevelt and the Governors of many states, including Governor Benson of Minnesota.

On June 28 the visitors will go to Philadelphia to attend the dedication of the new American-Swedish museum at that place. A banquet which, it is expected, will be attended by ten thousand people, and a concert in which all Swedish singing societies in America will take part will follow. A parade of the states and a pageant have been arranged for June 29.

Upon the conclusions of these ceremonies in the East, visitors from abroad will turn to other parts of the nation. It is expected that Crown Prince Gustaf Adolph and his party will spend two days in Minnesota. where they will attend a huge celebration in the Minneapolis auditorium. Plans for local celebrations are being made in many Minnesota communities having large Swedish populations.

A. P. Thompson, manager of the Tangreen Lumber Company informed the News that his company has just received a carload of new lumber from the west coast and are now ready for spring business. In a few days they will receive a car of shingles and siding from the west.

According to reports farmers in the west end of the county have been in the fields seeding the past week. Some farmers have already put in several hundred acres of wheat up to Saturday.

Farmer-Labor Convention Gives Benson Unanimous Endorsement

Tumultously indorsing Governor Elmer A. Benson for reelection, the 1,200 delegates to the annual state convention of the Farmer-Labor Association held at Duluth last week adopted a platform pledged "to enact into law the progressive demands of the people."

Other indorsements, besides that for Benson, include: Wm. S. Ervin, incumbent, for attorney-general; C. A. Halvorson, incumbent, for state treasurer; Paul A. Rasmussen, present state budget commissioner, for secretary of state; John T. Lyons, Le Centre, for state auditor; Harold R. Atwood, incumbent, for railroad and warehouse commissioner; John J. Kinzer, state representative from Cold Spring and liberal floor leader in the last Legislature, for lieutenant-governor; I. C. Strout, Brainard, for clerk of the Supreme Court.

Given Convention Support

Chief Justice Henry M. Gallagher, Associate Justice Harry H. Peterson, and Carl J. Eastvold, state representative from Ortonville, were pledged the support of the convention in the nonpartisan supreme court election.

Chief provisions of the state section of the platform ask reduction of the income tax in the lower brackets, exemption of all homesteads up to $5,000 of value from the state property tax, protection of business "against predatory monopolies"; and ask federal legislation granting costs of production to the farmer, RFC loans at lower rates of interest, and opposition to entangling alliances and increased armaments.

Stage Wild Demonstration

Following the unanimous indorsement of Governor Benson, the delegates staged an enthusiastic demonstration which lasted for fifteen minutes before the Governor was able to make himself heard.

"I want to thank you for the support you have given me in past years, and for the support shown me here tonight." Governor Benson was finally able to say. "I shall continne the fight for the people upon the principles adopted by you here tonight."

The platform points out that "throughout the world the democratic rights of the people are being challenged," and pledges the Farmer-Labor movement "to carry forward the people's demands for democracy, social justice, economic security, and peace."

State Proposals

For state legislation, the platform asks:

Opposition to all sales taxes.

Exemption of homesteads up to $5,000 of their valuation from the state property tax (homesteads are now exempt up to $4,000 of their valuation following passage by the 1937 Legislature of the exemption measure advocated by Governor Benson.)

Reduction of the state income tax for the lower income brackets.

Civil Service.

State adult education program.

A state labor relations act.

A campaign "to protect Minnesota business against predatory monopolies."

Federal Legislation

The platform asks federal legislation for:

Federal crop insurance, and individual ownership of farms encouraged by refinancing the farmer at lower rates of interest.

Fair minimum price for major farm commodities based upon the cost of production at a fair exchange value.

Reduction of taxes upon small business and small incomes, no tax exempt securities, and protection of the independent merchant by passage of the Patman chain store tax bill.

No relief or WPA cuts, and extension of social security program to include other groups where practical.

Opposition to entangling alliances, to increased armaments, loans to aggressor warring nations, and defeat of the Sheppasd-May dictatorship bill.

Government ownership of the federal reserve system.

Enactment of the anti-lynch bill "and other measures designed to protect the civil rights of the people."

Resolutions Passed

Atwood was endorsed for reelection after making assurances to the delegates that he intended to support the entire ticket and the platform adopted by the convention, and after the administration has withdrawn its objections to his indorsement. The state's labor group made a vigorous plea for the Atwood indorsement.

Resolutions adopted by the convention include asking: a pardon for Tom Mooney, famous California labor prisoner; equal wages for employed women; passage of the Frazer-Lemke bill; a boycott of all Japanese goods; a state youth act; payment of state aid to schools in full; higher WPA wages; a state housing administration; and opposition to the to the big navy bill now before Congress.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN

The Augusta, Wisconsin, Union writes this about children on tricycles in the streets: "Children, my hasty friend, were here long before you or your automobile were ever thought of. All the automobiles on earth are not worth the life of one little boy on a tricycle. Any competent garage mechanic can put a car together, however badly it is smashed, but nobody on earth can put a child together once its life has been crushed out. We don't know what that child may some day be, but we know what you are, and it's unimportant. We could get along without you, but we can't spare a single little boy on this street."

Well said, Mr. Editor, and congratulations to you for the splendid thought. It's up to us motorists to protect those children who are so full of life and play and fun. Think while you drive.

Attended F-L Convention

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson, Tom Risdal and Chas. Skoglund from here attended the State Farmer-Labor convention at Duluth last week. They left Thursday by car and returned late Sunday evening. Mr. Hanson served on the Credentials Committee at the convention and was quite busy most of the time. Those of you who got a copy of the Minneapolis Journal for Sunday will find a picture in that paper of Mr. Risdal and Mr. Skoglund standing up taking a good stretch during a short rest period in the afternoon on Saturday at the convention.

Others who attended from Marshall County were Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Toftner, Levi G. Johnson, C. G. Swedberg all of Warren and Gust Sustad of Viking. Marshall County had a full delegation at the convention and the delegates going in two cars kept company together and enjoyed a fine trip.

Used Seed Money For Trip

Edward E. Ortloff, Ray, N. D. found Tuesday that it is a serious business to borrow money from the government for seed and then spend it for something else.

Judge George F. Sullivan, St. Paul, sentenced him in federal court to serve six months in the county jail for spending $271 which he borrowed for seed for purposes other than were cited in his seed loan application.

Ortloff said he decided it was too dry to plant seed last year so he used the money to pay up a few bills and the balance on a trip to Kalispell, Mont., to see if he could locate more suitable farm land.

"The government is doing everything it can to help honest farmers who need help in obtaining seed," Judge Sullivan said, "but, it appears you are not that type of a farmer."

Mrs. L. Sagstuen and son Raymond made two trips to Grand Forks last week where they took treatments from a doctor there.

Visitors Are Welcome

The period of March 31st to April 5th has been designated as Open House Week, for the Civilian Conservation Corps in commemoration of the 5th anniversary of the founding of that organization. During this time CCC Companies throughout the entire nation will select one or more days for conducting an Open House, which will enable the public to inspect the camps and learn something of the work projects on which enrollees are engaged. The public is cordially invited to visit Company 710, located at Thief Lake, near Middle River, on Sunday, April 3rd, that date having been selected as official visitors' day by the camp. During the past year this camp has been engaged in the restoration development of the Mud Lake Migratory Waterfowl Refuge, under the direction of the United States Bureau of Biological Survey.

Guides will be available to show visitors about the camp premises as well as work projects on the Mud Lake Area. The hours of 1 to 3:30 p. m. will be devoted to inspection of the barracks, educational exhibits, work shop, recreation hall, mess hall, and other camp buildings. From 3:30 to 6 p. m. a tour of the work projects on the Mud Lake area will be conducted under the guidance of the Camp Superindent and assistants. Construction activities will be explained during this tour. The tour will end with inspection of the administration buildings at Mud Lake Headquarters site.

The weather over the week end was just dandy for getting the ground in shape for spring work. Farmers here were just ready to go in the fields when on Monday evening we had a good rain which will keep them away from seeding for a few days.

Mrs. Halvor Brunsvold of Hanlantown, Iowa, arrived here on Tuesday for a visit with relatives and to look after her property here. She owns the house rented by C. A. Davis.

Well equipped, well-drilled, these steel-helmeted Polish troops were photographed at Bydyosoz recently as they marched past their commander in chief, General Smigly-Rydz. ## C. Houston Goudiss Describes the Precious MINERAL SALTS

That You Must Have in Order to Build Strong Bones, Sound Teeth, Healthy Nerves, Rich Red Blood

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York.

THE human body is often compared to a machine, but it is far more wonderful, far more complex, than the most intricate machine ever designed to run without stopping, day in and day out, for upwards of 70 years, is also a fully equipped chemical laboratory. For if a chemist should grind a man to bits and analyze the pieces, he would find at least 18 chemical elements, and possibly traces of several others.

In addition to oxygen, carbon, hydrogen and nitrogen, the body contains a wide variety of mineral materials, which are necessary to its proper functioning—and even to life itself. The list includes calcium, phosphorus, potassium, sulphur, sodium, chlorine, magnesium, iron, manganese, iodine and copper. All these substances must be furnished to the growing child—through food and drink—and generous amounts must also be supplied daily in the diet of adults, to replace the minerals that are constantly being used up.

Minerals Necessary to Life

It is vitally important that the homemaker should understand the function of these various salts and where they can be found. For if certain minerals are lacking in the body, the heart will stop beating. Without others, the bones cannot form properly. Still others are responsible for the rich red blood that makes the difference between a healthy person and a sickly one. Laboratory experiments have proved that if you leave out the smallest trace of the mineral known as manganese, you destroy the love of a mother for her child. And nutritionists—but unfortunately not mothers—are well aware that less than a thousandth of an ounce of iodine makes all the difference between a normal man and an imbecile.

Calcium—Captain of Minerals

Calcium deserves its ranking position as the captain of the minerals, because it builds the bones, or body framework. And the bony skeleton is to the human being what steel is to a building. Calcium is also the chief constituent of the teeth and upon healthy teeth rests the health of the digestive system and, in turn, the entire body. For food that is improperly masticated is imperfectly digested and fails to nourish properly.

About 99 per cent of the calcium in the body is found in the teeth and bones. If the body does not receive an adequate supply of this mineral in pre-natal life and during the growing years, the bones will be porous, distorted and easily broken, and the teeth will develop cavities and eventually may fall out.

In addition to being the principal material for making and maintaining the bones and teeth, calcium increases the strength and pulsations of the heart and helps the blood coagulate in case of injury, thus keeping you and your loved ones from bleeding to death. That is why an extra supply of calcium is fed to patients just before an operation.

Calcium Builds Will Power

There is a close relationship between calcium and sound, healthy nerves. And this precious substance likewise helps us to concentrate mentally—it strengthens our will power—and assists us in acquiring that "do or die" attitude toward life, which is essential in an age when we must all struggle or go under.

Yet despite its importance, it is estimated by that outstanding authority, Henry C. Sherman, Professor of Nutrition at Teachers College, Columbia University, that one-half of the American people—even those with plenty of money—are literally starving for calcium, because they do not know the food sources of this vitally important mineral.

Where to Obtain Calcium

The foremost sources of calcium are milk and cheese, which is milk in concentrated form. It is chiefly to provide adequate calcium that homemakers must follow the rule of a quart of milk daily for every child, and a pint for each adult.

Vegetables, such as spinach, lettuce, celery, asparagus, string beans, cabbage, carrots and cauliflower are also a good supplementary source of calcium. And some fruits, such as oranges, figs, strawberries and bananas likewise supply significant amounts.

Indispensable Phosphorus

Like calcium, phosphorus is required by the body in relatively large amounts, and like calcium, it is especially important in the diet of children, because it is deposited in the bones, along with calcium, as calcium phosphate.

Phosphorus is indispensable for all the active tissues in the body and plays an important part in regulating the neutrality of the blood. It can be obtained from whole grain cereals, eggs, dried beans, cheese, lean meats, and root and leafy vegetables.

Iron—King Pin of Them All

But measured in terms of food essentials, iron is king pin of them all. It is the supreme element in nutrition because it is necessary for the formation of the hemoglobin or red pigment in the blood. And it is the hemoglobin which carries purifying oxygen to every cell in the body. Recently, it has been discovered that copper is required for the proper utilization of iron.

"Red blooded" is a term understood by everyone to denote health and strength, and it is iron that makes us red blooded. When your children grow pale and listless, lose their pep and lack appetite, it is likely that they are starving for iron. If you become short of breath and "pant" when going up hill, or upstairs, even though there is nothing wrong with your heart or lungs, the chances are that there is insufficient red pigment in the blood—not enough to take up an adequate supply of oxygen and carry it to the millions of cells throughout the body.

There is no excuse for cheating yourself or your children of a full measure of iron, for this mineral can easily be obtained from liver, egg yolk, whole grain cereals, molasses, dried fruits, dried peas and beans, nuts, lean meats and green vegetables.

Iodine—Molder of Men

Almost everyone has heard that iodine is the mineral which helps to prevent that disfiguring enlargement of the neck, known as simple goiter. But few people realize that it is the principal constituent of thyroxin, secretion of the thyroid gland, and that the thyroid functions normally only when sufficient iodine is available.

A wide variety of physiological disorders have been laid to iodine hunger. Obesity is frequently the result of thyroid disturbance. Specialists contend that stubborn skin diseases are associated with disorders of this gland. Many people are accused of laziness who are really suffering from thyroid deficiency. And competent authorities claim that the thyroid likewise influences mental make-up and emotional tendencies.

Iodine is found chiefly in seafood and in fruits and vegetables grown near the sea. In inland regions, where soil and water are poor in iodine, health authorities frequently add it to the drinking water. And the use of iodized salt is also recommended. By these simple measures, thousands of growing children can be saved from the disastrous results of iodine deficiency.

In general, it can be said that if the minerals calcium, phosphorus, iron and iodine are supplied in adequate amounts, the other minerals will be automatically furnished.

But every homemaker should make it her solemn responsibility to provide these four in abundance. For only in that way can you insure optimal growth in children, develop vigorous health in adults, and maintain the highest possible tone of every organ in the body.

An Invaluable Aid To the Housewife

IN THIS issue you will find the fourth of the series of articles written by C. Houston Goudiss, famous food expert whose books, radio talks and lectures have made him known all over the country.

In this article Mr. Goudiss discusses the vitally important subject, "Mineral Salts." He shows the necessity of these materials in the diet, and their relation to the building of a strong heart, healthy nerves, rich red blood, strong bones and sound teeth. He also gives the food sources of these salts.

Read each one of these articles as they appear weekly in this newspaper. They will prove invaluable to the housewife in assisting her to keep the entire family mentally and physically fit.

Breakfast Foods

Mass production of popular brands of breakfast foods to meet the demand created by advertising has greatly reduced the price of many of the advertised brands. The sale of these foods adds materially to the demand and consumption of farm products in the United States.

A Splendid "Service" for Floors

Floors receive rougher treatment than any other part of the home—and it is floors that show up to poorest advantage when neglected—best advantage, when properly cared for! Up to now, attractive floors have required some little time and attention, but this is no longer necessary. For into the field of domestic preparations has come "self-polishing wax"—liquid-smooth, simple to apply, lovely to see. This remarkable preparation goes on easily, quickly, and dries in 20 minutes! Its results are 4-fold: The floors are protected—they are preserved—they stay freshly-clean longer—and they are beautified! A quality self-polishing wax protects and preserves, by forming a film over the surface—hard enough to withstand friction and grinding wear-and-tear. It induces floors to stay clean longer, because dirt and grease cannot become imbedded in the wood. It beautifies, because it is shimmering, transparent, and brings out the natural beauty of the wood. And what more could the home-maker ask for? There are, however, various qualities of self-polishing wax available. Only the best should be used, for both the appearance and condition of the floors. But the finest self-polishing wax is a joy to use—its lasting results a joy to see!

FLOORS POLISH THEMSELVES

...with O-Cedar Self-Polishing Wax. No rubbing—simply spread it on and let it dry—then watch your floors sparkle! Non-slippery, long-wearing—eliminates scrubbing—dusting alone keeps floors clean.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Big beefy, handsome Joseph Buerckel, forty years old, with hard fists and a whip-lash tongue, is Hitler's grand marshal of the Nazi subjugation of Austria. To the surprise of Nazi home talent in Austria, he is given entire charge of the fusion and subordination of the Austrian Nazis by Berlin.

Hard Fists to Nazify Austrians

He was a poor schoolmaster who worked his way up by continuous and diligent Jew-hating. While less earnest and industrious young men were wasting their time, he was working nights, Sundays and holidays on this, his chosen career.

Against stiff competition, it took him years to gain distinction, but at last he came to outrank even the illustrious Julius Streicher in long-distance anti-Semitism.

He was born in the Palatinate, the south German territory adjoining the Saar. He was in the World war, in the closing years, and joined the Hitler movement soon after the Munich beer hall putsch in 1923.

He was a good rough-and-tumble fighter and organizer and was advanced rapidly in the more overt and violent party drives.

When Baron von Papen was removed as Saar commissioner, in 1934, and made ambassador to Vienna, Herr Buerckel replaced him. Under his supervision was the jug-handled plebiscite and his the exultant radio voice which told the world that German justice had triumphed.

Saar Post Taught Him Technique

The League of Nations handed him the valley, and he became governor in 1935.

A typically forthright ukase was his Christmas decree against shopping in Jewish stores.

"If you try to get out of it," he said, "by pretending that your wife did the shopping, it merely shows that an unreal Nazi spirit prevails in your home, and you are not a he-man, but a fool."

YOUNG Jan G. Masaryk, Czech minister to the Court of St. James, had a fervent belief in the Kellogg and Locarno pacts. He once said, "They are splendid instruments of a world order of peace and stability." Now he calls at the British foreign office, perhaps to hint that something seems to have gone wrong.

Czech Sees Fadeout of Peace Hope

He is the son of the late Dr. Thomas Masaryk, first president of Czechoslovakia. His mother was an American, born and reared in Brooklyn, and so is his wife, the former Mrs. Francis Crane Leatherbee, daughter of Charles R. Crane, the widely known manufacturer and industrialist. He has spent much time in America.

At the age of eighteen, he ran away from the University of Prague, in the early years of the war, and worked in a factory at Bridgeport, Conn. He returned home and finished his studies, and was the first Czech minister to the United States in 1919.

He has his famous father's impassioned belief in democracy, and has been its eloquent defender in central Europe, where his country is Horatius at the Bridge.

THE history of this age will be hard to unscramble. Japan can't take a belt at a local power baron without landing on an American stockholder. Dr. Joji Matsumoto warned the government not to get in trouble with American investors by nationalizing its electric power industry.

Japs Learn Power Can Be Headache

This would endanger investments of $75,000,000, he contended, mostly held in this country.

He is Japan's leading corporation lawyer and one of its most important financiers, an officer of the Capital Rehabilitation Aid company, which has a quaint sound but which is understandable even in the Occident.

Sixty years old, he is a former professor of law at the Tokyo Imperial university, from which he was graduated. He is a director of the Tokyo Gas company and several other corporations, and was vice president of the South Manchurian railway.

Spain's Romeo and Juliet

The "Lovers of Teruel," Spain's Romeo and Juliet, form one of the most ancient legends of Spain. They were Diego de Marcilla and Isabel de Segura and lived in Teruel during the Thirteenth century under the reign of King James of Aragon. They parted because of family disapproval and languished and died. Their bodies were mummified and they were buried in the chapel of the church of San Pedro.

TIPS to Gardeners

Young Garden Care

THE value of a garden plant, vegetable or flower, depends greatly upon the start it gets; so give the seedlings ample care.

Begin cultivation as soon as rows are visible, if the soil is not wet. Work close to the small plants, cultivating shallower as they grow to avoid injury to root growth.

Cltivate at least once a week.

Watering should not be necessary the first week or ten days after seeds have sprouted. Later, young plants may be watered one of two ways: Mark a shallow trench about four inches from the row and run it full of water. Or, using a fine spray, apply water from directly above plants. Watering is most effective when it closely follows cultivation.

Small plants should be thinned, as directed on packets, to allow proper development. Certain vegetables may be used as thinned. For instance, onions thinned may be used as green onions, and lettuce may be picked for immediate use, leaving smaller leaves to develop.

HOW to SEW

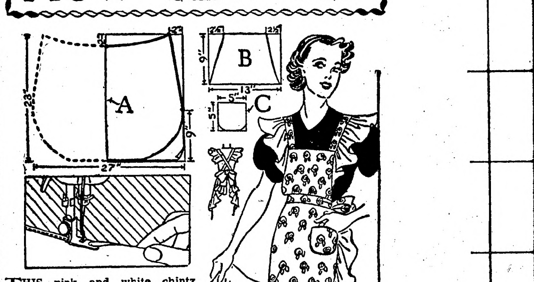
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



THIS pink and white chintz apron with pink gingham frills should inspire anyone to make long strides towards the kitchen. It is easy to cut. The material required is 1½ yards of 36-inch-wide chintz or cotton print and one yard of plain material.

For the skirt of the apron, cut a piece of paper or cloth 27 inches wide and 23 inches deep. Fold this lengthwise through the center, as at A, then measure down from the top of the fold and in from the corners the distances indicated in the diagram and mark the dots. Using the dots as a guide, mark the outline of the apron skirt as you see it in the diagram. The dimensions for shaping the bib are given in the diagram at B. The pocket is a 5-inch square with lower corners rounded as shown here at C. The apron ties are cut 6 inches wide and 36 inches long. The strip for the belt should be cut 2½ inches wide and a facing strip the same width should be cut for it. The shoulder straps are cut 4 inches wide and then creased lengthwise through the center.

The strips of the plain material for the ruffles are cut 6 inches wide. The ruffle material before it is gathered should be 2½ times the length of the space it is to fill after gathering. Use the machine hemmer foot shown here at the lower left for hemming the ruffles and the machine ruffler for gathering them.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' latest book—Gifts and Embroidery number—is now ready. Ninety embroidery stitches are illustrated; also table settings; crochet; embroidery designing; fabric repairing; novelty gifts and dress accessories. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions. Available to readers who will send name and address and enclose 25 cents (coin preferred). Just address Mrs. Spears, 210 So. Desplaines St., Chicago.

Ask Me Another

A General Quiz

1. Which of our states has only three counties?
2. What is the record made in the major baseball leagues for circling the bases?
3. When was paper money first issued in this country?
4. Why is the stage referred to as the legitimate stage?
5. Were any decisive battles fought on German soil during the World war?
6. Is the new San Francisco-Oakland bridge high enough to permit all boats to pass under it?
7. In the expression, "Poor as Job's turkey," is the Job of the Old Testament meant?

The Answers

1. The state of Delaware has only three counties. It has only one city (Wilmington) with a population of over 100,000.
2. The recognized record for circling the bases is 13.4 seconds, made by Evar Swanson of the Cincinnati Reds, September 15, 1929.
3. In 1690 by the Massachusetts Bay colony. It was gradually issued by other colonies until in general use by all.
4. It is so called in the sense of its being normal, regular, conformable to a recognized standard type.
5. No.
6. The vertical clearance at the center of the bridge is 220 feet above mean high water, so boats can easily pass under it.
7. As turkey is American by origin, it seems incorrect to associate this Job with the ancient Hebrew. Poor, of course, refers to a thin and weak fowl, not to the lack of money.

C. Houston Goudiss

We announce with pride a new feature in this issue, "What You Eat and Why," by C. Houston Goudiss, noted food authority, radio speaker, author and lecturer, famous as the man who knows food "from soil to serving, from table to tissue."

One of these articles will appear each week, and we know housewives and mothers will look forward to them for the accurate, worthwhile information they contain on foods and their relation to health. This is not a recipe column. Mr. Goudiss has designed it to serve as a link between laboratory and layman in the food field, interpreting modern scientific knowledge in the language of the home maker, giving her the elemental facts regarding new discoveries and the part played by food in building and maintaining health.

Every woman wants to know what foods will benefit her family and why, and that is just the information that Mr. Goudiss will give. Watch for the articles each week make a scrap book of them for ready reference. They contain valuable information every home maker has been wanting.

School Notes

Freshmen Reporter, Jean Sorum
Sophomore reporter Adelyn Peterson
Editor-in-Chief - Marian Larson

High School

Our congratulations to the Prowlers!

Last Thursday we had another fire drill. Considerable improvement is shown. Last fall it took approximately two minutes and forty seconds for everyone to leave the building. This has been reduced to about forty seconds.

In English, the freshmen had a test on the Shakespearean play, "The Merchant of Venice" last Thursday.

The geometry class is working with trignometric ratios.

The sophomores are studying the simplest plants, bacteria, in biology.

The higher algebra class has completed the study of the bionominal theorem and has begun working with logarithms.

Who Is It

Another member of our Junior class of 1938 is LuLu, who devotes a lot of her spare time to listening to the radio. She likes to hear Benny Goodman swing out and play "Sweet Someone" for her, and she simply exclaims "Oh" when someone sets a banana split or a glass of orange ade before her.

LuLu's a movie fan and her favorite picture is "Dead End" featuring Joel McCrea and Sylvia Sydney, which, in her estimation rank high in the list of stars.

Her future ambition is to be a private secretary and her inspiration is any good secretary. Perhaps we should mention that her pet peeve is teachers and then you'd recognize her. It's our own Florence Kolden.

Grades 3, 4, and 5

The following received a perfect score in spelling last Friday: Dorothy, Leonard Ness, Duane, Mary, Donna Mae, Jules, Geraldine, Sylvia, Delores, Joyce Peterson, Betty, Erma, Orville Ness.

We are working hard now to fill our book report chart. For every book we read, a new colored slip goes on the chart after our name, Dorothy has read the most books so far. Every Friday we have book reports.

Thursday we learned a new song by syllables. We've already learned something of the intermediate tones in music too.

Col O. C. Brenna, Middle River, Minn. announces that he is ready to cry any farm sales or other sales that you may have this spring. Mr. Brenna has 38 years experience in this work and gaurantees that you will be satisfied with his work. For dates see Geo. Fricker at the Marshall County State Bank, Holt, Minn.

Many Ducks-Much Water

The publisher made a little survey trip out to the Mud Lake Game Refuge on Tuesday afternoon and found that the spring waters are fast filling up the old lake bed. With the dam in the Thief River at the northwest corner of the lake being closed the waters from the north are filling the lake bed fast and are at the present time flowing east and over the old road going north thru the east end of the lake past Flakne island.

Thousands of ducks have already come to the Mud Lake area and according to reports of some this is the earliest that they can remember seeing the migration of waterfowl here. The northern flight of all kinds of birds that spend the summer up north are already in Minnesota.

Mr. Quale needs no introduction here and he will discuss a very lively and current topic that should be of interest to all. The Men's Club is the official sponsor for the local Boy Scout Troop.

Biological Survey and a representative of the Farm Security Administration will go over the Mud Lake and Thief Lake projects today with members of the committee of the Eastern Marshall County Protective association.

The purpose of this tour will be to inspect the work done on these projects and to try and arrive at some solution as to what to do about drainage for the area around the projects.

The tour of inspection will start from Holt early this morning and H. O. Hanson will represent the village in the tour.

Filed For Legislature Post

EMIL MORBERG

Emil Morberg, chairman of the Marshall County Farmer-Labor association, filed last week for reelection as representative to the legislature. Mr. Morberg was elected to the post two years ago, defeating Carl A. Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Moberg visited on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Sannes and also Mr. and Mrs. August Johnson east of Thief River Falls.

Revenue Fund On Cash Basis

With a payment of $21,895.85 to the Marshall county revenue fund as a major part of the settlement of the Mud Lake game refuge together with returns from the regular March tax collections, Marshall county's revenue fund will now be operated on a cash basis, an official call for all outstanding revenue fund warrants being made now, according to Levi G. Johnson, county auditor.

A total of $35,000 is being distributed from the tax payments made possible through the establishment of the Mud Lake game refuge, said H. M. Hanson, who supervised the distribution according to Chapter 15 of the Minnesota session laws of 1937. This figure represents the major portion of the distribution, there being only about $5,000 remaining to be distributed at a later date, Mr. Hanson stated.

Before various deductions were made, according to the law, the the state was to receive $3,500, the county revenue fund $14,000, townships in the affected area $7,000, and schools in the area $10,500. Hawever the indebtedness of the school districts or townships paid out of the Mud Lake tax fund is to be deducted first from the amount due the school or township and this amount credited to the county revenue fund. Where an entire township is located within the area and has become disorganized, the money due to the township is to be paid to the county revenue fund and as a result of these provisions the $21,895.85 was placed in the revenve fund.

The affected townships include Agdar, Cedar, Eckvoll, East Valley, Mud Lake, Rollis and Whiteford. The townships will actually receive $2,965.05 as their share of the distribution, the amounts for each depending upon the land taken in the project.

The school districts affected will receive a total of $6,639.10 of which amount the unorganized schools of the county, districts which were located in the area will receive $4,783.75, Mr. Hanson pointed out. The remainder or $1,855,35 will go to the organized districts in the area.

As a result of the operation of the law the county revenue fund is enriched by the $14,000 paid directly, $4,034.95 from the township and $3.860.90 from the school districts.

The Marshall county revenue fund has been operating on a deficit over a period of several years and all warrants on the fund have been drawing interest at six per cent.

During 1937 the county paid out $1,050.30 in interest payments alone on the revenue fund.—Warren Sheaf.

"REFORM" BILL PASSED

Measure Giving President Vast Powers Squeezes Through Senate . . . May Die in House

Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, chairman of the senate finance committee, is here seen telling members of the press what his committee had done and proposed to do to the revenue measure so that it would be less objectionable to business and to the country in general. It already had made radical changes in the bill as it was passed by the house.

Wide Powers for President

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S reorganization bill squeezed through the senate by the close vote of 49 to 42, after a fierce fight. A motion to recommit, which would have virtually killed the measure, was defeated by a vote of 48 to 43.

Opponents of this bill are convinced that it paves the way for a dictatorship in the United States.

The measure was sent on to the house, which already has passed bills covering some of its features. There is no certainty, however, that the senate measure will ever be brought to a vote in the house. Chairman O'Connor of the rules committee said it should be allowed to slumber peacefully in some pigeonhole.

The bill authorizes the President, by executive order, to transfer, regroup, co-ordinate, consolidate, segregate the whole or any part of or abolish any of the 135 bureaus, agencies, and divisions of government.

Excepted from this section, however, are the federal reserve board, the corps of engineers of the United States army and the independent, quasi-judicial and regulatory establishments, such as the board of tax appeals, the communications commission, the federal trade commission, the interstate commerce commission, and the national labor relations board.

It abolishes the civil service commission as now constituted, and the general accounting office. It creates a new "department of welfare," and it authorizes six more $10,000 a year assistants to the President.

Ten Men to Probe TVA

Sen. Bridges

FIVE senators and five representatives will do the investigating of the Tennessee Valley authority, for the resolution for a joint committee inquiry was adopted by the senate without a dissenting vote, and appeared certain of passage by the house. The resolution was introduced by Sen. Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, majority leader. It calls for investigation of charges of malfeasance and dishonesty made by the ousted chairman, A. E. Morgan, and includes eight of the twenty-three charges originally made by Senators Bridges and King in their first resolution for a congressional inquiry. It also calls for a "fishing expedition" into the activities of private utility companies and their injunction suits against the TVA.

Sen. H. Styles Bridges, the New Hampshire Republican, in a radio debate declared the administration was trying to obscure the charges of scandal within the TVA by forcing the inquiry to cover the private utility angle. "The administration's strategy has been to cover up TVA dirt by a phoney counter-attack," he said.

He was answered vigorously by Sen. Lister B. Hill of Alabama.

Legality of President Roosevelt's action in ousting Chairman Morgan from the TVA board is still a matter that the courts probably will be called on to settle. Mr. Roosevelt "removed" Morgan after receiving from Acting Attorney General Jackson an opinion that he possessed the requisite authority. He reported the action to congress and said he had named Harcourt Morgan chairman.

Reasons for the removal of A. E. Morgan as given by the President were that he had made grave and libelous charges against his colleagues and refused to substantiate them at the White House hearings, and that he had obstructed the work of the authority.

Utilities Must Register

IN A 6 to 1 decision, the United States Supreme court upheld the registration provisions of the Wheeler-Rayburn public utility act of 1935, but did not pass on the constitutionality of other parts of the law, including the death sentence for holding companies.

The court sustained an order of the New York Federal District court requiring the Electric Bond and Share company and 14 associated utility holding companies to register with the Securities and Exchange commission or else be denied the use of the mails and other facilities of interstate commerce.

Chief Justice Hughes delivered the court's opinion. Justice McReynolds, who wrote no opinion, was the only dissenter. Justice Cardozo, who is ill, and Justice Reed took no part in the consideration of the case.

Colonel House Dies

Col. House

DEATH after a long illness ended the notable career of Col. Edward M. House, whose name, during the World war era, was familiar to millions. He passed away in New York at the age of seventy-nine years. Shunning publicity and personal glory, House devoted himself untiringly to what he deemed the best interests of his country and for years his influence, especially in international matters, was great. An early supporter of Woodrow Wilson's political fortune he became Wilson's trusted adviser after his election to the presidency and continued to help direct his course immediately before and during the war, making frequent trips to Europe. He was Wilson's personal representative in the Versailles peace conference. Later he and Wilson disagreed and their close association came to an end.

Franco in Catalonia

GENERAL FRANCO'S insurgent army blasted its way through the loyalist lines and entered the province of Catalonia, moving far toward Barcelona, the third capital of the government forces. In this rapid advance about 100 towns were captured in a single day and many villages were demolished by bombardment by a fleet of 200 war planes said to have been contributed by Italy and Germany.

Italy warned France that any French intervention in Spain "might compromise peace on the European continent." The organ of the Italian foreign office, Informazione Diplomatica, published the statement, declaring Italy was "following with greatest attention the campaign of French leftists for intervention in Spain."

Silver Buying Halted

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY MORGENTHAU announced that the United States had discontinued the purchase of Mexican silver until further notice. This probably was a direct result of Mexico's expropriation of foreign oil properties, which Secretary of State Hull considers a hard blow to his "good neighbor" policies. Price of silver was cut 1 cent an ounce.

The United States Treasury has been buying 5,000,000 ounces of newly mined Mexican silver each month, paying around $2,500,000 for it at the artificially maintained New York price, which gave Mexico sizable profits.

Strange Facts

Cat-Tails Served as Asparagus

YOU can eat the fuzzy cat-tail you have seen so often in marshy places. The Iroquois Indians used the root of the cat-tail plant to make flour. The root is starchy and the Indians dried it and made a flour that is similar to flour made from corn or rice. Cat-tail flour was one of the substitutes the Germans learned to use during the World war. The American Indians also used the root to make syrup. It is the tender shoots of the plant that Cossacks enjoy and it is this part of the plant that is sometimes served in England under the name Cossack asparagus.

The fibrous leaves of the cat-tail plant have often been used to make mats and chair seats. The flower is converted into a substitute for cotton or silk and is made into a filling for upholstery. In this form the flower was used as a dressing for wounds in the World war. The ancient people of India dried the cat-tails and used them as torches. In some places where palm leaves are not easily obtained the cat-tail leaves are used on Palm Sunday instead of palms.

The leaves of the cat-tail are grasslike, growing in double rows on the reed stalk and the flower of the plant is the tail which grows at the top of the stalk. The tail is not a single flower but is made up of thousands of little flowers. The familiar fuzzy surface is due to fine down which grows on each flower.

HOW to SEW

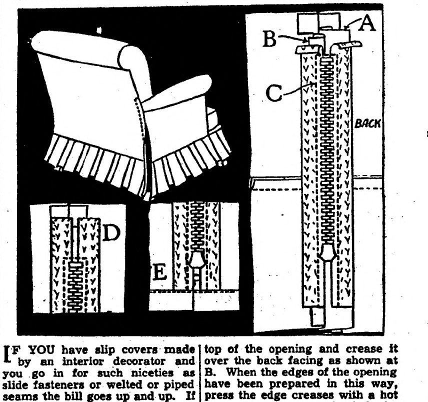
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



IF YOU have slip covers made by an interior decorator and you go in for such niceties as slide fasteners or welted or piped seams the bill goes up and up. If you make the covers yourself all these "extras" amount to very little either in time or money.

Plan the closings for a slip cover during the final fitting when the seams have been basted but not stitched. Sometimes one short placket is all that is needed. Again openings must be left at several points so that the cover will slip on easily.

To apply a slide fastener to a seam placket, turn the slip cover inside out and crease the seam open. Cut a facing strip 1¼ inches wide and 1 inch longer than the opening. Join the facing strip to the back edge of the opening as shown at A. Slash the front of the seam edge ¾ inch above the top of the opening and crease it over the back facing as shown at B. When the edges of the opening have been prepared in this way, press the edge creases with a hot iron. Next, baste and stitch the fastener in place as at C sewing close to the metal. The machine cording foot is useful for this purpose. Do not trim away the tape at the ends of the fastener. Whip the upper ends down as at D, and cover the lower ones with the hem as at E.

NOTE: If you are making new slip covers or curtains or doing other Spring sewing you will want a copy of Mrs. Spears' book SEWING for the Home Decorator. Forty-eight pages of illustrated directions for making curtains for every type of room; dressing tables; lampshades, and numerous other articles used daily in the home. Send name and address, enclosing 25 cents (coin preferred) to Mrs. Spears, 210 So. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Logical Substitute in Absence of Duchess

The late Sir James Crichton Browne used to tell a story at the expense of the late duke of Marlborough and his duchess—who was Consuelo Vanderbilt. The duke had an emu given to him which was sent to the family estate near Oxford—and great interest was taken, especially by the duchess, in the chances of its capacity for procreation. Eventually it laid an egg.

The duke and duchess were away, so a telegram was sent the latter by the estate manager, to apprise her of the event. It read:

"Emu has laid an egg; in absence of your grace have put goose to sit upon it."

TIPS to Gardeners

Combinations

TO INCREASE yield from the vegetable plot, the home gardener should grow "combined cultures."

The theory is to plant in closely spaced adjacent rows vegetables harvested at widely different times, using one before the other begins to mature.

Combine cauliflower, lettuce and radish, for instance. Plant cauliflower early in rows three feet apart. Between the rows plant lettuce, and between lettuce and cauliflower rows plant radish. Radishes are harvested early, then the lettuce, and later the cauliflower.

Following are several other combinations recommended by Harold Coulter, Ferry Seed Institute vegetable expert:

Carrots and parsnips in alternate rows two feet apart; radishes between first two rows; lettuce between second and third rows, and spinach between third and fourth rows.

Spinach rows two and one-half feet apart; radishes between spinach; pepper plants set between spinach when radishes are pulled.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK. — Leslie Hore-Belisha, British secretary of war, made himself somewhat of a national hero several months ago when he shook up the army command, upped the youngsters and sent the oldsters back to their club chairs. The report of his ultimatum demanding a change of foreign policy is a standout in the current news.

Britain in Race to Get Army Ready

There was something like consternation among British conservatives early in 1937, when Prime Minister Chamberlain named the incidentally Jewish Mr. Hore-Belisha for the war post. There was no hint of anti-Semitism in their attitude, but just then certain optimists among them were trying to tool Britain into the German orbit, and there were alarmed predictions that Hitler would be enraged and seek quick vengeance.

That didn't come off, and the new war secretary started a whirlwind army clean-up and all-around reconditioning campaign, to the satisfaction of all hands. Seventy-nine-year-old Sir Ian Hamilton, who had been in command at the Dardanelles, said, "Thank God we are under a proper soldier and will not be shot sitting down."

Clever at Badgering His Elders

He has spent a lot of time badgering his elders, and still has many of them to work on, as he is only forty-three. When, a brash young Oxonian, he ran for parliament, his opponent tagged him as "the nonentity of the college bench." He nailed this on his mast-head, spoofed the opposition cleverly, and romped in.

He was a dispatch carrier in the war, then a major, a reporter on a London newspaper, with convenient underground pipelines to the front page and the headlines.

He became financial secretary of the treasury in 1932 and later minister of transportation. He is a demon for detail and has swarmed all over England, inspecting equipment, barracks and army kitchens.

He is of medium stature, roundheaded, with roached, graying hair, unmarried and given to night forays, checking this or that detail of the military establishment.

Conquerors Old Stuff to Bank Family

AT LEAST six times in the past 150 years, the Rothschilds have been counted out, and they have always come back—like John Barleycorn and Old King Cotton. Now the arrest of Baron Louis von Rothschild is reported from Vienna. The era which founded their dynasty was disquietingly like this one. The Romanoffs, and the Hapsburgs, Matternich and Disraeli and all the other kings, conquerors and statesmen came to terms with them.

Baron Louis is the head of the house. The catastrophic fall of the Creditanstalt bank of Vienna in 1931 was supposed to have wrecked them.

A few weeks later, they were shoveling money into American securities, and, it was reported, snagging a stray million here and there by a fast overseas play on francs, an old family custom.

Deer Parks and Castles Faded Away

Louis and his brother, Alphonse, were living in regal splendor when the Creditanstalt failed. They had great estates and maginificent art gallaries, shooting lodges, a huge Franz Lehar chorus of retainers, deer parks and a brace of medieval castles. Much of these holdings slipped away, as Louis, with somewhat less than the usual family zest and acumen in financial affairs, turned to a study of philosophy and the arts.

It is 132 years since Napoleon, after Austerlitz, made mince-meat of the Holy Roman empire and even more ruthlessly dismembered Austria. Nathan, James and Solomon von Rothschild, sons of Mayer Anselm, founder of the line, not only saved their holdings, but extended their dominions to the remotest corner of Europe.

These vast ramifications of their fortune, one of the largest in the history of the world, were in land, steel, coal, manufactories and munitions, and, in later decades, in oil and hydroelectric power.

Libraries have been written about them, one notable record being Zola's "L'Argent." Their continental money matrix has been a stabilizer at times. It is possible that the Vienna jail door clangs the end of a dynasty and an epoch—but not quite certain. History will tell.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Noted Food Authority

Relates the Miracle of VITAMINS and Explains Why YOU MUST EAT THEM or DIE

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York.

WE LIVE in the most inspiring age the world has ever known. Chemists grow plants without soil. Doctors snatch men from death with insulin. Surgeons perform incredibly delicate brain operations. And thanks to the amazing discoveries of nutritional scientists, children enter the world with far better chances for long and happy lives, while men and women of seventy are more active and useful than their grandparents were at fifty.

Much of the hard-won knowledge of how to eat so as to increase efficiency, curb disease, and improve the chances for longevity is due to the discovery of vitamins.

VITAMINS DISCOVERED

Twenty-six years ago, a now-famous scientist walked nervously around his laboratory, back and forth — back and forth. He was conducting a nutrition experiment of vast importance. He didn't quite know what he was going to find, but he believed that he was on the verge of a revolutionary food discovery.

The scientist was my friend, Casimir Funk, a brilliant Polish bio-chemist. He had been working on the problem for many years. At last, in the year 1912, his experiments were positive and conclusive. Then he announced to the scientific world that he had discovered a vital force. "This force," said Funk, "I have called vitamine, because it is necessary to life."

Thus, the word "vitamin" came into being, along with the first knowledge of these minute but powerful factors which exert such a tremendous influence on human health and happiness.

SPARK PLUGS OF NUTRITION

Other bio-chemists throughout the world—including Sir Frederick Gowland Hopkins in England, and Hart, Humphrey, Babcock, Steenbock and McCollum in the United States—had been working on the same problem that Funk had partially solved. They knew that the first step was to find out how vitamins affected the human body, and that the second step was to discover what foods contained these vital substances.

And so there began a long series of experiments in the laboratories of great universities all over the world, which demonstrated what happens when a diet is deficient in any of the vitamins, and proved that if laboratory animals are wholly deprived of vitamins for a short time they will die.

These experiments are of the utmost significance to every homemaker, because the same thing happens to human beings as to experimental animals. Today our knowledge of vitamins has progressed to such a degree that it is possible to state the exact requirement for most of the vitamins and to designate the foods from which adequate quantities can be obtained.

RESISTANCE AND VITAMIN A

To date, six vitamins have been identified. Vitamin A promotes growth and builds resistance to disease. It is necessary for the health of the mucous membranes of the body and helps to guard against infections of the respiratory and alimentary tracts. It influences the health of the hair and skin, is necessary to prevent a serious eye disorder known as night blindness, and is essential for the formation of healthy teeth.

Vitamin A is found in milk, butter, margarine that has been reinforced with vitamin A concentrate, egg yolk, cod-liver oil, thin green leaves and yellow fruits and vegetables such as carrots, sweet potatoes, apricots and bananas.

APPETITE AND VITAMIN B

Vitamin B promotes appetite, aids digestion, prevents a serious nerve disorder. It is essential to the maintenance of a good digestion, which is vitally important if the body is to obtain full benefit from the food consumed. This vitamin is closely related to the energy metabolism, and the requirement increases with the rate of growth and with increased energy expenditure, so that growing children and working men and women should receive very generous amounts.

Vitamin B is found in yeast, whole wheat cereals, oatmeal, milk, fresh and dried peas and beans, spinach, cabbage and other greens, egg yolk and liver.

VITAMIN C FOR TEETH, GUMS

Vitamin C plays an important part in regulating body processes, and prevents the dread disease of scurvy. A lack of this essential vitamin results in profound changes in the structure of the teeth and gums, may be responsible for hemorrhages occurring anywhere in the body, and for the degeneration of muscle fibers generally.

Vitamin C is most abundant in succulent fresh green leaves, such as green cabbage. It is also found in onions, potatoes, oranges, tomatoes, green peppers, bananas and strawberries. In most foods, it is easily destroyed by heat—that is why it is so important to include some fresh raw foods in the diet daily.

VITAMIN D AND RICKETS

Vitamin D is sometimes called the sunshine vitamin because it can be manufactured in the body through the action of direct sunlight on the skin. This is the vitamin that is necessary for the proper utilization of calcium and phosphorus in building bones and teeth. When it is lacking in the diet of infants, there develops that horrible disease known as rickets, in which the bones become soft and twisted, resulting in pitiful deformities — knock knees, bow legs, pigeon breast.

In foods, vitamin D is only found in appreciable amounts in fish-liver oils and egg yolk. That is why every homemaker should be so grateful to the scientists who labored to discover how to concentrate this precious vitamin from fish-liver oils and add it to foods, or to increase the vitamin D content of foods through irradiation.

ANTI-STERILITY VITAMIN E

Vitamin E comes in for less discussion than the others, because its significance to nutrition has not been fully determined. It does, however, appear to be necessary for successful reproduction and is found especially in wheat germ and lettuce.

• • •

VITAMIN G PROLONGS YOUTH

Vitamin G is necessary for growth and for the maintenance of health and vigor at all ages. It helps to ward off old age by prolonging the vigorous middle years. It is essential to the health of the skin, and recent experiments demonstrate that cataracts in the eyes may be due to a deficiency of this vitamin, which is found in yeast, and in liver, kidneys, egg yolk, milk, cheese and green leafy vegetables.

One authority claims that chronic disorders of the throat, stomach, lungs, colon, heart and kidneys may be traced to vitamin and mineral deficiencies.

Certainly enough has been learned of vitamin chemistry to make clear that the homemaker fails in her duty who does not provide vitamins in abundance for every member of her family. Both children and adults depend upon you for their food supply. It lies within your power to help them to health and happiness or condemn them to weakness, illness and sorrow. Do not fail them. See to it that every member of your household—your children, the wage earners, the middle aged and the elderly—get enough vitamins to afford them the health that science has placed within their grasp.

What Is the Cause of "Spider-Web Check"?

If not properly "fed" with a good oil polish, furniture in time develops what is known as "spider-web check!" This appears on the finish, like wrinkles on the human face—fine lines, spreading here and there in a spider-web pattern. This crazing, this light cracking, is known in furniture language as "checking" and "spider-web checking" better describes the condition. This is the danger-signal, on finish! It's the indication of "starving" wood! A warning to the housewife, that if the finish is not cared for immediately and properly, the furniture will develop cracks, ridges and splits. "Spider-web check" is generally the result of either one of these two causes: Polish-neglect—or the use of a poor, cheap polish—without the essential fine, light-oil base. When the furniture is periodically "massaged" with a reputable oil polish (the best is non-greasy), the pores of the wood are "fed" and the piece is preserved. Then "spider-web check" will not appear! The use of a quality oil polish is the best preventive formula for this ugly, detrimental check!

MORE WOMEN USE O-CEDAR POLISH THAN ANY OTHER KIND!

...because O-Cedar not only cleans as it polishes, but preserves your furniture—"feeds" the finish, prevents drying-out, cracking. Insist upon O-Cedar Polish, for furniture, woodwork and floors (with the famous O-Cedar Mop).

School Notes

Freshmen Reporter, Jean Sorum
Sophomore reporter Adelyn Peterson
Editor-in-Chief - Marian Larson

High School

The history classes were just beginning to wonder if they'd pass those tests on Friday when they found it was only an April Fool joke. That's one time we appreciate a joke.

In American history we have begun studying the World War.

Several interesting compositions have been written by the juniors and sophomores for English.

Another member of the Junior class has been interviewed. Her name? Well, her nickname is Molly. She prefers hearing Wayne King as he plays the popular song of the day, "Sweet Someone" She exclaims with delight the familiar Oh Boy, whenever anyone treats her to a banana split. We hear another, Oh Boy! when a delicious chocolate malted milk is set before her. As a pastime, the radio holds a great fancy for her.

In her constellation of stars, it seems that Loretta Young and Robert Taylor [illegible] and she prefers seeing "Steamboat Round the Bend" to and other film.

It is evident she estimates "Green Mansions" by Hudson as her favorite book; but in the list of authors, she picks Louisa Mae Alcott as her choice.

Again a junior with teachers as her pet peeve! This indvidual aspires to be a good housekeeper and holds a certain good housekeeper as her inspiration. We wonder why. You know now, we're sure, she's the one and only Doris Larson.

Grades 1 and 2

The following children had 100 in spelling last Friday: Shirley, Calvin, Virgil, Donald, Dorothy, Manning, Evelyn and Phyllis.

In art class we made "Easter Egg" pennmanship booklets.

Next week the first and second grades will be receiving a new set of readers.

We have studied several of the spring birds. Most of us can now identify from pictures the robin, meadowlark, bluebird, red headed woodpecker flicker, bluejay, chickadee, and wren.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN
© The Safety Man

The pedestrian is still the cause of numerous traffic deaths.

In 1937 almost fifty per cent of the people injured or killed in accidents involving automobiles were pedestrians. Many of these accidants were caused by people walking on the wrong (the right hand) side of the road in rural communities. This does occur in spite of the great number of bulletins, warnings, and splendid newspaper editorials which have appeared on the subject.

Every school, community, club and civic organization ought to stress continually the importance of pedestrians' obeying traffic rules and regulations.

Walk with the semaphore lights. Do not jaywalk. Do not cross in the middle of a block. If you must walk on highways or rural roads, walk on the left side of the road, facing on-coming cars. These and many other warnings should be obeyed by all pedestrians.

Stop! Look! Listen!
Live longer!

Boy Scouts Camped Out

Russel Sanoden, Howard Lorentson, Milton Hanson, Jerome Sorum, Harold Gavere, Raymond Sagstuen, Cardiff Leiran and Francis Johnson, members of the local Boy Scout troop, left Monday morning for a three day hike throughout the country. The purpose of the hike was to study nature and get some good pictures of wild life and nature scenes.

The first day the boys walked out to the Mud Lake Wild Life Refuge and looked over the area there and came back as far as the Thief River near the Anton Rodahl farm where they camped for the night. The second day they followed the river and other water courses to a point near the Skomedal farm southeast of Holt and camped there for the night. Their journey home on the third day took them around the country to the south of Holt and home again.

Hartley Peterson, scoutmaster of the troop, drove out to the overnight camping place and spent the nights with the boys.

The troop here is very active when it comes to going out to camp and study the outdoors and much credit is due the scoutmaster for his fine cooperation in in arranging these trips for the boys and being with them on their trips.

Miss Gladys Sanoden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden, underwent a major operation at St. Lukes hospital at Thief River Falls on Tuesday. At this writing she is getting along fine.

The Marihuana Rumor

This may be insignificant and possibly untrue, but the drift of talk about the vicinity indicates there is a bit of Marihauna being peddled throught northwestern Minnesota. If this should be true, people should take immediate action to stamp out any sign of this dreaded drug before some one innocent will unwittingly fall into the habit by trying "a couple reefers for fun". Even two of these Marihuana cigarettes can start a man on the road to horrible destruction of body and soul. Anyone caught with the stuff should be immediately reported, and no one should take chances on even one of these deadly "weeds" for experimental reasons.

Theo. Quale Spoke Here

"The Constitution" was the subject very ably and interestingly discussed at the Men's Club which met on Monday evening in the parlors of the Nazareth Luthern Church. He traced its roots back to the early colonial times and emphasized its meaning as a people's document and how more democratic it was than what was used in the old world; that this idea of government was something entirely original with this nation. After his lecture, many questions were asked him and all were well answered and discussed. During the lunch period, many informal discussions were held. The attendance at the meeting was fairly good. The Men's Club have had some very fine speakers and we hope that more of the men will come and take active interest in it. A temporary plan was put into effect to change the meeting to the second Tuesday of the month as Monday evenings are usually taken up by other meetings.

Wenzel Inspected Projects Here

The people of eastern Marshall County had a big day last Friday when a large delegation of farmers and others went out to inspect the projects and dams in the Mud Lake, Thief Lake and Beltrami Island areas.

Herman C. Wenzel, Commissioner of Conservation, Harry Speakes, Director of Game and Fish, J. A. Lindsey, Engineer in the division, all from St. Paul; and W. T. Cox and A. L. Hambercht of the Farm Security Administration with headquarters at Milwaukee, Wis., were here and went over the projects with the farmers. A large delegation of members of the Eastern Marshall County Protective Association accompanied these men on their tour of inspection.

The first stop in the morning was at Thief Lake dam where they were met by a large crowd of farmers and their wives who had gathered there to see the dam and to hear Mr. Wenzel speak to them in one of the camp buildings of the CCC camp. After spending some time there the delegation drove to Gatzke where they had dinner. From Gatzke only the officials and members of the association motored to Grygla and met with the Beltrami country folks. From there they drove out northeast of Grygla to inspect water courses and to view places that were flooded out last year. They made the trip clear up to the dams in the Beltrami Island area and to the headwaters of the Moose river.

Returning again to Grygla and stopping for a lunch the delegation drove west and on through the Mud Lake project and inspected the dams in ditch No. 11 and along the dyke to the dam in the Thief River at the northwest corner of Mud lake. The officials of the Conservation Department saw many ducks and geese on the trip through the Mud Lake area. Having finished this trip they all motored to Gatzke for a large mass meeting in the evening.

It was estimated that about four hundred people from the east end of the county were at this meeting to hear Mr. Wenzel and others explain the set-up in these projects. The Mud Lake project is in the hands of the federal government and what has been done there is not under the jurisdiction of the conservation department. These people objected to the projects being established in this end of the county and were protesting to the officials that these projects were obstructing their drainage from the eastern country.

Verner Nelson, Roseau, was chairman and H. O. Berve, attorney of Thief River Falls represented the Eastern Marshall County Protective association at the meetings. Mr. Wenzel stated to the gathering that he would do what he could to make matters right and that he would have to have an opinion from the attorney general on what could be done in some of the projects.

Held Bible Camp Meeting

The organization and plans for the 1938 session of the Lake of the Woods Luther League Bible Camp were made at the meeting of the Bible Camp Association held at Greenbush recently. The dates for the camp will be June 20 to 26, beginning Monday evening and closing Sunday afternoon.

This will be the sixth year that the camp has met. Last year the fifth anniversary was celebrated with the erection of a fine chapel and kitchen. Previous to that time there were three fine cabins for girls, two smaller cabins, a boys' dormitory and a combination office and canteen. The camp is located at the confluence of the Rainy River and Wabanica Creek, about seven miles north-west of Baudette. The seventy acre site, most of covered with virgin timber, is owned by the Bible Camp Association.

The camp administration for 1938 includes the following: Rev. R. M. Fjelstad of Thief River Falls, camp dean; Rev. H. O. Aasen of Baudette, general manager: Rev. T. C. L. Hanson of Holt, housing manager; Rev. H. O. Peterson of Viking, canteen manager: and Rev. L. M. Larsen of Stephen, waterfront director. This will be the third year that Rev. Fjelstad has served as camp dean.

A spirit of optimism for the 1938 camp prevailed at the meeting in Greenbush. Several pastors announced that a large group planned to attend the camp from their respective parishes.

The purpose of the camp is primarily a spiritual one, to bring the people to a greater interest in the Bible, in the Church and to challenge them to growth in their spiritual life. The second purpose is to bring Lutheran young people together in a social way. There scores of young people meet each summer and become intimately acquainted with other young people whom they perhaps would never have met except for the Bible Camp. The week at camp is intended to be a week of happy vacation spent in a Christian atmosphere.

The fee for the week of vacation at the Lake of the Woods Camp is comparatively low. The fee for the 1938 camp is five dollars. It is the purpose of the camp officers to apply one dollar of this fee on the property debt.

The list of faculty members and courses to be taught will be announced shortly.

Dresses That Flatter Figure

THERE'S no spring tonic in the world like having a pretty new dress that makes you look slim and smart. And these are so easy to make, that you'll enjoy fixing them for yourself. The patterns are carefully planned so that even beginners will have no trouble following them, and each is accompanied by a detailed sew chart explaining just what to do.

Comfortable House Dress.

It's wonderful how much more one feels like working in a brand new, fresh house dress that's becoming as well as comfortable. This design is distinctly slenderizing because it's so straight and simple. You can make it in a few hours. Cheerful percale print, seersucker or chambray are nice fabrics for this dress, which will certainly be your favorite if you want to look slimmer than you are.

Dress For Afternoon.

If you wear any size between 36 and 52 this dress is designed to make you look your best. Shirring on the shoulders creates the fullness that you need in the blouse. The long, unbroken line from shoulder to hem takes inches off the figure. Sleeves ending just below the elbow are flattering to plump arms, and the long, softly rippling jabot trims are lengthening in effect. Make this lovely dress of silk crepe, small-figured prints, georgette, or voile.

The Patterns.

1382 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 36-inch material without nap. With short sleeves.

1456 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4¾ yards of 39-inch material, plus 1⅜ contrasting.

Spring-Summer Pattern Book.

Send 15 cents for the Barbara Bell Spring and Summer Pattern Book which is now ready. It contains 109 attractive, practical and becoming designs. The Barbara Bell patterns are well planned, accurately cut and easy to follow. Each pattern includes a sew-chart which enables even a beginner to cut and make her own clothes.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Using Sour Milk and Soda.—When substituting sour milk and soda for sweet milk and baking powder in cooking, use the same quantity of milk plus one teaspoon of soda for each cup of sour milk.

• • •

Storing Food Oils.—Store oils, such as olive or vegetable, in the refrigerator. They are likely to become rancid when opened unless they are kept chilled.

• • •

Cleaning Sponges. — Sponges which have become slimy should be soaked in vinegar overnight, then rinsed thoroughly in hot water and hung out of doors to dry.

• • •

A Nourishing Breakfast.—The family that gets a satisfying, nourishing breakfast is more likely to be in tune with the world than the family that has only a hastily prepared miscellany.

Strange Facts

No Such Thing As a Tree

TREES are the oldest things on earth. You have seen hundreds of them. They grow in great abundance in all but a few sections of the United States. Yet there is no such thing as a tree as a matter of scientific classification.

This oldest living thing gives us not only shelter, food and heat, but such a strangely wide variety of products as clothing material, furniture, paper, rubber, dyes, chewing gum, rosin, turpentine and alcohol. Because trees provide for so many of man's needs and because they live for hundreds, sometimes thousands of years trees have figured in the folklore and religions of many nations. The Algonquin Indians and the early peoples of Scandinavia both believed that their ancestors were descended from an ash tree.

We use the word tree to refer to the giant sequoias and redwoods of California, we use it to refer to the great oaks and beeches of America and Europe and to the slender palm and the little fig tree. But as a matter of scientific classification there is no such thing as a tree because the word may be given with equal accuracy to any plant ten feet tall that grows with a singly woody step and lives more than two years.

THE CHEERFUL CHERUB

An Old U. S. Custom

These men are members of Uncle Sam's "pickpocket squad," pictured on their patrol boat as they speed down the bay at New York to pick up an incoming ship from Europe. The enforcement division of the United States customs saves Uncle Sam a huge sum annually in revenues he would not receive if the lynx-eyed guardians of his "front door" were not on the job. A great percentage of the human race is born with larceny in its soul and it is with this percentage that the work of the enforcement division is mostly concerned. Varied and ingenious are the schemes devised for "beating" Uncle Sam out of his just dues on dutiable goods. Worthy of a better cause are the dodges employed for smuggling contraband, such as narcotics, sweepstake tickets—and even human beings who do not come by the legal quota.

But never was a scheme devised that fooled the eagle-eyed men of the Customs for long. They know people; they know all the tricks, and they possess an uncanny faculty for looking in the right place for what they seek.

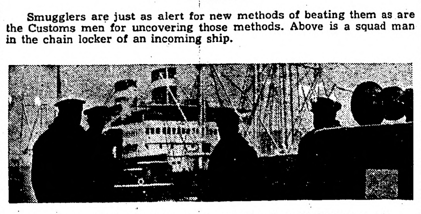
Smugglers are just as alert for new methods of beating them as are the Customs men for uncovering those methods. Above is a squad man in the chain locker of an incoming ship.



Somehow, uncannily, they sense contraband on an incoming ship.

HOW to SEW

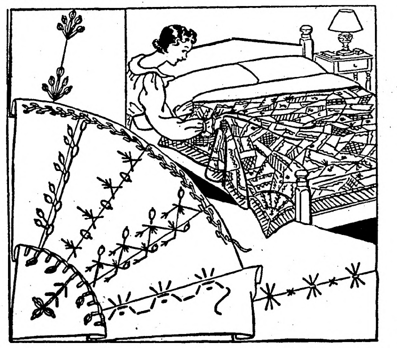
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



A LETTER comes from a reader enclosing rough sketches of stitches from a silk patchwork quilt. She writes, "I inherited this quilt from a great aunt and it is the final touch of luxury in my guest room. It never occurred to me that I could make one like it until I saw your article about patchwork stitches in the paper. I am following your advice about using an old wool blanket as a foundation—only I am using the best parts of several worn blankets. I plan to join the blanket sections with whipped seams and then arrange my final patches along the joinings."

Depend upon a modern homemaker to figure out efficiency methods! And here are the stitches she sends. The many-hued silk, satin, and velvet pieces are first pinned or basted to the foundation with lapped edges turned as shown here. If you would like to know how to make more of the fascinating stitches used to sew the pieces in place, you will find them in the new book offered herewith. Be among the first of your friends to make one of these gay quilts. It is the smart thing to use one anywhere that you would use an afghan. Collecting and arranging the luxurious bits of silk and inventing new embroidery stitch combinations is just about the most exciting of all the new revivals of Victorian home arts.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' latest book on SEWING—Gifts and Embroidery—is now ready. Ninety embroidery stitches are illustrated; also table settings, crochet; embroidery designing; fabric repairing; novelty gifts and dress accessories. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions. Available to readers who will send name and address and enclose 25 cents (coin preferred). Just address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

TIPS to Gardeners

More Combinations

CROP combination is useful with vegetables such as tomatoes, melons or corn, as well as with "small garden" crops like radishes, lettuce and carrots which require comparatively less space.

The following combinations are suggested by Harold Coulter, vegetable expert of the Ferry Seed Institute:

Sow dwarf peas early in rows four to six feet apart; plant radish between rows of peas, and plant one row of cucumbers between every two rows of peas.

Set cauliflower early in rows two feet apart; one foot on each side of each cauliflower row plant spinach; sow radishes between spinach rows. When radishes are used set tomato plants in the space thus vacated. Peppers or egg plant may be substituted for tomatoes.

Sow early turnips in rows three to four feet apart; later plant a row of corn between the turnip rows.

Give ground ample supplies of fertilizer when combined cropping is practised extensively.

HOUSE VS. PRESIDENT

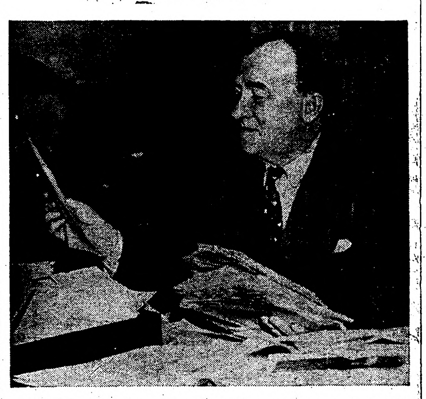
Administration Makes Great Concessions to Save "Dictator" Bill . . . Senate Gets Tax Measure Built to Aid Business



Members of the house of representatives were swamped with telegrams from citizens all over the country urging that they vote against the administration's reorganization bill which, it was feared, would pave the way to an American dictatorship. Above is seen Congressman John J. O'Connor of New York, a leading foe of the bill, reading some of the messages he received.

Tumult Over Reform Bill

WHEN President Roosevelt returned from Warm Springs he found that a crisis confronted the administration forces concerning the reorganization bill pending in the house and that there was danger that the opposition to that measure would defeat it. He called to the White House a number of leaders, and it was decided to push the bill through with a minimum of concessions. Representative Sam Rayburn, majority leader of the house, told the President it would pass with amendments to which he had agreed. One of these would enable congress by concurrent resolution to override any reorganization proposition the President might put through. Another would exempt the bureau of education from the scope of the bill.

Rep. Rayburn

Representative John J. O'Connor of New York, one of the leading opponents of the measure, admitted it probably would get by with the concessions offered, but said he would vote against it even if the title alone remained. He and practically all other members of the house were flooded with telegrams and letters urging that the bill be defeated.

Even after passage by the house, the measure would have to go to conference and many days or weeks of debate could be expected there. Eventual enactment of the bill was to be expected but the probability was that it would then have lost most of the "dictatorship" features which seem so repugnant to many thousands of American citizens. The popular opposition had not been lessened at all by the President's action in making public a letter to an unnamed friend in which he disclaimed any intention to become a dictator and asserted he has none of the qualifications that would make him successful in that role.

"Help Business" Measure

WHAT Sen. Pat Harrison called the "help business" measure, being the revenue bill as rewritten by his senate finance committee, was submitted to the senate. Though Harrison said he expected its speedy passage, others believed at least a full week of debate would be necessary.

Sen. Charles McNary of Oregon, minority leader promised to support the bill, saying, "I think it is a great improvement over the house version. I am in favor of speeding its passage to help business."

The three chief matters in controversy were:

Administration opposition to elimination of the undistributed profits tax and drastic modification of the capital gains and losses tax.

A proposal by Sen. James P. Pope of Idaho to attach as a "rider" to the tax bill an amendment to impose $212,000,000 of processing taxes on manufactured cotton, synthetic fabrics, rice, tobacco and wheat.

Amendments by Sen. Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin to broaden the tax base.

Sloan Hits Government

ALFRED P. SLOAN, JR., chairman of the board of General Motors, reported to the stockholders that the corporation's earnings for 1937 were lower. And he declared that the government's policy toward business had caused a lack of confidence which was largely responsible for the business recession.

Sloan asserted a sharp decline in consumer sales began in November, and in commenting on the slump as it appeared "through the eyes of industry," he named two factors. "One influence," he told the stockholders, "was the fact that there had been developing a growing lack of confidence and a fear as to the future of American business enterprise, due to the attitude of government toward business, and economic policies affecting business."

The other influence discussed by Sloan as responsible for "throwing the domestic economy into the violent and unprecedented decline" was what he described as a "radical" increase in pay rolls for industry as a whole in the early part of 1937. In some important industries, he said, this increase was extended to an "uneconomic degree."

At his own request Mr. Sloan has been eliminated from further participation in the profits under the corporation's bonus plan.

Bigger Dreadnaughts

UNITED STATES and Great Britain advised each other that they would invoke the escalator clause of the London naval treaty and would build dreadnaughts larger than 35,000 tons. The British also notified Germany and Soviet Russia of their decision. Both nations based their action on Japan's refusal to disclose her naval construction plans.

Senator Clark

France, third signatory to the treaty, announced she would continue to adhere to the 35,000-ton limitation "so long as no continental power departs from that standard."

Secret hearings on the $1,100,000,000 naval expansion bill were begun by the senate naval affairs committee, with Secretary of State Hull and Admiral Leahy, chief of naval operations, as the first scheduled witnesses. Chairman Walsh said open hearings would be held later.

Opponents of the administration's "big navy" program are rather numerous in congress, though probably in the minority. One of the most consistent of them is Senator Clark of Missouri. Commenting on the invoking of the escalator clause concerning battleships, he said: "It is just the preliminary announcement of a world-wide naval building race."

The maneuvers of the United States fleet were transferred from Alaska to the equator for the second phase. In the "battle" for possession of the Hawaiian islands the fleet lost eleven flyers and three $100,000 bombing planes.

Loyalist Spain Split

SPANISH insurgents are, at this writing, near the accomplishment of Franco's great objective, the splitting of the territory held by the loyalists in the eastern part of the country. They captured the ancient city of Lerida, known as the key to Catalonia.

Further south the rebels were almost to Tortosa and their vanguard was actually within sight of the Mediterranean sea.

All along the Catalonian front the government troops fought desperately, but it seemed their struggle was hopeless and observers believed the war was nearing its end.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses WATER—the Elixir of Life

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York.

OF ALL the elements required to support life and maintain health and efficiency, water takes precedence. Without it, the protein, carbohydrates, fats, minerals and vitamins, which build and repair tissues, provide motive power for the body engine, and regulate the complex processes necessary to existence would be utterly useless.

Water is the magic stream through which all nutritive elements are carried into and through the body and there held in suspension. It is the ever-ready messenger which distributes heat, moisture and body-building material, where and as it is needed.

Man Is a Sponge

Our bodies are like water-logged sponges, for we carry water to the limit of our capacity. A human being is more than two-thirds water, and this proportion must be maintained, if health and strength are to be preserved.

There is enough water in a person weighing 150 pounds to fill a 15-gallon barrel. Muscles, liver and kidneys are about 80 per cent water, the brain 85 per cent. Even bone is made up of more than one-third water, so you can see that the old adage "dry as a bone" is not strictly accurate.

No cell can function unless it is constantly bathed in fluid. Furthermore, the cells depend upon water to transport their foods through the blood. This alone requires ten pounds of water in constant circulation.

We may term these functions an incoming service. But it is equally important as an outgoing stream. The cells need water to flush away their waste products. And if the surface of the lungs is not kept moist, there can be no intake of oxygen, no output of carbon dioxide.

Without water, no waste would be carried out of the body. Poisonous substances would remain to wreck the system within a short time. Water flushes the countless channels of physical existence—even while we sleep, for it constantly passes from the body through the lungs and skin, as well as through the bowels and kidneys.

Water Starvation

Where do we get all this water? When we are thirsty, we take a drink and there the interest of most people ends.

Few individuals give proper consideration to supplying the body with all the water it needs. Yet, when the water content of the body diminishes, health and life are in danger. A loss of 10 per cent of body water is a serious matter and a loss of 20 per cent is usually fatal.

It is only in rare instances—such as when lost in a desert—that man actually dies of thirst, for even when no fluids are drunk, water is consumed with food. But all about us we see men and women suffering from the effects of water starvation. Some indications of this are dryness of the skin and lips, mucous membranes and scalp. There is also danger of damaging the kidneys which require water to flush away the acid products of metabolism. And very often constipation can be traced to a deficiency of water, which is necessary to soften the contents of the intestinal canal.

None of these ill effects may be feared if you take enough water.

How Much Is Enough?

A healthy, normal individual requires about four quarts of water every 24 hours. That requirement varies somewhat with the season. In hot weather there is a greater elimination of water through perspiration and that loss must be replaced.

However, it is not necessary to drink four quarts of water a day. For part of our needs are supplied by food. The body draws upon three sources for its water: First, water taken as a drink or in other liquids; second, water supplied by foods, especially fruits and vegetables, for although solid foods appear dry, most of them are in fact from 75 to 95 per cent water; third, water formed in the tissues in the combustion of fuel foods. Fat gives the most water when burned. In fact, it produces more water than the weight of the original fat. Sugar gives the least.

Foods Rich in Water

A half-pound potato contains nearly a full glass of water. Some other foods that are more than 70 per cent water are asparagus, berries, string beans, cabbage, cauliflower, celery, cucumber, eggs, citrus fruits, cherries, grapes, melons, apples, raw and cooked greens, milk, onions, cooked green peas, boiled potatoes, sauerkraut, shell fish, meat stews, tomatoes and squash.

Foods containing less than 30 per cent water include butter, cakes, candies, ready-to-eat cereals, crackers, dried fruits, nuts, potato chips, sausage, bacon, syrups and zwieback.

Avoid the Dry Habit

In addition to the water consumed with food, every normal individual should drink about six glasses of liquid daily—as water, milk, coffee, tea or other beverages.

Most people drink far too little water. Women often have the mistaken notion that water will make them fat. To demonstrate the fallacy of this idea, a world-famous physician once remarked that if that were true, poor people would long ago have adopted the practice.

It is possible to drink too much water and those who are suffering from disease should be guided by their physician in determining the amount required. But most normal people could increase both mental and physical efficiency by taking more of this magic fluid.

Drink Water with Meals

The question is often asked—"Is it wise to drink water with meals?" The answer is "Yes." There is evidence that the drinking of a reasonable amount of water with meals by normal individuals stimulates the secretion of gastric juice, thereby improving digestion. It has also been demonstrated that it aids in the absorption of food by the body and retards the growth of intestinal bacteria.

The homemaker should be just as conscientious in providing her family with sufficient water as with adequate amounts of the other food substances. For water must be included in the list of essential food constituents. It is in truth, the ELIXIR of LIFE.

Questions Answered

Mrs. S. T. R.—Answering your question as to what is the most efficient time to begin reducing—the proper time is when the weight first begins to climb above normal. Most people wait until they are 20 or 30 pounds overweight and then reducing becomes more difficult.

Miss T. P. G.—Yes, there is a stimulant in cocoa that closely resembles caffeine in coffee. But a cup of cocoa contains less of the stimulant than is found in a cup of tea or coffee.

Mrs. A. R. M.—No, milk is not fattening. Women especially fear that milk will increase their weight, but this fear is not justified, since a pint of milk, or two large glasses, only supplies 340 calories.

Why . . . an Oil Polish?

And here, home-makers, is why: The oil element in polish is absolutely essential to all fine wood! For the same reason that we oil machinery—water our plants—massage cream into the face—is oil polish used! The same principle applies—for wood definitely requires this attention to keep it "alive!" The best oil polish has a fine, non-greasy oil base—and it is just this—when rubbed or massaged into the furniture—that prevents the wood from checking, drying out, splitting or cracking. Furniture will not do any of these things, when cared for—and it is the combination of the "oil" and the "rubbing" that prevents it! For the quality oil-polish "feeds" the hungry finish—keeps the wood young! Other polishes may give a quick, easy-to-achieve luster—but a little time and energy (it should not be labor) on the part of the housewife, will pay dividends in the looks and long life of her furniture and woodwork. All experts agree that an oil polish properly used (apply on damp cloth—as directed) is not only better—it is vital! And so, home-makers, take this important tip: Always use an oil polish—and the best one!

PIKE HATCHERY CO-OP FORMED

Formation of a cooperative association by Lake of the Woods commercial fishermen, for the establishment of a large pike hatchery, is announced by Conservation Commissioner Herman C. Wenzel.

The association was formed after Commissioner Wenzel held up the issuance of licenses to 60 commercial fishermen until such time as they agreed to replenish the border waters with fish.

The proposed hatchery will have a capacity of two hundred million pike fry and is to be operated jointly by the association and the Department of Conservation. One half of the output of the hatchery is to be returned to Lake of the Woods and the other half is to be used by the department in stocking other Minnesota Lakes.

According to the plans, commercial fishermen will be assessed a small fee on the basis of the type and size of nets used and th money so collected will be used by the association to cover its share of the operating cost.

W. F. Zippel, of Warroad, is president of the organization which announces that it expects to be ready to establish the hatchery in time for spring spawning.

To restock lakes and streams with fish, the Department of conservation hatches annually three-fourth billion fry.

WHEN BANK CROOKS SHOW PREFERENCES

The American Bankers Association reports that non-member banks suffer twice the percentage of burglaries and hold-up robberies as compared with members. Member banks display a sign showing that they receive the protection of the association's detective agents, who cause the arrest of from 150 to 400 bank crooks every year, the organization, which is a non-profit body, says.

"Professional criminals often boast of having sense enough to dodge the far-reaching system of man hunting available to members, so long as there are other banks without this protection," it says. "They recognize that once on the record of the Association's Protective Department, they must pay for every crime with which they can be identified. Detainer warrants have followed them from place to place so that penal servitude for one crime would not expiate other offenses."

NEW YORK (Special).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, like more than 200,000 others persons from all over the world, has already sampled the New York World's Fair of 1939 by visiting the exhibit the Fair Corporation maintains for the public on the Fifth Avenue floor of the Empire State building.

"I am much interested in this Fair," said Mrs. Roosevelt, after she had seen the ingeniously illuminated models and animated displays that promise so many wonders for the Nation's Fair." "It seems to me that there is opportunity here to do a remarkable piece of work from the educational standpoint. The conception of the whole Fair as outlined to me sounds very provocative of thought." The theme of the Fair is "Building the World of Tomorrow."

Safetygrams by Fred W. Braun The Safety Man

Public condemnation of convicted drunken drivers is reaching high proportions. And justly so.

Is there any reason under the sun why a man should be permitted to drink more liquor than he can control, step into a high-powered automobile, and drive recklessly down our highways, injuring and killing people? There is none.

It is regrettable that in many cities and counties throughout our nation enforcement officers and even courts have been somewhat reluctant to enforce laws to protect citizens of their communities from these drunken drivers.

Licenses of drunken drivers should be revoked. No man who has been convicted of drunken driving should be permitted to drive an automobile. The use of our highwaps is a privilege. It should be considered so and not abused.

"Christus" A Motion Picture

The Luther League is sponsoring a motion picture "Christus" to be shown at Nazareth Lutheran Church on Saturday evening at 8:15. This picture has some very fine recomendations and comes at a very appropriate season of the year. Admission will be charged which is 15c and 10c. It was not possible to get it here unless the agreement to charge admission was met. The picture shows the life of Christ in a very scriptual and authentic manner.

Refrain From Burning

A plea to refrain from promiscuous burning of fence corners, roadsides, and swamplands was voiced this week by Conservation Commissioner Herman Commissioner Herman C. Wenzel.

Grassy spots are the natural nesting places of all ground nesting birds, both game and insect destroying song birds, and where the dry grass is burned at this time of year, those birds that have already built have their homes destroyed and others looking for nesting places pass the burned areas by.

The department of conservation is making every effort to stock game birds, as well as to protect the insect eating song birds, and the first step is to see that they have a home.

Promiscuos burning, in addition to destroying bird nests and nesting places, is of little value if not of positive harm to the land, destroying vegetation that would become valuable plant food.

In peat and wooded areas, there is of course the constant danger of peat and forest fires where promiscous burning is carried on.

Rev. P. B. Trelstad of Middle River called at the parsonage on Saturday evening.

The First Log Cabin

The first log cabin, accepted symbol of pioneer American history, was built by Swedish colonists in New Jersey, then part of the colony of New Sweden, as early as 1639, it was revealed here today.

Research inspired by the nationwide Swedish-American 300th Anniversary Celebration of the landing of the first Swedish colonist in America, brought this fact to light, according to officials of the Swedish-American Tercentenary Association.

An important part of the celebration is the campaign, now in progress, to create a $750,000 endowment fund for the American-Swedish Historical Museum in Philadelphia. The campaign, in which 2,000,000 Swedish-Americans are participating, closes May 14th.

The colonists, according to information gathered by the New Jersey federal writers' project, settled along the Delaware river in parts of what are now the states of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Deleware.

The first cabins built were probably more primitive than the type later evolved during the regime of the colony's first governor, Johann Printz. A reconstruction of the later type of cabin stands near Friesburg in Salem County, N. J., the writers project bulletin disclosed.

Safetygrams by Fred W. Braun The Safety Man

Spring housecleaning time is here.

What kind of equipment do you use when yov wash windows in your home? Thoughtless housewives too often climb up on rickety ladders and dangerous stools and even teeter on rocking chairs in order to reach high places.

Falls cost 26,000 lives in 1937!

And a word about home dry cleaning. Despite countless warnings of danger, people persist in using naptha, gasoline, and other cleaning fluids indoors in adequately ventilated rooms. Explosions and fires caused by faulty handling of these cleaning fluids have caused severe injuries and have cost many persons their lives.

Do all your dry cleaning out of doors.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Carlson of Crookston, Lucy Wegge and Homer Paskewitz of Thief River called at the Mrs. L. Wegge home Sunday.

Mrs. Betsy Abrahamson of Gatzke is visiting at the A. B. Anderson and Nettie and Iver Borheim homes this week.

Agnes Conklin returned to her school duties at Bemidji State Teachers' College Monday after spending Easter vacation with home folks.

Iron-Rich Garden Plants

Growing iron in the garden may sound off-key, but that is just what Miss Inez M. Hobart, extension nutritionist, University Farm, recommends for Minnesota families.

Too many families fail to get enough iron in their three meals a day, and Miss Hobart suggests that an excellent way to remedy this is to grow more iron-rich foods in the garden this year.

Deep green, leafy vegetables rank high in iron content. For early spring, mustard and dandelion greens will efficiently fill the iron-furnishing role. Turnip and beet tops are rich in iron; so are chard, kale, spinach, broccoli leaves, and watercress.

Vegetables of the bean and pea families are also a good source of iron — lima beans, common or kidney beans, soybeans, lentils, garden peas, and blackeye peas.

Mr. and Mrs. Hogaard and family of Strandquist visited at the Marvin Sandberg and Mrs. O. Backlund homes Friday.

How the "Well-Dressed" Furniture Should Appear

This season—and every season—furniture should be kept fresh and gleaming! The home-maker owes it to her furniture—and the appearance of her home. Before it leaves the shop of the furniture dealer, before it is sold—good furniture is kept polished! The dealer continually gives it a "polish service", to maintain its rich appearance—keep the wood "alive!" He, who is an authority, regularly uses a good oil polish (the best is non-greasy, because it has a fine, light-oil base). He knows the importance of this—for selling furniture is his business—and on his shop floor, every piece of fine wood must be kept at its lustrous best! He knows, too, how vital it is to the finish, the very pores of the wood, to frequently apply a quality oil polish on the various suites and fine pieces! The effect of its frequent use on furniture is two-fold: It prevents drying-out and cracking—and it brings to the furniture a deep, lasting high-tone—that suffuses the wood, brings out all the natural beauty of the grain. All woodwork and furniture will remain "well-dressed," decorative, sparkling—if cared for periodically with a reputable light-oil polish!

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

Hook an Old Fashioned Rag Rug

OF ALL rag rugs the hooked type is the most fascinating and economical. A rug hook, such as may be purchased in notion and fancywork departments, and burlap a little larger than your finished rug are the essentials. Most rug hookers also use a frame of slats bolted together at the corners. They stretch the burlap over the frame and tack it. Many hooked rugs are made without a frame.

Here is a quaint old rug pattern that you may mark off on your burlap with a yardstick and pencil. The numbers indicate the colors used for the original rug—now more than a hundred years old. The finished rug measures 26 by 34 inches. Allow two inches at all edges for hems. Overcast the edges, then mark the solid one-inch border just inside the hem allowance; then the large eight-inch squares; then the small two-inch squares; then draw the diagonal lines across the large squares as shown. Use wool rags if possible and cut the strips not wider than one-half inch. Hold the strip against the wrong side of the burlap and pull loops of it through to the right side with the hook as shown. Short strips are as useful as long. Just pull the ends through and clip them.

If you are planning slip covers, curtains, or doing other Spring sewing for the home, you will want a copy of Mrs. Spears' book, SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Forty-eight pages of practical working directions, with complete illustrations. A dollar saving book for every homemaker. Send name and address, enclosing 25 cents (coins preferred) to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Important Spring Fashions

A TWO-PIECE tailored dress for street and business, and a softly detailed afternoon dress that's especially becoming to large figures. Even if you're not an experienced sewer, you'll enjoy making them, for the patterns are easy to follow and each includes a complete and detailed sew chart. So start right in, now, to discover how pleasant and economical it is to be your own dressmaker.

Dress With Jacket-Blouse.

Exactly the style you want for street wear, shopping trips and business. The jacket blouse is so attractive, with its puff sleeves, fitted waistline and saucy little peplum. It can be worn with your spring suit skirt, too. Make it up in flat crepe for immediate wear and later in linen or pique, using all one color or a printed blouse and plain skirt, as pictured.

For Large Women.

A very graceful dress with slenderizing lines, thanks to the smooth shoulders, the cape sleeves, always flattering to plump arms, and the skirt that's narrow round the hips and slightly wide at the hem. Gathers beneath the raglan shoulders make the blouse soft and becoming. In georgette, flat crepe or polka dot silk, this will be your spring favorite. Later, during hot weather, it will be a cool joy in dotted Swiss or voile.

The Patterns.

1477 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 2 yards of 39-inch material for the jacket and 2 yards of 39-inch material for the skirt.

1499 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 36 requires 5¼ yards of 39-inch material. If contrasting collar is wanted, it requires ⅔ yard.

Spring-Summer Pattern Book.

Send 15 cents for the Barbara Bell Spring and Summer Pattern Book which is now ready. It contains 109 attractive, practical and becoming designs. The Barbara Bell patterns are well planned, accurately cut and easy to follow. Each pattern includes a sew-chart which enables even a beginner to cut and make her own clothes.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

TIPS to Gardeners

General Garden Care

MOST flowers should have little or no artificial watering until they are at least half grown.

To get better and larger flower blossoms, cease watering when buds have formed.

For a continuous bloom, pick flowers regularly. This is most important with sweet peas and pansies, less so with petunias.

Avoid the common mistake of letting vegetables grow too large before picking.

Root crops—radishes, carrots, beets—are at their best when hardly half grown.

Pick peas just before pods fill out completely. Pick corn just at the "milk" stage, when the kernel, gouged with the finger nail, yields a milky juice. Use summer squash when they are small, just after the blossom has dropped off.

Certain other vegetables, of course, must be allowed to mature. Tomatoes should be ripened well on the vine, as should winter squash.

Terence Shea Tells of His Bulging Barrels

A social worker with more enthusiasm than tact went to call upon Terence Shea, night watchman, at his home.

"I hope, Mr. Shea," she said, "that you do not squander your money in riotous living. May I ask what you do with your wages?"

"I'd just as soon tell you as not," replied Mr. Shea. "'Tis $15 a week I make. When I've paid the rent, the provisions, and the milkman, and bought what's needed for Maggie and me five children, I deposit the rest of my money in barrels. Mostly, ma'am, sugar barrels. They're bigger an' hold more. But when I can't get them I use plain flour barrels."

Strange Facts!

Some Water That Glitters Is Gold

IN SEA water there are grains of pure gold. Columbus seeking gold in the New world was actually sailing through it when his crew threatened mutiny and wanted to turn back. Many of the Forty-niners went in clipper ships to California to find gold. They too sailed through waters of gold without knowing it. From prehistoric times men had dug gold out of the rocks and from beneath beds of sand and gravel. Then one man in a laboratory found in sea water particles of the precious metal.

He knew that sea water contained many elements beside common salt. From a very early time it was known that sea water also contained epsom salts, gypsom and magnesium chloride, but it was not until 1870 that Sonnstadt detected gold. Since then the analysis of modern chemists has revealed the existence of 32 out of the 80 known elements as existing dissolved in sea water.

Sonnstadt detected gold by means of a color test. He estimated there was one grain of gold to every ton of sea water. Tests for extracting it were based on this estimate.

Since 1927 projects for extracting gold from sea water have been given up. Anyone who tries to dip up a few tons of glittering sea water will have only his labor to show for his energy and his optimism. It doesn't pay to extract gold from the ocean waters. It has been found that it takes 3,858 million parts of sea water to produce one part of pure gold.

English Lord's Romance Told In 'Patrician'

By ELIZABETH C. JAMES

LORD MILTOUN, main character of John Galsworthy's "The Patrician," was born into the titled class of England. His family owned and controlled vast properties and the lives of countless people.

Elisabeth James

Amid the varied interests of his family, in which three generations lived in close contact, and against a background of town houses and country houses, Lord Miltoun grew to maturity with an ascetic soul and a highly cultivated mind. World travel had added breadth to his university training so that he now felt himself somewhat qualified to take his place in parliament.

It was at this time, just when his parents, Lord and Lady Valleys, were satisfied with the trend of things, he met Mrs. Noel.

Mrs. Noel lived alone in a little house not far from Lord Miltoun's country place. Through music and over the tea cups before a warm fire, she grew into the barren heart of the young nobleman, who loved her warm, soft coloring and her artistic insight. As soon as Lord Miltoun's family heard of this situation, they had much to say about it to each other. As usual Lady Casterly was first to do something.

Using her walking cane and holding the arm of Lady Barbara, her beautiful granddaughter, the seventy-eight-year-old grandmother went down to the little house to see this person who dared intrude into the well-arranged life of Lord Miltoun. The conversation was such that Mrs. Noel decided to give up seeing Lord Miltoun.

Family Discovers Marriage.

In the family a sort of crisis arose after Lady Casterly's call. There was much talk and it was discovered that Mrs. Noel was already married. Lord Miltoun was shocked. He had interpreted her situation to mean divorce.

Lord Miltoun went to see her. She told him now she had been married very young to a much older person, a clergyman of the Church of England. How life had grown intolerable and how she had lived alone for this long time. He told her good-by and left at once for London and his affairs in parliament.

THE GREATEST NOVELIST

Into a family of wealth and prestige, John Galsworthy was born in 1867. His education included the best preparatory schools and then Oxford, where he studied to be a lawyer.

The practice of law, wide travel, and a well-balanced life passed the years until Galsworthy was forty. In that year he published his first novel, and from then until his death in 1933, his fame continued to grow. In 1932 he was awarded the Nobel prize for his novel, "The Forsyte Saga."

His first speech brought acclaim to the name of Lord Miltoun and honor to the family. Lady Barbara went into London to congratulate her brother. Going to his suite of rooms, she found him raving with a brain fever. His ravings were to Audrey Noel and he spoke beautifully of his love for her.

Immediately Lady Barbara went to a telephone and made communication with Mrs. Noel, asking her to come at once to take care of Lord Miltoun. Of all this, Lady Barbara said nothing to her family. Mrs. Noel came at once and remained for days with Lord Miltoun, bringing him out of his delirium and giving him peace of mind.

Confronts Indecision.

Convalescence brought no peace of mind to Lord Miltoun. He had not the strength to fight the solid wall of his family, yet his mind and body were ill with longing for his loved one. As soon as he was strong enough, he went to London to see her.

Wishing to settle the dangling ends of the affair as quickly as possible, Lord Miltoun sought out his mother and father at their country place. The son stated that he would resign from parliament because his life was already joined with that of Mrs. Noel.

Sought Advice of Others.

But Lord Miltoun did not have what it takes to face a strongly united family. He did not rely upon himself, but instead he turned to others whose opinions he had been taught to follow instead of his own.

When Lord Miltoun went again to see Mrs. Noel, he found only a letter that said little. She was gone. Rushing into the home of Lady Casterly, he spoke with fury to her, rushing out into the night again like a madman. Lady Barbara followed him into the automobile and drove all night with him.

Again Lord Miltoun entered the affairs of parliament, intent on becoming a successful statesman.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses

TEETH—Your Passport to Good Health—and Tells How You Can Avoid the Tragedy of Dental Decay

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York.

A SCIENTIST, who was also a wit, once remarked that you must be true to your teeth or they will be false to you. That most people do not heed this advice is evidenced by the fact that almost 100 per cent of the adult population is affected by some form of oral disease, and from 90 to 97 per cent of all school children have decayed teeth.

As there is a close relationship between healthy teeth and healthy bodies, and conversely, between decayed teeth and sickly bodies, it is easy to understand why science views this appalling situation with the greatest alarm—and why such an eminent authority as Professor Ernest A. Hooton of Harvard University warns that "unless steps are taken to discover preventives of tooth infection, and correctives of dental deformation, the course of human evolution will lead downward to extinction."

Health and Happiness Depend on Sound Teeth

That is a strong statement, but it is not an exaggeration, for it would be difficult to over-estimate the influence of the teeth upon human health and happiness.

Do you wonder how teeth can affect happiness? Consider, then, that a pretty face depends, first upon the position of the mouth when the lips are closed, and second, upon the appearance of the teeth when the lips are parted. You cannot have a lovely mouth when the lips close over crooked front teeth; you cannot have an attractive smile if the teeth are dull.

And when gums recede, and loosened teeth are forced out of their natural position, the position of the lips is likewise changed—with the result that the lower part of the face is disfigured.

Surely this is tragedy enough. But the effect of decayed teeth upon health is of far greater significance.

Dental Decay Does Extensive Damage

A decayed tooth is a poison factory, distributing its noxious product to every part of the body. In the body, that poison attacks and centers in the weakest spot.

It may lead to neuritis, rheumatic ailments, dyspepsia, or even duodenal ulcers. It may be a contributing cause of heart disease.

In view of such extensive damage, it is easy to understand why a prominent medical authority has declared that if the teeth were given proper care, so that dental decay became rare, instead of almost universal, more than half of all sickness would be eliminated.

Mothers Are to Blame For Children's Bad Teeth

It has been estimated that the temporary, or "baby teeth" of children come through the gums practically perfect in 98 per cent of all children. Yet, statistics show that by the time they reach the first grade, 90 per cent of the children, both from wealthy homes and from homes where money is scarce, have bad teeth; one-third have abscessed conditions in their mouths, and every fourth or fifth child does not have proper masticating surfaces.

If this disgraceful state of affairs is allowed to continue, the blame must be laid squarely at the doors of the nation's mothers.

Formerly it was thought that oral hygiene alone would prevent tooth decay. But though the importance of thoroughly cleansing the teeth is recognized today as never before, nutritional scientists have discovered that correct diet, plus mouth hygiene, is the real key to dental health.

Diet and Its Relation To Dental Disease

The teeth are living tissues, which require proper nourishment just as much as any other part of the body.

Every food element required for a healthy body plays its part in building healthy teeth. But special emphasis must be placed upon providing adequate amounts of calcium, phosphorus, and three vitamins, A, C and D.

Teeth Are Actually Formed Before Birth

These substances must be supplied before birth and throughout life.

Although teeth do not appear in a baby's mouth until some months after it is born, they are actually formed before birth.

It is during this period, therefore, that proper dieting should begin. The teeth are constructed of the same materials as the bones, chiefly calcium and phosphorus, and if the diet of the prospective mother is not adequate, these building materials are withdrawn from her own teeth and bones.

The old idea that mothers must sacrifice "a tooth for every child" arose because expectant mothers did not realize the importance of taking extra amounts of calcium, which is obtained from milk, cheese, dried peas and beans, green leafy vegetables and many nuts; phosphorus, which is abundant in egg yolk, cheese, whole grain cereals, dried legumes and milk; and vitamin D, which is supplied by fish-liver oils; irradiated foods, or those enriched with vitamin D concentrates; and egg yolk.

It has been proved experimentally that when vitamin A is withheld, the teeth begin to deteriorate, and become chalky, white and brittle, owing to the loss of the enamel and exposure of the dentine.

Vitamin C is so closely related to the health of teeth and gums, that when it is lacking, profound changes occur, including swelling and bleeding of the gums and loosening of the teeth.

Four Important Rules For Dental Health

The prevention of dental decay and the preservation of sound teeth and healthy gums is founded on a four-point program:

First, a well-balanced diet containing an abundance of calcium, phosphorus and vitamins A, C and D.

Second, frequent and thorough brushing of the teeth, to remove all food particles. The use of an efficient dentifrice encourages efficient brushing and helps to keep the teeth looking attractive.

Third, the inclusion in the diet of foods that require the chewing, tearing, gnawing and biting for which our teeth were designed, such as raw cabbage, celery, apples and other fibrous foods.

Fourth, a visit to the dentist at least twice a year, so that he can check the condition of the teeth.

If every mother will follow this program, and train her children to follow it, the result will be a vast decrease in dental decay, and a forward step in human progress. For it is not too much to say that the SALVATION OF THE HUMAN RACE LIES IN SAVING ITS TEETH.

Questions Answered

Mrs. E. T. D.—Answering your question as to the effect of cooking on vitamin D, this is no problem in the kitchen. Natural vitamin D is virtually absent from most foods, but in irradiated foods, or those to which vitamin D concentrate has been added, the vitamin D is stable and ordinary cooking has little destructive effect on it.

Spray Roses Frequently

"I find that there is one simple point in aphis control that is overlooked by a majority of rose growers," says Melvin E. Wyandt, rose specialist of Painesville, Ohio. "It is simply that they should spray often. Now don't misunderstand me. Practically all rose growers know that they must spray with a good insecticide to control aphis, but they do not realize that aphids multiply rapidly."

An effective spray for aphis control is made by mixing one to two teaspoonfuls of nicotine sulphate in a gallon of water and adding a little dissolved laundry soap. Nicotine sulphate is a poison which kills by contact—the method necessary with sucking insects such as aphis—and in addition, being volatile, it gives off fumes which also kill, making it doubly effective.

A Great Northern freight train, with 6,000 horse power pulling it up the west slope of the Rocky Mountains. Many more such trains would be run if the railroads were not prevented by law from making special rates to compete with the steamship lines between the west and east coasts.

Why Pay ALL the Freight?

The business of running a farm isn't so different from running a railroad.

The more your land produces, the less it costs you to raise each bushel of wheat, each steer, each pound of wool, each bushel of potatoes, and each box of apples.

A large part of your expenses are the same whether you have bumper crops or a poor year.

Your necessary living expenses are the same. Your buildings and machinery have to be maintained. The tax collector takes the same number of dollars from you. The man who holds the mortgage on your land gets the same amount of interest.

That is the way it is with our business. The more freight we haul, the less it costs per ton to haul it—and the less we have to charge you. Trains which we have to run anyway, can handle considerably more traffic at practically no increase in cost.

When increased traffic requires more trains and more cars, there is of course an increase in our out-of pocket expenses, which is mostly for labor, but our fixed expenses remain the same and can be spread more thinly over the greater volume of traffic.

That is why we hope that the United States Senate will pass the Pettengill Bill (H. R. 1668). The House of Representatives already has approved it. This bill will modify the restriction which prevents us from making special rates to compete with the steamships for long haul traffic.

Whatever portion of this competitive traffic we can recover at rates that are MORE than our out-of-pocket costs, means that much more revenue to apply on our fixed expenses.

It will save us from having to look to the shippers along our railroad for so large a part of our overhead and other fixed costs.

This obviously is to the advantage of farmers who depend upon railroads to move their crops.

High School

Grades 1 and 2

We are all happy to be back to school after a glorious Easter vacation. Now pause a moment to think, our next vacation is only seven weeks from now.

The English classes all begin giving book reports on Wednesday.

The General Business Class has begun studying the organization and management of business.

The juniors resumed their work in letter writing in English class.

In General Science the freshmen are studying the solar system

Here is another member of the junior class of 1938 whose nicknames are too numerous to mention. She prefers hearing the popular song of the day, My Heart is Taking a Lesson, especially the way Kay Kyser plays it. She considers "The Soul of Anne Rutlege" as an A-1 book. In her list of authors Edgar Allen Poe ranks in first place. She saves her reading for a rainy day for she would rather hike or play kittenball when the weather permits.

It is probably because of her nationality that she relishes "fattingman" to the nth degree. As for drinks, she picks H2O as tops. For some unknown reason she considers "the twins" as her one and only pet peeve.

Her future ambition is to be a teacher and she holds all her teachers of present and by-gone days as inspirations.

We're sure you know now that she's yours truly, Marian Larson

Grades 3, 4, and 5

Those who received a perfect score in spelling last Friday were: Dorothy, Marilyn, Duane, Sylvia, Geralding, Jules, Dale, Reuben, Erma, Kenneth, Joyce P., Betty, Donna Mae, Irvin.

Our black board border for this month consists of Easter bunnies, toads and blackeyed susans made by the children and applied on a background of colored chalk.

Before Easter we tried our luck at painting Easter eggs. Some turned out very well.

Our book report chart is growing veny rapidly. Recently we have substituted written book reports for oral.

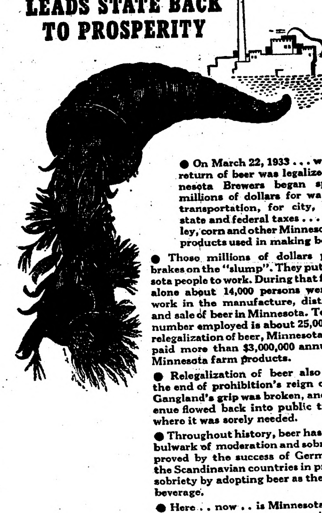
MINNESOTA BREWING INDUSTRY LEADS STATE BACK TO PROSPERITY



● On March 22, 1933 . . . when the return of beer was legalized, Minnesota Brewers began spending millions of dollars for wages and transportation, for city, county, state and federal taxes . . . for barley, corn and other Minnesota farm products used in making beer.

● Those millions of dollars put the brakes on the "slump". They put Minnesota people to work. During that first year alone about 14,000 persons were given work in the manufacture, distribution and sale of beer in Minnesota. Today the number employed is about 25,000. Since relegalization of beer, Minnesota Brewers paid more than $3,000,000 annually for Minnesota farm products.

● Relegalization of beer also marked the end of prohibition's reign of terror. Gangland's grip was broken, and tax revenue flowed back into public treasuries where it was sorely needed.

● Throughout history, beer has been the bulwark of moderation and sobriety . . as proved by the success of Germany and the Scandinavian countries in promoting sobriety by adopting beer as the national beverage.

● Here . . now . . is Minnesota's opportunity to retain these economic benefits and to promote moderation as well.

Luther League Convention

The Luther Leaguers of the Thief River Falls Circuit will hold its annual convention this year at Badger, beginning Friday evening April 29 and continuing until Sunday evening, May 1. A very fine program has been prepared, headed by Rev. A. I. Muus of Fergus Falls who will be the convention speaker. Eleanor Peterson and Gertrude Nohre from the local league were elected delegates at the meeting on Sunday evening. There will be numbers from Holt appearing on the program. The public is invited to attend these meetings and Sunday is the Rally day when people from the congregations of the circuit will worship there in place of their local churches.

License Revocations Jump

Drunken driving continued to run far ahead as the major cause for revocation of drivers' licenses when in March, according to Minnesota Highway department, 114 drivers lost the right to drive for being intoxicated. This cause accounted for all but 4 out of a total of 118 revocations for the month.

During March, 35 drivers' licenses were also suspended, the report showed. At the same time 60 licenses were returned to those whose suspension period had expired. The 118 revocations in March were in contrast to 71 in March a year ago. However, for the same period the suspensions declined under the total of March a year ago, which indicates that the courts are becoming more inclined to order revocations for flagrant traffic violations than suspensions.

Toftner Filed For Re-election

Late last Wednesday the sixth candidate to file for the office of Sheriff was the present incumbent, O. C. Toftner of Warren. Mr. Toftner is now serving his first term in that capacity. being elected in 1934 when he defeated Evald Erickson and Mr. Hanson who was a sticker candidate. Mr Toftner needs no introduction to the voters of Marshall county as he is well and favorably known all over the county, having been active in community and county affairs.

O. C. TOFTNER

The seventh candidate for Sheriff is Oscar Effterfield of Argyle who filed on Thursday. It is expected that there will be at least a few more filings for this office as there are still some that are waiting the deadline which is May 11.

Filings for other offices have seemed to quieten down for a while, but there are rumors that there will be more, especially for county commissioners.

Property Tax Reduced

State Treasurer Carl A. Halverson has opened fire on sets of figures presented by both present state auditor Staff King and ex-auditor Ray Chase. Auditor King's figures have been supplied to the Spring Grove Herald apparently to indicate that the state property levy is higher now than in 1930, but, Treasurer Halvorson points out. Auditor King left the 1937 levies out of the picture.

Actually, the state property tax has been reduced from $17,381,000 in 1936 to $13,490,000 in 1937.

Not only has the state property tax been pared down nearly four million dollars, but the state has been able to reduce school district levies by increases in the income tax collections and by direct aid to schools from permanent trust funds, which last year averaged $7.45 a pupil, treasurer Halversen declares.

The reduction in the state,s levy on property has been accomplished chiefly by the 10-mill limitation set by the last legislature, and shifting of the tax load from property to gross earnings, inheritances, gifts, iron ore, and incomes.

Mr. Halvorsen's dispute with Chase came over the ex-auditor's placing the state debt at $141,-035.388.40 - -omitting the small matter of $7,500,000 in rural credit bonds that were retired April 1. The state treasurer's official report on bonded indebtedness as of April 18 placed the states debt at $133,614,853.40.

Wheat Unharmed By Frost

There has been some fear among farmers that the recent freezing temperature have injured early sown wheat, according to R. S. Dunham, agronomist at the Northwest Experiment Station. In order to get some information on this question, Thatcher wheat was dug from the Station fields and placed in the germinating chamber.

Seed from the first sowing of wheat made March 21 was dug on April 7. At that time it had begun to sprout but no roots had formed. The seed before planting had a germination test of 96 per cent, and after it was dug up 95 per cent of the seeds were growing vigorously after only two days in the germinator. Seed from another planting made March 25 had swollen but had not germinated. In the germinator it also sprouted 95 per cent.

Filed For Commissioner

H. O. Hanson, publisher of the Holt Weekly News, was the 6th candidate to enter the race for county commissioner in the fifth district. He placed his filing with county auditor Levi G. Johnson on Saturday. Mr. Hanson is the president of the Village Council, a job he has filled for many terms and is also a member of the local schoolboard. He served one year as deputy sheriff of eastern Marshall county during the time John Bordewich was sheriff.

Mr. Hanson came to Holt in the spring of 1920 and started farming and in 1925 he took over the News.

The other six candidates who have filed for commissiones are Hans Dahl, in Linsell township; Chas. Skoglund, East Valley; Gunsten Skomedahl, Excel; Elmer Thompson, Whiteford; Clarence Tromsness, Como; and Chris. Clauson, Valley township. It is rumored that about three more candidates will enter the race.

Rev. Hanson made a trip to Badger Friday evening where he completed final arrangements for the Luther League Convention to be held there.

Tests Prove the Power of Food

Demonstrate a Vitamin-Rich Diet Is Vital to Health

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

MANKIND owes many things to the animals which have been used as test subjects in laboratories all over the world. As doctors and scientists have waged their war against disease, as they have made great strides forward in the study of foods and nutrition, they have carried on many of their experiments with rats.

The rats pictured here dramatically illustrate the power of food to influence growth. Although these two rats are exactly the same age, the weight of one is twice that of his brother. Where one animal is puny and underdeveloped, the second is fat and sleek and full of vitality.

What has produced such a difference in weight and general physical well-being? Merely a slight difference in diet. The two rats have lived under identically the same conditions, but the smaller animal on the left has received food lacking in sufficient vitamins, while the other rat has been fed the same diet, reinforced with vitamins.

If a well-balanced food ration is vital to the health of animals, how much more vital it must be for human beings. Surely the lesson is plain to see. If a mother wants her children to thrive she must feed them adequately. The child who is receiving a diet lacking in vitamins has no chance to grow and develop properly. Nor will the adult on a deficient diet attain or maintain optimum health.

EDITOR'S NOTE: To plan a diet wisely, to recognize the foods rich in important food elements, we must learn to utilize the discoveries of science. We must keep abreast of the newer knowledge of nutrition as it is presented by wise, unbiased interpreters such as C. Houston Goudiss, nationally known food authority, who each week offers his "What to Eat and Why" column in this newspaper. In this column Mr. Goudiss translates the latest developments into simple, non-technical language. By following his articles regularly, it is easy to keep in step with the most up-to-date findings of nutritional science.

Dr. Townsend Gets Pardon

The big news in the capitol newspapers early last week was the complete pardon given Dr. Francis E. Townsend by president Roosevelt. The $200 per month old age pension and recovery plan advocate came here to serve a 30 day jail sentence imposed for "contempt" of the House of Representatives at the time he walked out of the Bell House Committee investigating his plan and organization setup. "I regard this pardon as a complete vindication", declared Dr. Townsend. He later returned to California to help in the preparations for a national Townsend organization convention at Los Angeles in June.

Safetygrams BY FRED W. BRAUN The Safety Man

False perceptions are responsible for many accidents. Statistics show that a large proportion of railway accidents are caused by drivers actually running into trains. Some of these accidents may be due to optical illusions.

Many persons do not have accurate distance perception. An object which seems to them to be several hundred yards away may be only a few blocks away. A person driving 50 or 60 miles an hour does not have sufficient time to correct an initial misjudgement.

Anyone who is directly implicated in any accident involving distance judgement should have his eyes examined. Until examinations are made it often is difficult to determine whether or not eyesight is bad.

Some of the large trucking concerns are now requiring that their drivers have their eyes checked. This provision will not only protect the truck drivers and their cargoes; it will protect other motorists as well.

It is important for a driver of a car to be in first class condition as it is for the motor of the car to be in good mechanical repair.

Mrs. Willie Larson will serve Ladies Aid at her home on Sunday afternoon, April 24.

Treaty for Friendship in Which France May Join . . . Roosevelt's Spending Plan Starts Big Battle

Emergency rationing of troops by airplane and parachute was successfully accomplished in Texas by the army air corps during maneuvers. © Western Newspaper Union.

Move Toward Peace

NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN'S dream of security for peace in Europe through amicable arrangements of the democratic governments with the dictators may yet be realized. Anyhow, consummation of the ideal was brought nearer when Lord Perth, British ambassador to Rome, and Italian Foreign Minister Ciano signed the treaty of friendship which had been under negotiation for weeks. The pact is designed to end the long feud between the two nations, and it is probable France will join in after negotiations with Mussolini already suggested by Foreign Minister Bonnet. The British prime minister, of course, hopes that later Hitler can be brought into the group and that there will be formed a London-Paris-Rome-Berlin quadrangle in place of the Berlin-Rome axis.

Temporarily, the treaty provides for friendly relations between Britain and Italy in the Mediterranean and the Near East, but it does not go into full effect until "such date as the two governments together shall determine." In other words, Italy must first have withdrawn its troops from Spain and Britain must have recognized Italy's conquest of Ethiopia. The former may be delayed until France has won final victory. The latter depends upon permission from the League of Nations council, which has been asked by Chamberlain.

In essence, the treaty is a promise by each side not to attempt to change the status quo in the Mediterranean or Red sea areas nor to injure each other's interests there in any way.

Italy is to reduce her forces in Libya to peace time strength, and will adhere to the London naval treaty limiting the size of warships. The Suez canal is to be open to all nations equally in war or peace. Italy will abide by the international nonintervention committee's ruling on volunteers in the Spanish war and in case to withdraw from Spain entirely when the war is ended. Italy declares it has no territorial or political aims and seeks no privileged economic position in Spain, the Balearic islands, Spanish Morocco or Spanish possessions overseas.

Political leaders in Berlin did not minimize the importance of the Anglo-Italian pact, but insisted that the Berlin-Rome axis was not weakened. They were awaiting somewhat anxiously the visit of Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet to London, scheduled for late in April. There were no indications in London or Paris that Britain and France were ready yet to deal with Hitler. But it was rumored that Poland might join them and Italy in a four-power pact.

Ready for Battle

Senator Vandenberg

BIG spenders and little spenders lined up rapidly for the congressional fight over President Roosevelt's program for pump-priming and relief, for which he asked congress to provide nearly seven billion dollars. Of the total sum, 4½ billions would be used for spending and lending to speed recovery from the present business depression. The house appropriations committee began hearings on the President's proposals, and administration leaders in both branches of congress laid plans to expedite the passage of the necessary legislation, still hoping for adjournment by May 14. Sam Rayburn said all were agreed on handling the legislation as an omnibus bill. He was confident it would go through the house quickly, and also confident of the defeat of attempts to earmark the recovery funds to assure congressional control over them.

Opponents of the pump-priming led off with vigorous radio addresses by Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican national committee and Senator Vandenberg of Michigan. Hamilton came to the conclusion that "the President and the New Deal are far more interested in priming the polls than in priming the pumps of industry." Vandenberg said the plan, whatever its temporary benefit, would work a "long run disaster."

The priming plan, Vandenberg said, means trying to spend the country into better times on borrowed money, trying to buy prosperity.

In his message to congress and in a radio talk to the nation, the President proposed three groups of measures. The first involves mainly additional appropriations for the coming fiscal year, as follows:

One billion two hundred and fifty million dollars for the Works Progress administration; $175,000,000 for the Farm Security administration; $75,000,000 for the National Youth administration; $50,000,000 for the Civilian Conservation corps, and the $1,500,000,000 already made available to the Reconstruction Corporation for lending to business enterprises.

In a second group of measures Mr. Roosevelt asked:

Three hundred million dollars for immediate expansion of the housing and slum-clearance work of the United States Housing authority; $1,450,000,000 for public works loans and grants; an additional $100,000,000 for public roads; an additional $37,000,000 for flood control and reclamation projects already authorized and an additional $25,000,000 for federal buildings.

A third group listed by the Chief Executive referred to private credit. It involved desterilization of $1,400,000,000 of gold and a reduction by the Federal Reserve board of member bank reserve requirements which would add another $750,000,000 to the credit resources of the nation's banks. With these actions Mr. Roosevelt coupled a simplification of Security commission regulations.

Barcelona in Peril

Gen. Valino

SPANISH insurgents, having reached the Mediterranean at the port of Vinaroz, spread north and south along the coast and effectively cut off Catalonia from the rest of loyalist Spain. Veteran Spanish and Italian troops, led by Gen. Garcia Valino and Gen. Miguel Aranda, blasted their way into Vinaroz in a single day of severe combat, and Valino then started a northward drive on Tortosa, where important coastal highways converge.

Franco's next great objective was Barcelona. His forces were beginning a new movement against that city from the west, and his naval and air fleets left their bases to cooperate. After Barcelona falls, as it seems likely to do, Valencia will be attacked; and then Franco plans a final effort to take Madrid.

Dr. Townsend Pardoned

DR. FRANCES E. TOWNSEND, carrying a pair of socks and a typewriter, arrived at the jail in Washington, ready to serve his thirty day term for contempt of congress and become a martyr. But the old age pension planner was informed that President Roosevelt had pardoned him. The pardon was issued upon the urgent request of Representative C. Jasper Bell, chairman of the investigating committee before which Dr. Townsend refused to testify.

Quaker Work Camp Holiday

This summer, as last, several scores of college students may work eight hours a day at camps run by the American Friends Service Committee. Pick-and-shovel vacations give students a sense of service. Last year in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, they helped make new homes for 20 families, including that of Joe Petrofsky and his family (above).

Picture Parade

Last summer at Fayette camp, Miss Margaret Lamont of Trenton, N. J., rang the dinner bell that called busy campers from their tasks after a hard day at their varied tasks.

Most girls at the Fayette camp helped with sewing and nursery schools, but not Miss Dorothy Kaskill, a nurse from Media, Pa., who was allowed to swing a hammer.

Students at the camp come from many Eastern universities. The leaders are mostly college teachers and their wives, who pay a fee of $50 to meet the expenses of the eight or nine week season of the camp, as do student members.

Left: Walter Lawson, member of the Fayette community, busy in his garden after returning from the mines. Below: Miss Frances Ring of Michigan mixes paint while helping fix up a new home.

They pay for the privilege of doing this at the Fayette camp!

HOW to SEW

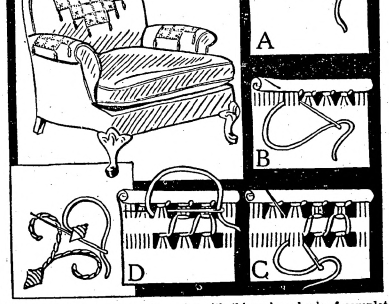
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



THE chair set shown here is made of an even meshed cream linen, marked off in squares of Italian hemstitching. Tiny scrolls in outline stitch with two diamonds in satin stitch are embroidered in all the outside corners. The scroll motif is shown at lower left. The tassels are made by raveling strips of the material and then rolling them.

The chair back piece measures 15 by 10 inches finished, and the chair arm pieces 7½ by 7½ inches. Allow ⅜-inch at all edges for the rolled hems. The hemstitched squares measure 2½ inches. Mark them in pencil. The method of hemstitching the rolled edges is shown here at A and B. Remember that a moist thumb always helps in rolling an edge evenly. Italian hemstitching is really just two rows worked together as shown at C and D. To prepare the rows, draw two threads, skip four and then draw two more.

Readers who have received their copy of Mrs. Spears' book on Sewing, for the Home Decorator, will be pleased to know that Book No. 2 is now ready. Ninety embroidery stitches; fabric repairing; also table settings; gifts; and many things to make for yourself and the children. If you like hand work you will be pleased with this unique book of complete directions for every article illustrated. Postpaid upon receipt of 25 cents (coin preferred). Just ask for Book No. 2 and address Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

A Mother's Fidelity

Mute eloquence of a mother's fidelity is her carved effigy, dressed in her own clothes, which stands in an open window of a house in Bruges, Belgium. When her son went to war in 1914, she promised to watch for his return at this window. Refusing to believe reports that he had been killed, she continued her vigil until bedridden, when she had the effigy put in her place.

For many years, she and her son have been dead, but the silent figure still watches the road leading to Liege.—Collier's Weekly.

'Living Death' In Prison Cell Told by Byron

By ELIZABETH C. JAMES

LORD BYRON'S "The Prisoner of Chillon" is a story of dungeons and chains, of cruelty and death. Beside Lake Leman in Switzerland stands a castle that once saw the imprisonment and death of the last members of a noble family. The dungeon of this castle was so deep that the water of the lake seeped through the walls and formed little pools on the prison floor. Sunlight never came into the dark prison, there was only one window and that was high and small. Through it came light during a short part of the day, but the sunshine never came through, and the distorted light gave a wan and ghostly appearance to the interior of the deep dungeon.

Elizabeth James

Into this prison were placed three brothers. They were the last members alive of their honorable family. There had been seven in the beginning, but the father had been burned at the stake, two brothers had died on the field of battle and their mother had died of a broken heart.

Placed so that they could not see each other, each man was chained to a rock pillar. Now the three of them languished in their chains which were so fastened that their bodies were soon indelibly scarred.

One Brother Dies.

After a time the voice of the second brother, the active, out-of-door one, grew more and more despondent; he spoke more softly and less often. Then he did not speak at all. When the keeper came to bring their water and prison food, he found this brother dead.

The two remaining brothers, the oldest and the youngest sons of the family, talked with each other of the battles and the insurrection that had brought them to this prison. But one day the youngest of the family did not answer to his brother's voice. There was only quietness in the dungeon, broken by the hysterical cries of the eldest son shrieking to his brother to stay with him. But he had died.

Terror, Then Calm.

For a time he was stunned with grief; he lost track of time or place. He was not conscious of anything except vague oblivions. Then gradually his senses returned to remind him that he was alone in the prison cell. When the keepers came and found that he had burst his chains they did not consider that it was worthwhile to chain him fast again, so they left him free to walk about the dungeon.

Then he wanted to see the world again, and he made steps up the side of the uneven rock wall until he could clutch the ledge of the window and pull himself up to look out through the little opening. Across the waters of Lake Leman and opposite the castle, he saw in the distance an island, green and bright in the summer sun.

Freedom Meaningless.

Then one day he was set free. Someone came to the castle and made negotiations. After a time a keeper opened the heavy barred door and told him that he could now go free.

The prisoner stood alone on the shore of the lake. Where could he go? He had no one in the world to whom he could return. Every kinsman had been killed, there was no friend left who would welcome him. He was still as much alone as if he were yet chained to his pillar in the dungeon.

Lord Byron wrote his poem, "The Prisoner of Chillon," from a true story. There was a prisoner, one Francois Bonivard, kept for four years in the dungeon of the Castle of Chillon, near Lake Geneva.

LORD BYRON A PLAYBOY

Two handicaps attended George Gordon, Lord Byron: his family environment and his own vanity. Gordon grew up without training, for his mother, being deserted by her willful husband, the rowdy Captain Byron, declined into melancholia so overwhelming that at times her mind seemed doomed. The parents left the boy to grow up alone.

Byron's natural pride was enhanced by his unexpected inheritance of the estate and title, for which there had been two heirs ahead of him. His attractiveness combined with his lack of principle kept him in mix-ups with women all his life.

His marriage to a lovely woman of England went happily for only a short time. Soon after their daughter was born, Lady Byron left her husband, never to return to him. She steadfastly refused to give any reason for this, but London soon heard of his behavior in a scandal. He was ostracized, and fled to Italy.

Until the end of his life, Byron lived on the continent.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses

LAXATIVE FOODS ★

Nationally Known Authority on Food Shows How Right Diet Can Help You to Avoid Health Hazards of Faulty Elimination

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York.

THOUSANDS of men, women and children are alive today because we have learned how to prevent many types of infections and how to cure diseases which once caused untimely deaths.

We have reason to be proud of the achievements of science in fighting disease and lengthening the span of life. But we should be ashamed of the fact that hundreds of thousands of individuals are not getting the most out of life—indeed they are not realizing half their potentialities—because improper eating and faulty habits of hygiene cause them to suffer from that great evil of civilization—constipation.

EVILS OF CONSTIPATION

Someone has called constipation the most deadly disease, and while this may seem like an extreme statement, it becomes justifiable when one realizes the untold misery and wretchedness that may result when food residues remain to stagnate and putrefy in the body.

Constipation muddies the complexion, dulls the eye and befogs the brain. It causes a general feeling of discomfort and fullness in the abdomen, lack of appetite, bad breath, coated tongue, a feeling of lassitude and a tendency to become easily fatigued.

By weakening resistance, it opens the way to numberless diseases. Serious complications, such as irritation of the appendix, may occur as a result of the friction of hard masses of waste against the delicate walls of the intestine. Piles have frequently been laid at the door of faulty elimination.

Do you wonder that I consider prompt, regular elimination the keystone of good health.

Its importance is readily understood when you consider the processes by which food is digested and absorbed.

FATE OF FOOD IN THE BODY

From the mouth, food passes down the esophagus into the stomach, where it is penetrated by the gastric juice. It then passes into the small intestine where it is mixed with the secretions of the liver and the pancreas. Here the nutritive elements are absorbed by minute, hair-like tubes which line the intestinal walls. These tubes converge into the blood vessels and lymphatics which transport nourishment to all parts of the body.

Undigested residues pass into the large intestine or colon, where they are normally moved along by a series of muscular contractions known as peristalsis, and finally evacuated.

The amount of the evacuation varies in bulk with the amount of indigestible roughage contained in the food. When there is insufficient bulk to promote normal peristalsis, waste accumulates and we have the condition known as constipation with all its resulting evils. Bacteria prey upon the stagnating material, producing poisons which may be absorbed by the body.

There is not the slightest excuse for allowing this condition to develop. For the misery and wretchedness of constipation may easily be avoided by including in the daily diet sufficient laxative foods, that is, those rich in fiber or cellulose.

BULK OR FIBER ESSENTIAL

Because of their fibrous framework, plant foods are our chief source of cellulose or bulk, and therefore, our greatest aid in promoting normal elimination. Vegetables and fruits are sworn foes of constipation, and unrefined cereals are also extremely valuable.

SOME LAXATIVE FOODS

Foods with an exceptionally high residue include raw fruits, especially those with skins and seeds; dried fruits, as apricots, prunes, figs and raisins; raw vegetables; such cooked vegetables as onions and leafy greens; the legumes, that is, dried peas and beans; whole grain cereals and bran.

Among the vegetables, don't overlook cabbage, lettuce, celery, spinach, brussels sprouts, string beans and green peas.

Foods which tend to form a little gas in the intestines, including spinach, onions and cauliflower, are also useful stimulants to intestinal movement.

In addition to providing cellulose, the acid fruits, such as oranges, lemons and grapefruit, act as a mild stimulus to increased peristaltic motions.

NEED FOR VITAMIN B

Another important factor in promoting normal elimination is vitamin B, which has been shown to be essential for good muscular tone and activity of the digestive tract. Investigations with experimental animals have demonstrated that it requires twice as long to empty the large intestine when the diet is deficient in vitamin B. Yeast, egg yolk, milk, whole grain cereals, liver and green leafy vegetables are good sources of this vitamin.

LIQUIDS ESSENTIAL

A sufficient quantity of liquids is likewise necessary to prevent the contents of the lower intestine from becoming too hard for easy evacuation. In addition to water, the diet should therefore contain an abundance of milk, fruit juices and other beverages. Acidophilus milk and buttermilk are especially beneficial.

Fats and oils, used in moderation, act as gentle lubricants.

REGULAR HABITS

It is most important to eat at regular times for evacuation, as this is a great aid to body rhythm.

Guard carefully against overeating, for this practice is a frequent cause of constipation. When the digestive system is overworked, none of its functions can be efficiently performed.

The homemaker is largely responsible for safeguarding her family against the dangers of faulty elimination. For she has it in her power to plan meals that will help normal individuals to avoid the curse of constipation.

READERS of this newspaper are invited to write to C. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th Street, New York City, for a free copy of his bulletin, "Helpful Hints on Planning a Laxative Diet."

The bulletin gives concrete suggestions for combatting faulty elimination through correct eating and proper habits of hygiene. It gives a list of laxative foods and contains a full week's sample menus. A postcard is sufficient to carry your request.

Have You a Question?

Ask C. Houston Goudiss

C. Houston Goudiss has put at the disposal of readers of this newspaper all the facilities of his famous Experimental Kitchen Laboratory in New York city. He will gladly answer questions concerning foods, diet, nutrition, and their relation to health. You are also invited to consult him in matters of personal hygiene. It's not necessary to write a letter unless you desire, for postcard inquiries will receive the same careful attention. Address him at 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

Questions Answered

Mrs. B. T. M.—Do not worry if your child prefers the egg yolk to the white. The white is chiefly protein, and he can easily obtain protein from other foods, especially milk. But the yolk contains an abundance of minerals and vitamins in addition to protein and fat. Nutritionists have determined that the inclusion of one egg yolk daily in an otherwise adequate diet is an effective method of balancing the intake and output of iron in a child's diet.

Miss S. B.—No, the generous use of cream cannot be considered as a substitute for taking milk as a beverage or in cooked dishes. Cream is much higher in fat and contains less protein, minerals and vitamins, with the exception of vitamin A. Cream deserves to be included in the dietary for its vitamin A content, but it should not replace milk.

Mrs. A. McK. — Strawberries contain vitamins A, B and C. Recent experiments indicate that they rank with citrus fruits and tomatoes as a source of vitamin C.

AROUND THE HOUSE

When Painting Molding. — A piece of heavy cardboard is handy for the amateur painter to hold under the molding to protect the wall paper.

• • •

Attractive Garnish.—As a garnish, lemon slices may be sprinkled with paprika, rolled in chopped parsley, or mint or striped with pimiento.

• • •

Rinse Silks Well.—Silk underthings should be washed in water that is barely warm, and should be rinsed in at least three fresh rinsing waters.

• • •

To Retain Juices in Meats.—To keep flavor and juices in meat when baking or frying, expose it to extreme heat first, then reduce the temperature and cook more slowly.

• • •

When Someone Is Ill.—Always wrap a rubber hotwater bottle in soft cloth before placing in a patient's bed. Place the bottle near but not against the patient's flesh. If placed too close the patient may be burned before realizing it.

• • •

For That Musty Odor.—To remove a musty odor from a room, put a drop of oil of lavender into the corners.

Hidden Benefits

Few housewives realize the underlying advantage of the use of a good light-oil furniture polish! Most polish is used only for the luster it bestows on the chairs, tables, piano, woodwork in the home. Rubbing the polish on cleans the furniture—works up a glow—and the outward effect is fresh and sparkling! But that is only part of the housewife's reward. For out of this domestic routine comes definite benefit to the furniture! A reputable polish, with a light oil base, does what is known as "feeding" the finish. The "massage" causes the oil to penetrate, seep into the pores of the wood—just enough to lubricate—and keep it healthy! Here, it is important to note that cheap polishes are made with a heavy oil base—and are "greasy" and unpleasant to use. The best polish—made with a fine light-oil base—is never greasy. Applied on a damp cloth (according to directions), it is neat to use and proves a boon to the furniture! Lack of polishing—or the use of a poor polish—will cause the finest wood to dry out, crack, split—for wood is a product of Nature and needs a certain amount of oily moistness. So polish the furniture regularly! Use a quality oil polish—it pays! For not only does the furniture look better—it is better! Its life is preserved!

A Great Northern freight train, with 6,000 horse power pulling it up the west slope of the Rocky Mountains. Many more such trains would be run if the railroads were not prevented by law from making special rates to compete with the steamship lines between the west and east coasts.

Why Pay ALL the Freight?

The business of running a farm isn't so different from running a railroad.

The more your land produces, the less it costs you to raise each bushel of wheat, each steer, each pound of wool, each bushel of potatoes, and each box of apples.

A large part of your expenses are the same whether you have bumper crops or a poor year.

Your necessary living expenses are the same. Your buildings and machinery have to be maintained. The tax collector takes the same number of dollars from you. The man who holds the mortgage on your land gets the same amount of interest.

That is the way it is with our business. The more freight we haul, the less it costs per ton to haul it—and the less we have to charge you. Trains which we have to run anyway, can handle considerably more traffic at practically no increase in cost.

When increased traffic requires more trains and more cars, there is of course an increase in our out-of pocket expenses, which is mostly for labor, but our fixed expenses remain the same and can be spread more thinly over the greater volume of traffic.

That is why we hope that the United States Senate will pass the Pettengill Bill (H. R. 1668). The House of Representatives already has approved it. This bill will modify the restriction which prevents us from making special rates to compete with the steamships for long haul traffic.

Whatever portion of this competitive traffic we can recover at rates that are MORE than our out-of-pocket costs, means that much more revenue to apply on our fixed expenses.

It will save us from having to look to the shippers along our railroad for so large a part of our overhead and other fixed costs.

This obviously is to the advantage of farmers who depend upon railroads to move their crops.

HOW THE BANKS AID THE GOVERNMENT

Normal and Emergency Needs Met by Advances of Commercial Banking Credit

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. — The American commercial banking credit system is an absolute essential in the financial operations of business and government, Harold G. Moulton, President of the Brookings Institution of Washington, D. C., said here recently in an address before the Graduate School of Banking conducted under the joint auspices of Rutgers University and the American Bankers Association.

If the flexibility and expansibility provided by commercial banking credit were eliminated, Dr. Moulton declared, "it is scarcely too much to say that the economic system itself would shortly be destroyed.

"Normally the amount of credit extended by commercial banks to the government is small in amount and for the purpose mainly of financing temporary requirements in anticipation of tax collections or bond sales. But in periods of war and acute depression, when the financial requirements of government expand with great rapidity, the expansion of commercial bank credit is on a tremendous scale. Such is the case at the present time.

How Public Needs Are Financed

"The purchase of government securities by individuals and by the commercial banks provides the government with the means by which its manifold activities are financed. The Treasury obtains the funds, with which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other government credit agencies finance their operations, through the sale of securities, largely to commercial banks. These funds, in turn, have gone to the assistance of distressed banks and other financial institutions, to aid industrial and agricultural enterprises, to finance new public and private capital construction, and to provide relief to the unemployed."

Dr. Moulton declared that it is not true that the world depression was caused by a breakdown of the American banking system "which did not, in fact, occur until the depression had been under way for more than three years." He added:

"Nor is it true that the world maladjustments existing in 1929 can be explained simply by undue extensions of commercial banking credit in the preceding years. These maladjustments involved world agricultural, industrial, commercial and financial relations."

High School

A complete revolution has taken place in the library. All the books have been lettered and several repaired. Each student has his individual card for borrowing books. Under this new system we hope to have a better library.

The Biology class has completed the study of the skin.

In General Business the freshmen have begun the chapter "The Employee in Business".

The Modern History class is studying the World War.

In Geometry, we are beginning to study the regular polygon and the circle.

The highschool play "Mr. Bob" which will be presented the first part of May, is progressing very rapidly under the direction of Mr. Karvonen. The cast includes the following characters:

Phillip Rayson - Harold Gavere
Robert Brown, clerk of the Benson and Benson - Howard Lorentson.
Jenkens, Miss Rebecca's butler - Robert Sandberg.
Rebecca Luke, a maiden lady - Doris Larson.
Katheran Rogers, her neice, Opal Werner.
Marian Bryant, Katherines friend, Florence Kolden.
Patty, Miss Rebecca's maid, Lorna Peterson.

Another member of the junior class is known as Lolly. She prefers hearing Johnny Green and his orchestra as they play the popular song Ti Pi Tin.

She is extremely fond of Apple pie a la mode and ice cold coco cola, so will someone pass that next time she is reading "Bright Land" by Janet Fairbanks, which is her favorite book.

"Lolly" has picked that musical extravaganza "Rosalie" as her favorite movie, and Alice Faye and Nelson Eddy as her favorite stars.

In her estimation, skating or just walking are two ideal sports.

"Lollys" pet peeve is working at Dad's station, but she merely exclaims Phooey! when this task confronts her.

She hopes to be someones private secretary in later years, and of course, she aims to be a good one.

You've guessed it! Its the one and only Lorna Peterson.

Grades 1 and 2

We have been busy making May baskets during Art Class.

The poems we have memorized for this month are "Who Likes the Rain" by Clara Bates and "What Does Little Birdie Say" by Alfred Tennyson.

Shirley, Calvin, Donald and Dorothy had 100 in Spelling on Friday.

Donald Larson missed school for the first time this year. We are sorry he is ill.

In Arithmetic we have been learning the use of the ruler. We also are studying the use of the quart and pint measure.

Geo. Fricker made a business trip to Warren on Thursday to get a copy of the tax books for this district.

Karvonen was appointed chairman of the Resolutions Committee. At the business meeting, Stilof Anderson was elected Treasurer of the Circuit League. Rev. Hanson was reelected chairman of the program committee.

Don't forget to attend the play "Mr. Bob" given at the Holt High school tonight and tomorrow night.

Has Many Building Jobs

Martin Swenson, local carpenter, has started out with his work for the 1938 season. The past week he has been busy remodeling the interior of the farm home of Oscar Oswald five miles west of Holt.

Mr. Swenson states that as soon as weather permits he will be busy putting up several farm buildings in the vicinity of Newfolden and also has some jobs to do in that village. Last year Mr. Swenson buildt several buildings in and around Holt and Newfolden. He said that as soon as he gets his work under way he will employ a crew of men and keep the work going on several jobs at one time.

"Footprints On The Sands Of Time"

The past record of a man or an institution is a reliable omen of the present or future. A long record of reliable, honest and sincere service, are factors that make up a past that can truly be pointed to with pride, these are "footprints" that lead to sucaess.

The past record of this paper is our strongest recommendation.

We today pass into another stretch of time, having started Volume No. 28 and hope that we have so served our readers and advertisers that we may merit your continued support in this field of business.

55 Lb. Muskie At New Hatchery

Five female muskies, ranging in weight from 35 to 55 pounds are furnishing eggs for the new hatchery at Nevis on Belle Tain Lake. Over 300,000 eggs have already been taken, and by May 15 there will be 750,000 muskeis one inch long swimming the waters of the hatchery pond.

All previous attempts to propagate the wary muskie have failed in Minnesota, but after thoroughly studying the habits of the fish, Mr. O. J. Nelson, superintendent of fish propagation, has become convinced they can be propagated successfully.

A special rearing pond of about 12 acres of water has been prepared for receiving the fry. It has been seined out so no adult fish remain and is rich in insect life, such as, water fleas, fresh water shrimp and daphne—ideal for young fry. When they have grown in this pond to two inches, they will be fed top water minnows to prevent cannibalism.

When they are three to four inches long, big shiner minnows will be dumped in the pond as food. By July 20 the fry are expected to average six inches in lenght. But they will be held in the pond, protected from other fish, until they are eight to ten inches long and next fall will be planted in Belle Tain, Mantrap, Boulder and other lakes.

"The biggest problem in raising muskies is cannibalism," says Mr. Nelson. "The muskelung is the most voracious fish known. I have seen a two and one half inch muskie try to eat a two inch muskie and swim around for half a day with the smaller fish's tail sticking out of its mouth".

"If we figure to raise one musky to a ten inch size, it will require seven pounds of food in six months; and to raise that seven pounds of food (chiefly minnows) will require 21 pounds of additional food. So it is easily seen why muskies are so difficult to raise."

As soon as the northern waters warm up five to eight more females and four of five males will be obtained for an attempt at reaching the state's goal of 750,000 musky fry this season. The new hatchery is capable of producing 1,200,000 fry per season with 20 hatching jars.

Land O'Lakes Strike Settled

Settlement of the Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc., strike in Minneapolis which started about three weeks ago was announced Sunday afternoon by Governor Benson.

Under the terms of the settlement the union, Milk Drivers and Dairy employes Local No. 471, waived its demands for a closed shop, which was the principal issue in the strike, Gene Larson, union business agent, said, but won increased authority for its shop stewards.

The company also agreed to increase wages an everage of 10 per cent and to give employes two additional holidays a year, and to pay the employes full wages for the first week of the strike, and the difference between the regular wages and the $10 weekly strike benefits paid by the international union for the rest of the strike period.

In making the announcement, Governor Benson, in whose office the settlement was made and agreements signed after days of almost constant negotiations, said:

"The settlement is satisfactory to both sides. This bring to an end a very unpleasant and unfortunate controversy which had developed between organized farmers and organized workers. I am sure that the organized workers and the organized farmers will be friendly in their relationships."

Present at the time of settlement in addition to the governor, were John Brandt, president of Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc., as the representative of that organization, and business agents of the Milk Drivers and Dairy employes union, No. 471.

Governor Benson stepped into the picture several days ago. He appeared before the union Saturday night and discussed the problem. After conferences between committees representing both sides virtually the entire morning, the settlement, described by Governor Benson as embracing "compromises by both sides", was brought to an end with the signature of Brandt and the unions business agents. — St. Paul Dispatch.

Youths To Be Certified To NYA

Unemployed young people between the ages of 18 and 25 who might be interested in receiving part time employment under the National Youth Administration are asked to get in touch with Paul Steen, Executive Secretary of the Marshall County Welfare Board, so that they can be considered for certification for work.

The National Youth Administration work is similar to WPA work except that youths work one-third of the hours and receive a corresponding pay. Young people who have registered for employment and who are in need of work so that they can supply their own needs are to see the Welfare Office regarding this and present to them their employment Office numbers and their Social Security Account numbers. More complete information on the matter can be received from the Welfare Office. It is not necessary that the youths come from relief families as the youths from families who have inadequate incomes can also be considered.

Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Nohre left Monday evening for Spring Grove, Minn., where they will spend some time while Mr. Nohre attends to the matter of closing the estate of his mother who passed away a short time ago.

NYA Officers Visited School

Mr. Selke and Mr. C. B. Lund of St. Cloud spent part of Monday afternoon visiting at the Holt School. Mr. Selke is president of the St. Cloud State Teachers College and is State Director of the National Youth Administration. Mr. Lund, formerly of the St. Cloud State Teachers college, is now Regional Director of the National Youth Administration with seven states and at times twenty one states under his jurisdiction.

The National Youth Administration has charge of the student aid to high school and college students as well as projects for youth out of school who have been unemployed. They were very much pleased with the work done at our school by the pupils on the program and also with the library project that is under way at the local school.

During their stay here they observed work at the school and also spoke to the high school. Mr. Selke made an interesting comparison of the school work of Canada and Cuba, where he has visited recently to that of Minnesota. He stressed the possibility of succeeding if the desired willingness and interest was present. Mr. Lund outlined various aspects of his work as director of youth work in the several states.

These men have a special interest in the Holt School in that three of our local teachers have had work under them while attending college. We are happy to report that their impressions of the local school were very satisfactory.

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses FOOD PRESERVATION and Explains How to Protect Your Family Against the DANGERS of TAINTED FOOD

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York.

A DISTINGUISHED nutritional scientist once remarked that it is a small favor to keep people alive on a poorly chosen diet. For with the wrong food, they may not get one-fifth of their potential efficiency into their lives; they will drag themselves through miserable days, never knowing the joys of physical fitness nor enjoying the abundant health that comes from a perfect balance of nutriment.

The Perfect Diet May Not Be Safe to Eat

But even the homemaker who plans an ideal diet may be undermining the health of her family by feeding them spoiled or tainted food which carries the deadly germs of disease.

We frequently hear stories of death or serious illness caused by food contamination. And it is significant that the improper care of food in the home is most often responsible. One physician has gone so far as to state that there is no estimating the number of persons who, while not sick in bed, feel "rather poorly," "not strong," or "kind of run down" because improperly preserved food gives them insufficient nourishment and their strength is exhausted in combating the action of germs.

Homemaker's Responsibility For Food Sanitation

An enormous amount of time and money is expended to put foodstuffs in your kitchen in a fresh, palatable and safe form. Laws govern the manufacture, transportation and merchandising of every food product and an elaborate system is maintained for the inspection of meat. But all this care can be undone if food is not adequately refrigerated in the home.

From the moment that meats, fruits, vegetables and groceries reach your kitchen, the responsibility is yours, and you will be guilty if your husband and children suffer ill effects from eating tainted food.

Causes of Food Spoilage

Spoilage in food is due to the ravages of a vast army of micro-organisms which cause it to sour, decay or putrefy, depending upon the nature of the food.

There are three classes of micro-organisms which develop in food—bacteria, molds and yeasts. All three are notable for their minute size, rapid growth and wide distribution. Yeasts and bacteria can only be seen with the aid of a microscope.

Not all micro-organisms are the enemies of man; some are useful in the preparation of foods such as cheese, sauerkraut and bread. These need not concern the homemaker. But the harmful bacteria will flourish wherever conditions are favorable to their growth.

There are two important factors governing food preservation. One is the maintenance of a constant temperature of from 40 to 50 degrees Fahrenheit—under no circumstances should food be stored at a temperature higher than 50 degrees, or bacteria will multiply so rapidly as to make it unsafe to eat. The other is to maintain the proper degree of moisture in the air—neither too much, which encourages the growth of micro-organisms, nor too little, which dehydrates fruits and vegetables.

Appearance of Food May Be Deceptive

The great danger of food that is improperly stored is that it may become spoiled without advertising that fact. Appearance is seldom a reliable guide and unless your refrigerator is efficient, food may become unfit for consumption before spoilage can be noted by sight, taste or smell.

All types of protein foods harbor bacteria which multiply rapidly at temperatures higher than 50 degrees. Under favorable conditions of moisture and temperature, bacteria double their number every 20 to 30 minutes, and a single bacterium can produce a million bacteria in 15 hours.

Safeguard Children's Milk

Milk is the most perishable of all foods, because it is an ideal medium for bacterial growth. If this master food is to be kept safe for children, it must be stored at a temperature not higher than 45 degrees.

Careful studies show that there is very little increase in bacteria when milk is held for as long as 48 hours at a temperature of 40 degrees. But when the temperature was allowed to rise to 50 degrees, almost 30 times as many bacteria developed, and at 60 degrees, the bacteria multiplied more than 8,000 times in the same period.

Foods That Spoil Easily

The rapid multiplication of bacteria also occurs in other foods having a high protein content, including meat, meat broths, fish, gelatin, custards, creamed foods, peas and beans. It is important that all these foods, as well as milk, be kept in the coldest part of the refrigerator, as a few degrees in temperature make a great deal of difference in preventing spoilage.

Once food has begun to deteriorate, it must [illegible] discarded or it may endanger [illegible]alth. Cooking will not make spoiled foods fit for consumption.

How to Prevent Mold

Molds are another form of spoilage that the homemaker must constantly battle. Mold will grow on almost any substance, but is particularly likely to occur on acid foods, as lemons, oranges, tomatoes and berries; on neutral foods, such as bread and meat; on sweets, notably jellies and preserves, and on salty foods, including ham or bacon.

Molds may develop quickly or slowly, depending upon the temperature and degree of moisture. They thrive under the influence of warmth and moisture and may remain invisible to the naked eye for as long as 36 hours. All molds are white at first, but as they mature they change color, becoming blue, red, or assuming various shades of brown.

To the bacteriologist, these colors have different meanings. To the homemaker, they all tell the same story—that through improper storage food has lost its appetite appeal and palatability.

Mold growths may be destroyed by boiling temperatures. They may be retarded by keeping food in the cold, dry circulating air provided by an efficient refrigerator.

A good refrigerator is the best investment a family can make. It enables you to take advantage of bargain prices to buy food in quantity. And it safeguards health by preventing contaminated food from finding its way to your table.

An efficient refrigerator also preserves the flavor and texture of meats, fruits and vegetables, so that you enjoy these foods at their best. But its greatest contribution to human welfare is the preservation of food so that it will nourish your body instead of poisoning it.

Have You a Question?

C. Houston Goudiss has put at the disposal of readers of this newspaper all the facilities of his famous Experimental Kitchen Laboratory in New York City. He will gladly answer questions concerning foods, diet, nutrition, and their relation to health. You are also invited to consult him in matters of personal hygiene. It's not necessary to write a letter unless you desire, for postcard inquiries will receive the same careful attention. Address him at 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

Questions Answered

Mrs. S. T.—When thoroughly chewed and given a proper place in the diet, cheese is usually well digested. Experiments performed by the United States Department of Agriculture demonstrated that an average of 95 per cent of the protein and over 95 per cent of the fat of cheese were digested and absorbed.

E. W.—It's a fallacy to assume that brown sugar is "more nutritious and healthful" than granulated sugar. It is true that brown sugar contains traces of mineral elements, while white sugar contains practically none. But the amounts are variable and never significant. Regardless of color, sugars make their sole contribution to the diet through their carbohydrate content. The caloric value of white sugar is a trifle higher than that of brown, the difference amounting to 91 calories per pound.

WPA WASTE ASSAILED

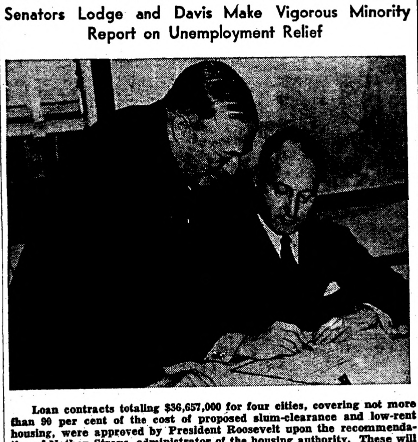
Senators Lodge and Davis Make Vigorous Minority Report on Unemployment Relief



Loan contracts totaling $36,657,000 for four cities, covering not more than 90 per cent of the cost of proposed slum-clearance and low-rent housing, were approved by President Roosevelt upon the recommendation of Nathan Straus, administrator of the housing authority. These will provide approximately 6,667 family dwelling units for over 26,000 slum dwellers. The photograph shows Senator Robert Wagner of New York watching Mr. Straus sign the loan contracts.

Lodge and Davis Strike

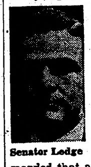
HENRY CABOT LODGE, JR., of Massachusetts and James J. Davis of Pennsylvania made a minority report of the senate committee on unemployment and relief in which they vigorously attacked administration business and relief policies and condemned the majority report for failure to investigate alleged waste in the WPA administration.



Senator Lodge

The two Republican senators demanded that administration leaders stop making "extravagant utterances, in which whole classes of people are insulted and nameless individuals are lambasted over the radio instead of being prosecuted in the courts."

They then offered these further suggestions for immediate action:

1. Repeal of the undistributed profits tax and modification of the capital gains tax as proposed in the senate tax bill and general tax reduction wherever possible.
2. Encourage that which is good in business.
3. Stop congress from "wasting its time" over consideration of "such schemes" as the Supreme court enlargement bill and the government reorganization bill and allow the legislators to concentrate on the relief and unemployment problem.
4. Eliminate tax exempt securities and reduce unnecessary and burdensome social security taxes.
5. A true unemployment census should be taken to serve as a basis for scientific treatment of the question of wages and hours on a national scale.
6. End executive discretion in tariff matters and return to congress the control of the currency.
7. Reorganization of the agencies of unemployment and relief.
8. Initiation of a new inquiry into the relief problem during which all persons who have constructive criticism of the operations of the present unemployment relief system would be heard.

Wallace Is Rebuked

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE was rebuked for star chamber methods by the Supreme court in a decision reversing his order of June 14, 1933, fixing maximum rates to be charged by marketing agencies at the Kansas City stockyards.

The court's opinion, written by Chief Justice Hughes, reverses a decree of a three judge district court in Kansas City, upholding the order, on the ground that the commission men were denied a fair and open hearing and that Secretary Wallace accepted the "findings" of the government prosecutors without even reading the evidence.

In other decisions the Supreme court upheld the municipal bankruptcy act of 1937, and the 1923 filled milk act which bars interstate shipment of milk to which other oils or fats have been added.

"End Tax Exemptions"

PROMPT legislation was asked of congress by President Roosevelt to remove tax exemptions on income from all future government bonds, federal, state and local, and on all government salaries.

In his special message the President said existing exemptions resulted from judicial decisions and could be eliminated by a "short and simple statute" which he felt the courts would uphold.

Mr. Roosevelt said: "Tax exemptions through the ownership of government securities have operated against the fair or effective collection of progressive surtaxes. Indeed, I think it is fair to say that these exemptions have violated the spirit of the tax law itself by actually giving a greater advantage to those with large incomes than to those with small incomes. . . .

"The same principles of just taxation apply to tax exemptions of official salaries. The federal government does not now levy income taxes on the hundreds of thousands of state, county and municipal employees. Nor do the states, under existing decisions, levy income taxes on the salaries of the hundreds of thousands of federal employees. Justice in a great democracy should treat those who earn their livelihood from government in the same way as it treats those who earn their livelihood in private employ."

Won't Deal With Hitler

FRENCH PREMIER DALADIER let it be known that his government will not enter into any four power European treaty that includes Nazi Germany. In consequence, it was understood in Paris, Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain had given up that plan for the present. Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet went to London and discussed Anglo-British relations and other matters relating to the peace of Europe.

Henlein Warns Czechs

KONRAD HENLEIN, leader of Czechoslovakia's 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans, warned the government of "war internally or from the outside" in a militant speech which quarters close to the government believed bore the approval of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler.

Henlein openly proclaimed that German Naziism is the "guiding principle" of his Sudetens and demanded that Czechoslovakia's foreign policies be revised immediately as regards Germany.

He warned the Prague government against placing reliance in its military alliances with France and Soviet Russia, and frankly asserted that Czechoslovakia must cease resisting Germany's ambitions toward the east.

An emergency meeting of the cabinet council was called to consider the grave situation created by Henlein's demands.

In Budapest 20,000 Hungarians demanded the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia at a rally of the Hungarian Revision league.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

PRIME MINISTER EAMON DE VALERA of Ireland and Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain met again in London and signed an agreement that brings to a close the six-year tariff and trade war between the two countries. The quarrel began when Ireland refused to pay England land tithes amounting to $25,000,000.

The agreement leaves for later settlement the question of incorporation of North Ireland, or Ulster, into the Irish republic. This now seems possible of accomplishment for both parties in Ireland have nominated for first president of the state under the new constitution Dr. Douglas Hyde, a Protestant. Hyde is the country's most distinguished Gaelic scholar. He is the son of a former Protestant rector in County Roscommon and is seventy-eight years old.

Chemurgy for Production

MEMBERS of the National Farm Chemurgic council, holding their fourth annual meeting in Omaha, challenged the view of President Roosevelt that the country's economic troubles are due to overproduction.

"There need be no limits," said Wheeler McMillen, editor of Country Home and president of the council, in his opening address, "to the wealth we can produce. Freeing farmers from the narrowness of food and export markets, the soil can be enabled to produce houses for the ill-housed and the innumerable desires of a great free people. The processes of production can create the purchasing power for consumption.

"In no other way than by the creation of wealth can there be wealth for all. Chemurgy calls, not upon government, but on the triple powers of agriculture, industry and science. We reject the cowardly counsels of national poverty and pessimism. We propose to apply science and capital and labor to the soil and its products. Chemurgy's challenge to Americans is a challenge to share in wealth by creating wealth."

Mine Blast Kills 45

EXPLOSION of dust in a coal mine on Keen mountain 12 miles from Grundy, Va., buried the night force of 45 men under thousands of tons of slate and rock, wrecked the equipment and filled up the passages to the drifts. Hundreds of rescuers worked frantically for 20 hours and finally recovered the bodies of the victims. Not one of the gang survived. The mine was opened only last November and was considered one of the most modern and safest in the United States.

For Annual Wage Guarantee

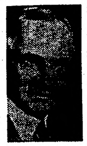
WHILE Henry Ford was lunching at the White House by invitation of President Roosevelt, the officials of his company were considering a plan for the guarantee of an annual minimum wage, offered by the Ford Brotherhood of America, an independent labor organization. Establishment of such a plan has not before been asked, but it has been advocated by Mr. Roosevelt and Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan.



Henry Ford

The brotherhood's goal is at least $1,500 a year for every hourly-rate worker in the mammoth River Rouge plant of the Ford Motor company in Dearborn, where it claims a membership of 21,400. During peak production periods the factory has nearly 90,000 employees.

William S. McDowell, Sr., brotherhood attorney, said that in return for the proposed wage guarantee F. B. A. members would sign an agreement that each would purchase a new car from the company every two years at the same price at which they are sold to dealers.

Hard Fighting in China

JAPAN'S reorganized forces in Shantung province were forcing the Chinese back steadily despite desperate resistance. The invaders even crossed the border into Kiangsu province for the first time. The defenders claimed the Japanese suffered a severe setback north of Taierchwang; they also asserted they had recaptured 15 important towns in Shansi, Honan and Hopei provinces.

One in Seven on Relief

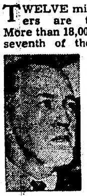
TWELVE million American workers are totally unemployed. More than 18,000,000 persons, or one-seventh of the population of the country, are receiving public assistance from the federal, state or local governments. From 1933 to 1937 inclusive the federal and state governments have spent $19,400,000,000 for work relief and other forms of public assistance.



Harry Hopkins

These far from cheerful figures were in a preliminary report of the senate committee on relief and unemployment submitted by Chairman Byrnes.

At the time the report came in, Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator, was telling the house appropriations committee, holding hearings on the administration's recovery-relief program, that the proposed $1,250,000,000 relief appropriation would enable 200,000 to be added to federal aid rolls, bringing the total number to 2,800,000 persons.

This money, he said, would last only for the first seven months of the coming fiscal year

The senate committee report in general absolved the WPA from charges of graft, waste and inefficiency, but in some respects it sharply criticized the administration's relief policies.

To the discomfiture of administration leaders, the committee recommended that the senate's revenue bill repealing the undistributed profits tax and modifying the capital gains tax be adopted as a major aid to economic recovery. Retention of those taxes is in the house bill backed by President Roosevelt.

In loving memory of our dear father, Gilbert O. Johnson, who passed away seven years ago on May 9th 1931.

We often sit and think of him
When we are all alone
For memory is the only friend
That grief can call its own.
Like ivy on a withered oak,
When all other things delay.
Our love for him will still
Keep green, and never fade away.

High School

We were very pleased to have Mr. Selke, president of the St. Cloud Teacher's College and Mr. Lund, Regional director of the National Youth Administration, pay a visit to our school on Monday. Mr. Selke, who has spent some time visiting in other countries, presented very vivid pictures of conditions that exist in such places as Cuba and the region around McKensy river in Canada. In these places education facilities are not developed as well as in Minnesota. Mr. Lund stressed the value of furthering your education. He stated that disregarding practically all natural circumstances if we think we can, we can.

W. M. F. Had Big Meeting

The Nazareth Ladies Aid was host to the Thief River Falls Circuit Convention of the Women's Missionary Federation which was held last Tuesday.

The church was packed to capacity at both the morning and the afternoon session. Prominent speakers headlined the program. Miss Frida Nilson, Dean of Women at Concordia College, Moorhead, spoke at the forenoon session on "Stewardship" and in the afternoon she addressed the group on "Youth Problems". Mrs. H. C. Nordlie of Moorhead, president of the Northern Minnesota District W. M. F. talked to the convention on "The Centennial Appeal" which will be carried out in the entire church during the month of May. There were many musical numbers on the program, including a quartette of pastors who sang "Te Deum". Reports by the Departmental Secretaries were given at the sessions. The Departments are: Circuit Historian; Christian Nurture; Thank Offering; Missio Box; Cradle Roll; Life Membership and Memoriam; Box Work. Rev. R. M. Fjelstad also made an announcement regarding the Bible Camp at Baudette from June 20 to 26. Mrs. E. B. Kluver of Halma is president. The officers from Holt are Mrs. Sam Lorentson, Treasurer and Mrs. T. C. L. Hanson, Mission Box secretary. The local Ladies Aid served dinner at noon and lunch after the closing session. This was marked, not only for the fine food served, but also by the efficiency displayed in serving so many in a comparatively short time.

Misses Gladys and Opal Sanoden were convention organists. Miss Irene Holst and Miss Grace Lyseng sang a solo and played a piano solo respectively at the morning session.

The New Air Mail Stamp

A distinctive, two-color air mail stamp will be issued by the United States Post Office Department as a special recognition of National Air Mail Week, May 15 to 21, which will be the greatest effort in the history of this service to increase its effectiveness and popular support.

Congressman Buckler Filed

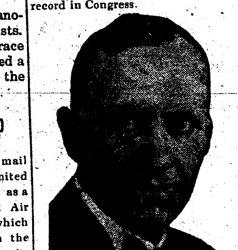
With two terms of service as 9th District Representative in the U. S. House of represetatives to his credit, Congressman R. T. Buckler of Crookston on Monday of this week filed for re-election with the Secretary of State at St. Paul. His filing papers were mailed from Washington, D. C.

Representative Buckler was endorsed by a big majority at the 9th District Farmer-Labor Association Convention at Plummer, March 5, and a resolution adopted lauding his record in Congress.



Congressman Buckler has been considered one of the spokesmen for the farm block in Congress and he has constantly supported all measures for the farmer, and legislation sponsored by farm organizations. However, his chief efforts have been directed and his main interest is in the task of getting legislation giving farmers cost of production plus a fair margin for their farm produce.

Mr. Buckler will remain in Washington until Congress adjourns even though adjournment may not come until after the primary election.

Benson Files For Re-election

St. Paul—Below are shown Governor Elmer A. Benson and Representative John Kinzer, Cold Spring, as they filed with Secretary of State Mike Holm Monday, the former for re-election as governor and the latter as lieutenant governor, both on the Farmer-Labor ticket. Both received the unanimous endorsement of the Farmer-Labor association at the recent state convention held at Duluth.

In a statement issued at the time of his filing Governor Benson said:

"Eight years ago the economic machinery of this country began to collapse, owing to the unequal distribution of buying power, which alone can keep production going and provide jobs for the workers and markets for the farmers.

"Liberals and progressives did not bring this state of affairs about. When it came, however, they did not hesitate to come forward and accept responsibility for helping to guide the people through the troublesome years. We have not faltered and we do not intend to falter in carrying out that responsibility.

"The little clique which controlled the State senate in the last Legislature, deadlocked that body and blocked enactment of most of the liberal program, now have to go before the people and try to justify themselves.

"The opposition, it has become quite plain, will try to avoid conducting a campaign based on a program and a platform. They will raise smokescreens and bogey issues in an effort to prevent the true facts from becoming known. They will even raise the bogus issue of communism against a program which represents the very essence and spirit of true Americanism.

"The liberals and progressive, however, will carry their proposals to the people in an intelligent way, acquainting the people with the true nature of our economic and social difficulties. Ours will be an honest, intellectual appeal, and we have confidence in the wisdom of the voters of the state of Minnesota that they will decide this coming election in accordance with the merits of the issues involved. We liberals ask nothing more than a decision at the polls based on the merits."

Purchase Boy Scout Camp

Hartley Peterson, local scoutmaster, Sam Lorentson and H. O. Hanson, troop committeemen, motored to Warren last Thursday evening to meet with the scouters from other districts and executives from the Lake Agassiz Council at Grand Forks to discuss the matter of getting a summer camp for the Boy Scouts in this area of the council. Forty men came out in the stormy weather that evening to meet at the Hotel Warren for a dinner meeting to take part in the business session.

After the meeting was called to order, Joseph S. Mayer of Grand Forks, council camping committee chairman, outlined the program for this year. The matter of finding a suitable summer camp for the Boy Scouts did not seem to have been easy and the men had looked over many sites before they decided what to take.

Mr. Mayer announced they had purchased a camp on Cass Lake from the St. Marks Church at St. Paul. This camp is situated among the Norway pines on the southeast corner of Pikes Bay near Cass Lake. The layout there includes a mess hall, recreation hall, kitchen, office quarters, boat house and four row boats, ice house and storage room a chapel, cook's quarters, ten squad tents equiped with wooden floors, seventy-five steel cots and mattresses. This entire camp was put up only a few years ago by the St. Marks Parish church at a cost of close to eight thousand dollars and is in fine shape. The scouters were offered this camp for $1,000 and could not pass up such an opportunity to obtain a permanent camp for the scouts of this area.

The land on which the camp is situated belongs to the federal government and is being leased for a camp at a very reasonable rate per year. It was estimated the cost per troop would be $35. This money to go towards the purchase of the camp and fixing it up and buying a few incidentals that are needed at a scout camp.

The scout troops that will use this camp are those at Grand Forks and the other town north along the Red River on the N. Dakota side and all troops in this area on the Minnesota side. In all there will be about 45 troops using the new camp. The camp will accommodate about 100 boys at a time and camp periods will start there June 5. It will be a fully supervised camp at which the boys can board by the week or camp for themselves in troops.

At the Men's Club meeting held here at the Lutheran church on Tuesday evening, H. O. Hanson, vice-chairman of the Thief River Falls District of the Boy Scouts, explained the deal to the sponsors of the local scout troop and, several men here donated money towards cost of this wonderful summer camp for Scouts.

Scout Will Sell Lunch

The local Boy Scout Troop 112 will serve hot dog bun sandwiches, doughnuts and coffee at the schoolhouse on Friday and Saturday evenings after the highschool play. Kindly patronize the boys in their little venture as this is one of the ways they have of raising a little money to get things they need in their scout work.

Farmers Dig Out Mud Lake

Farmers in the east end of the county took authority in their own hands on Wednesday and late that evening went out about 200 strong to get relief from the flood water. They came down to the outlet of Mud Lake in ditch 11 and started to dig out the earth works there along side of of the new control dam. At noon yesterday they had a channel dug thru there about six feet wide at the bottom and about twelve feet deep.

These farmers said they were tired of waiting for action from those who have anything to do with the control of flood waters out east so decided that they would do their own work. Water was flowing down to the Thief River at a rapid rate thru the big ditch from Mud Lake.

Late Snow Storm Hits Here

Starting on Thursday with a cold drizzling rain which later turned into snow, this community was visited over the week end with one of the severest sleet and snow storms the community has ever known in May, according to old timers here. On Friday and Saturday the weather was freezing and buds and leaves on the lilacs and other bushes as well as the wild berry trees froze.

The wet snow which was six inches on the level in this area, created a lot of surface water and the country is pretty wet in in general. Farmers will not be doing much seeding for some time on their lower ground.

Play Was Postponed

The high school play scheduled to be held last Friday and Saturday evenings, was postponed due to the heavy snow storm here on Thursday afternoon and Friday morning. The play will be given tonight and tomorrow night, May 13 and 14. The students who are taking part in this play have spent a lot of time on it and would like to see a good turnout for the play.

Air Mail Week May 15-21

Had Interesting Men's Club

The Men's Club had a very interesting meeting in the church parlors Tuesday evening.

Mr. Madsen, superintendent of the Mud Lake and Thief Lake projects, was the main speaker. He outlined many of the interesting poiuts about the project as well as the program and opportunities offered the boys in the Civilian Conservation Corps. These boys are given opportunities in vocational training as well as a wide field of experience in many lines of activities.

Mr. Crumb, biologist at the CCC camp, briefly discussed bird life in the reserves; especially the water fowl. He also told of plans for the feeding of these birds that would become summer residents in this locality.

Mr. Kirkconnel spoke to us in connection with his work on adult education. Mr. Kirkconnel is the man who started the boyscout troop in Holt. He praised the work that has been done in Holt with the troop. Such praise is no-doubt well placed in consideration of the backing that the troop is receiving.

The matter of the newly acquired boyscout camp at Cass Lake was discussed. This is to be a permanent setup for the boy scouts of this region. The raising of funds for this was started and we are happy to state that the response was favorable. Holt, without a question will be able to meet its quota. In the near future those who were not present on Tuesday evening will be contacted.

In addition to the above matters of discussion the scout committee, consisting of H. O. Hanson, O. T. Ness and Sam Lorentson were reelected for the coming year. Hartley Peterson was also reappointed for the coming year in the capacity of Scoutmaster. It is needless to praise these men for the fine work they have done as we are aware of that fact. Success to them in the future.

Mrs. C. A. Larson and son Allen returned home Saturday from a trip to Londale, Minn.

To Make Windows Higher and Wider

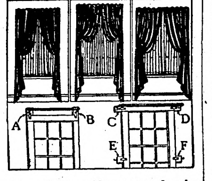
THE windows shown here are the same size. The center one is made to look taller by adding an extension at the top. The one on the right is made wider with extensions at the sides. Tall windows lend dignity and a note of formality. By placing the tie-backs quite high this effect is emphasized even more.

Wide windows often make a room seem larger and give wall spaces better proportions. Extensions at the sides may also be used so the draperies will cover less of the window, giving more view and sunlight. This is a particularly good trick to try in the summer with straight curtains hung so they barely cover the woodwork at the sides of the window.



To make a window higher, merely screw blocks of wood to the top of the frame as at A and B with metal straps such as may be obtained at any hardware store. The curtain rods are then screwed to the wood blocks. To add width, screw the blocks to the sides of the window frame as at C and D. If tie-backs are to be used, extensions for them may be added as at E and F.

Draperies like the ones shown here may be lined or not according to the weight of the material used. My book SEWING, for the Home Decorator, shows you exactly how to make them either way and how to make the French heading. This book also gives directions for making slipcovers; all types of dressing table covers; seventeen different types of curtains; bedspreads; and numerous other useful and decorative things for the home. Readers wishing a copy should address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill., enclosing 25 cents (coin preferred) and the book will be sent by return mail.

DON'T FIGHT BUSINESS

Administration Asked to "Reform" Its Attitude Toward Industry and Trade

At a meeting in Chicago the Association of American Railroads voted to reduce wages of employees 15 per cent, or $250,000,000 a year. Three of the members shown above, left to right, are: F. E. Williamson, president of the New York Central; Fred W. Sargent, president of the Northwestern, and J. J. Pelley, president of the association.

SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

Commerce Chamber's Plea

BUSINESS men from all parts of the country, gathered in Washington for the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, told the government, politely but firmly, that its attitude toward trade and industry must be "reformed" if the nation is to recover from its economic ailments. These men were delegates representing big, medium and small business in local chambers in a thousand cities and 600 affiliated trade associations. They reported conditions in their localities and classes of business after John W. O'Leary, chairman of the chamber's executive committee, opened the session.

Chester Davis

President Roosevelt, who was on a fishing trip on a cruiser in South Atlantic waters, was heard from only indirectly in addresses by Jesse Jones of RFC, Secretary of War Woodring and Chester C. Davis of the federal reserve board.

Resolutions were temperately worded but insistent. Summarized, they were substantially as follows:

Demand for relief from present tax burdens, the fight transferring itself from the undistributed corporate profits tax and the capital gains tax to the broader field of an annual tax bill which has jumped 30 per cent in the last two years to a total federal-state-local levy of $13,500,000,000 a year.

Urgent request for drastic revision or repeal of the national labor relations act.

Caution and warning on the renewed government spending program, apart from relief expenditures.

Insistence that White House sentiments favoring private enterprise be put into practice through peace with the utilities, abstention from further innovations in government control, and encouragement of private industrial expansion.

Manufacturers' Program

THE National Association of Manufacturers, meeting in New York, declared that federal pump priming to stimulate business would be futile "unless it is accompanied by governmental policies that will permit business to accept the priming and go forward."

The association's board proposed a seven point program for revival of business activity. It included:

"Declaration by the federal government that it will not proceed in competition with private utilities.

"Revision of the Wagner act so as to make it a workable instrument for curtailing labor disputes.

"Prompt solution of the underlying railroad problem.

"Avoidance of new federal reform legislation that will result in a fresh period of uncertainty at a time when the nation should be concentrating upon making jobs."

Railroads Vote Pay Cut

FIFTEEN per cent reduction in wages of 925,000 union workers, effective July 1, was voted by the Association of American Railroads at a session attended by the executives of more than a hundred railway companies. They declared the two most important reasons for this action were loss of revenue and increases in operating costs.

George Harrison, chairman of the Association of Railway Labor Executives, said: "We don't propose to submit to wage reductions. The action of the roads is ill-advised and unfortunate and will have a tendency to obstruct the President's recovery program."

D B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, declared: "There will be no wage reduction agreed to by railroad employees."

Wage-Hour Bill Stopped

REPRESENTATIVE O'Connor's house rules committee probably killed the new "escalator" wage-hour bill for this session by voting, 8 to 6, against reporting it. This despite the fact that Chairman Mary Norton of the labor committee said it was approved by the President. She said she would try to have the measure brought to the floor by petition. Mr. Roosevelt supported this plan. Before the vote the members of the rules committee were warned by both the American Federation of Labor and the C. I. O. that if they refused to report the bill they would face retaliation at the polls.

N. L. R. B. Backs Down

THE national labor relations board took steps to reopen its inquiry into the labor practices of the Ford Motor company, acting after counsel for the company had sought to take testimony from members and aides of the board to sustain its charge that the company had not had a full, fair and open hearing.

The board asked the United States circuit court of appeals at Covington for leave to withdraw its petition to enforce its order made against the Ford concern in December. In that order the board directed the company to cease practices which it asserted were in violation of the Wagner act and to re-employ certain former employees.

Co-operate for Recovery

CO-OPERATION with President Roosevelt in his efforts to bring about economic recovery was offered by 16 leaders of business and industry, prominent among whom were Owen D. Young, General Electric board chairman, and Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National bank of New York. Their statement, made as individuals, was given out by John W. Hanes of the securities exchange commission. It was laid before the President, who pronounced it excellent.

Owen D. Young

The joint statement said in part:

"It is the responsibility of government to protect and to encourage the proper function of business . . . Wide but honest differences of opinion exist as to ways and means.

"The President has clearly indicated that he believes that America's continued prosperity requires closer co-operation between business and the government.

"We pledge ourselves to aid to the full extent of our ability in such efforts of consultation and co-operation."

F.D.R. Hits at Monopolies

JUST before leaving for his short vacation at sea, President Roosevelt called on congress to authorize a $500,000 federal inquiry into concentration of industrial economic power, preparatory to a thorough revision at a later date of the nation's anti-trust laws.

He recommended study of existing conditions rather than immediate legislation.

The President asked congress for action at this session only on legislation calling for federal control of bank holding companies.

Plane Crash in Italy

NINETEEN persons were killed when a hydroplane from Tirana, Albania, crashed in Italy. Most of the victims were returning from King Zog's wedding. Among them was Helen Lindheim of New York.

An assortment of jewels valued at $1,052,000 belonging to Paris and Vienna firms, from which King Zog had selected several pieces for his bride, was destroyed.

My Friend Joseph

By Lillian Oakley

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

THOUGH a strong wind was blowing, driving sheets of rain across my front yard, I wasn't surprised to see Joseph, my little seven-year-old neighbor, making his way up the front walk. Yesterday was my birthday and he was here when the postman brought me a five-pound box of candy, and Joseph has a weakness for good chocolates.

He comes puffing in and while he sheds his waterproof coat he looks around for the candy. But all the candy spots are vacant. My bonbon resistance is below normal on bad days and I have put all the sweets away and resolved not to bring them out for a week. But now from past experience I know that without once asking me for any candy Joseph will soon have me bringing out my five-pound box and urging him to take all he wants. He has an indirect method all his own that never conflicts with any of the rules of etiquette and always gets him what he wants.

He pulls a low stool in front of mine, looks up at me and says, "Guess who I'd be if I could be anybody I wanted to be?"

This is easy for he always wants to be Tarzan or Dizzy Dean. But I'm all wrong.

"Not today," he says with emphasis, "today I'd be 'Laddin An' His Lamp.

"And guess what's the first thing I'd tell that old genie to do after I rubbed my lamp?"

This isn't really meant to be a question so I simply sit still and look interested.

"I'd tell him to build my mother the finest house in town an' furnish it full of the finest furniture in town an' have a hot supper on the table ready for her when she got home from work. And I'd make him give me some money an' I'd go down town an' pay all of her bills an' put 'em on the table by her plate." He finishes exultantly.

Joseph has no father and the bills that have to be paid at the end of every month hang heavy over his head.

He clasps both little hands around one knee and rocks himself backwards and forwards on the stool and smiles over this happy surprise for his mother. Then he looks around at me as if afraid I am feeling neglected.

"Then," he says with enthusiasm, "I'd rub my lamp an' when that old genie came I'd tell him to bring me a motorcycle just like the road cops ride only littler, an' a police uniform an' a machine gun that could shoot forever an' a five-pound box of candy just like the one you got for your birthday yesterday. And," he adds with a smile that shows all of his dimples, "I'd bring you down about half of the candy."

The object of his visit has been attained. And he leaves with his pockets full of my birthday chocolates, the rain having let up somewhat.

Once Upon a Time There Was a—

Baseball announcer who announced an entire game without utilizing the adjective "beautiful" in describing the weather, the crowd, or the plays.

Book reviewer who never wrote that it was "a book you simply can't put down."

Neighbor, who, when scooping snow or mowing the yard, went several feet past his boundary line into his neighbors' territory.

Group of relatives who didn't heckle the young male member of the household by inquiring as to his status with girls, and add, whether it was true or not, "Look at him blush!"—Kansas City Star.

Wise and Otherwise

Some people look on the bright side of things so persistently that they wind up the proud possessors of a gold brick.

Big men get the best jobs, I'm told. Because the small men are so often overlooked?

Then there was the man who was so lazy he bought a Great Dane so he wouldn't have to stoop over to pet it.

Money doesn't grow on trees. Just the same, it's the smart birds that get it.

Name Is Poetry

It seemed curious that any place should be named "Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllandysiliogogogoch." Yet a little Welsh village bears this 58-lettered name. It is a locality of charm and beauty. Llan is "church," Fair is "of Mary," Pwll Gwyngyll is "the pool of White hazels," Goger is "rather near," while Chwyrn Drobwll is "the swift whirlpool," and Tysilio gogo goch is "of Tysilio of the red cave." Is it not therefore suggestive of romance and beauty enough to visit the village of the Church of St. Mary by the Pool of White hazels near the swift whirlpool of St. Tysilio's Church of the Red Cave?—Detroit News.

"What Knows He of England Who Only England Knows?"

"Even after months in England my wife sometimes had to call upon the housemaid to translate some item in the laundry list, or to interpret between her and the grocery boy," declares Mr. Harry A. Franck, the irrepressible globe-trotter, in "Footloose in the British Isles." "In England a 'vest' is an undershirt, not a waistcoat. 'Suspenders' are garters, and 'braces' are suspenders. A child's underwaist is a 'bodice,' while rubber boots are 'Wellingtons.' The word 'sweater' still strikes many of the English as a trifle low-class and odoriferous; they call it a 'jersey,' 'jumper,' 'pullover,' or 'cardigan.'

"In the draper's shop (which means drygoods store) unbleached muslin is 'calico' and calico is 'cottonprint.' Cheesecloth is 'butter muslin,' and instead of using cutting flannel for a child's pajamas one buys 'winceyette' and asks for a 'sleeping suit.' A spool of thread is a 'reel of cotton.' An American who asks for crackers will get firecrackers or a package of those Christmas paper bonbons that explode when pulled. In England a cracker is a 'biscuit,' and biscuit is a roll. A muffin is something else again, and cookies are as unknown as if the word were Persian.

"Our kind of bacon is 'streaky rashers'; a slice of ham is a 'gammon rasher,' and the best cut of beef is a 'piece of topside.' Gasoline is 'petrol,' kerosene is 'paraffin,' and paraffin is 'paraffin wax.' An English cook does not rinse the dishes, she 'swills' them. When my wife told the nursemaid to bathe the children, or to give them a bath, the maid proceeded to 'bath' them or give them a 'bathe.'"

WHAT TO EAT and WHY ★ ★ ★

C. Houston Goudiss Noted Food Authority

Describes the ACID- and ALKALINE-ASH FOODS and Explains Their Role in Maintaining the ACID-BASE BALANCE of the Body ★ ★ ★

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City.

ACIDITY is the topic of the hour. On every side we hear people complaining that they have too much acid in their systems, that they suffer from acid stomach, acid headaches, acid mouth, acidosis. In fact, most adults fancy themselves victims of a great battle between acid and alkaline forces, with the acid having the better of it.

They confuse gastric acidity—which is entirely normal, for the healthy stomach is always strongly acid—with the potential acidity of foods which leave an acid residue following digestion. And many of them are convinced that they should take drastic steps to overcome the danger of acidosis.

The Vogue of Acidosis

There are fashions in disease, just as in dress, home furnishings and automobiles. Ten years ago, we heard much about the evils of auto-intoxication, and it was some time before people realized that they had been misled by the extreme claims of those who had some sort of remedy to sell. And now it is acidosis that is the most talked of complaint. Friends caution one another against this or that food, with the mistaken idea that it causes or aggravates an acid condition. Food faddists have frightened thousands by suggesting that acidosis is brought about by mixing various kinds of foods.

Health Endangered

Indeed, we have come to a point where the fear of a so-called acid condition is assuming proportions which indicate the possibility of real trouble unless the American people get the true facts and put aside these foolish delusions.

Physiologists believe that fear and worry have a detrimental effect on digestion, and, in turn, on the general health. Thus eating meals in constant fear of acidity may upset the digestion and bring about the very symptoms that you are trying to avoid. One well-known authority contends that perhaps 90 per cent of digestive distress, attributed to the kind or combinations of food eaten, is actually due to unfavorable mental or emotional states, and other causes such as over-eating, even when fatigued, or consuming at one meal too many foods that are difficult to digest. It, therefore, becomes apparent that thousands of people are contributing to their own discomfort as a result of fear, ignorance, or a blind belief in misleading claims which are opposed to scientific facts.

Acidosis Uncommon

The danger is not from acidosis, but from the fear of this bugbear, and from self medication in the belief that certain remedies are required to overcome a fancied condition. For in spite of the large amount of acid produced in metabolism, the blood normally remains remarkably constant and slightly alkaline, due to a highly efficient buffer system.

Perhaps you wonder, if this is so, why doctors and dietitians talk so much about the acid-base balance.

The Acid-Base Balance

To understand this phrase, you must know that every food leaves an ash when burned in the body, just as ashes remain when coal or wood is burned in a furnace. In the body, the ash consists of valuable minerals which are required in large amounts to maintain optimal health.

Some foods, such as meat, fish, eggs and cereals, leave an acid ash because the predominating minerals are phosphorus, chlorine and sulphur. Other foods, chiefly milk and most fruits and vegetables, leave an alkaline ash because the remaining minerals are principally calcium, magnesium, potassium and sodium. These are the base-forming foods.

Besides the alkaline ash and acid ash foods, there is a group of foods, including sugar, cornstarch and purified fats, which are so highly refined that no minerals remain after they are burned; and some other foods, such as butter and cream, leave a balance of the two types of ash. These are known as neutral foods.

Cannot Trust Your Tongue

The sense of taste cannot be relied upon as a guide in determining which foods are acid and which alkaline. For example, cereals, which are bland to the taste, have an acid reaction following digestion. Bread, likewise, is acid forming, although you would not suspect that fact from its taste. On the other hand, potatoes, though somewhat similar to bread in flavor and food value, are one of our most valuable alkaline foods, and dried lima beans are the most highly alkaline of any food known.

If it seems curious that such bland foods should have an acid ash, you may find it even harder to believe that oranges, lemons, grapefruit, peaches and tomatoes, which taste acid in the mouth, leave an alkaline ash following digestion. But the fact is that the body performs a clever bit of chemical engineering and the final effect on the blood is alkaline.

Homemaker's Responsibility

A balanced diet must include sufficient base-forming foods to neutralize and counter-balance the effects of the acids formed in metabolism.

That is one reason why it is so important for the homemaker to provide her family with plenty of milk, fruits and vegetables, in addition to the necessary meat, fish, eggs and cereals.

In general, one is likely to feel better when base-forming foods predominate, at least slightly, in the diet over acid-forming foods. Some authorities believe that this may be due not so much to their effect on the acid-base balance as to the fact that they provide such splendid amounts of vitamins, minerals and fiber.

However, one must not make the mistake of becoming so enthusiastic over building a highly alkaline diet that one overlooks good foods necessary to round out a balanced diet.

To those homemakers who take seriously the important job of feeding a family, and wish to be correctly informed, I shall gladly send a chart showing which foods are alkaline and which acid. It can be used as a helpful guide in planning a balanced diet.

Send for this chart and increase your food knowledge. In the meantime, don't under any circumstances allow misguided individuals to frighten you into joining the vast army of acid-minded people who are so concerned over the possibilities of acidosis that they haven't time to enjoy life.

Have You a Question?

Ask C. Houston Goudiss

C. Houston Goudiss has put at the disposal of readers of this newspaper all the facilities of his famous Experimental Kitchen Laboratory in New York City. He will gladly answer questions concerning foods, diet, nutrition, and their relation to health. You are also invited to consult him in matters of personal hygiene. It's not necessary to write a letter unless you desire, for postcard inquiries will receive the same careful attention. Address him at 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

Questions Answered

Miss M. V.—Indeed I am not against the eating of fried foods, except in abnormal conditions where, for some reason, the fat intake must be restricted. The moderate use of fried foods, which have been properly cooked, makes the diet palatable and interesting.

Mrs. S. T. R.—No, egg whites most certainly are not toxic, except to people who have an allergy toward this food. For all normal individuals, they offer an excellent source of protein.

Into the City Class

The census bureau moves a town into the city class when its population reaches 2,500. According to that bureau, a city is an incorporated place having 2,500 or more inhabitants, or a township or other political subdivision which is not incorporated as a municipality and contains no area so incorporated, but which has a total population of 10,000 or more and a population density of at least 1,000 to the square mile. Of course, the purpose of the census bureau is to classify population and not to designate any particular urban center as a city or town.

Have You a Favorite Cake Recipe?—Send It In It May Win Cash Prize

When you decide to give your family a real treat and you bake one of those luscious, tempting chocolate cakes, or it may be a delectable marble cake or a delicious devil's food cake, made from your favorite recipe, and the folk all reach for a second, or perhaps a third, helping—now isn't that gratifying! How amply rewarded you feel by the remarks of appreciation going around the festive board such as "Oh, boy, what a cake!" from little Willie, said with a mouthful, to "I must have another piece if I burst!" from Dad.

But here!—you may have still further reward coming to you. The very recipe that the family makes so much over may be the one to take the first prize of $25, or one of the five second prizes of $10, or one of the ten third prizes of $5 in the Cake Recipe Contest. And why not?

C. Houston Goudiss, noted food authority, who for 30 years has exerted a wide influence on the food habits of this nation through his lectures and books, and who at present conducts the food department in this newspaper known as "What to Eat and Why," is conducting a cake recipe contest with cash prizes to be given to persons submitting the best recipes. Your recipe will be judged on the basis of its nutritional and wholesome value. It need not be a marvelous creation for the eye to behold. The judges of this contest may agree with your family that your favorite recipe IS THE BEST! For further particulars see the announcement elsewhere in this issue of this newspaper. There is nothing to buy. No letter to write. Just send in your favorite cake recipe. It may win a prize.

High School

Because of unfavorable weather conditions last week end, it was necessary to postpone our play until tonight and tomorrow night.

All the classes have begun reviewing for their final examinations.

Several interesting interviews were given in English 2 class on Friday and Monday.

The Geometry class is reviewing straight line figures.

In biology, the sophomores are studying the circulatory and respiratory systems.

Teacher: Why are you late?
Student: I saw a sign.
Teacher: What has that to do with it?
Student: The sign said, "School Zone. Go Slow".

Another member of the junior class is known as Voin by some of his friends. He enjoys Benny Goodman's orchestra and prefers hearing "The Dipsy Doodle" the way he plays it.

His favorite pastime is driving in his Model A and he remarks Hi whenever he meets someone. He delights in reading Zane Grey's stories and is especially fond of the book "Sunset Pass".

He appreciates lutefisk and is contented with a bottle of grapefruit pop as a beverage.

His future ambition is to be a common dirt farmer and he is holding his dad as an inspiration.

You guessed it. Its yours truly Vern Wilson.

Predator Control Contest

The statewide predator control contest, in which over one hundred sportsmen's clubs are competing for $200 in prize money, offered for fox, wolves, and crows, closes Friday, May 20, according to Conservation Commissioner Herman C. Wenzel.

According to latest reports, Grygla leads in the fox and wolf division, with St. Charles, Strandquist, Lindstrom and Little Falls holding second, third, fourth and fifth places respectively. The standings are so close, however, that final reports may well alter any of them.

Pipestone leads in the crow division, with St. Cloud, Waseca, Stephen and Floodwood following in order.

Final reports and awards will be made by the conservation department soon.

The play "Mr. Bob" given here by the Holt High School was well attended. The students who took part in the play did very well. The people appreciated the play very much and much credit is due the students and their coach for their efforts.

Farmers Are Flooding Out

As we were looking over files of 25 years ago, we came across an item which stated that the Mud Lake settlers were getting riled up about the water coming down upon them from the east country. That was in May 1913.

Twenty-five years is a long time in which to settle a controversy. Now the settlers are all removed from Mud Lake and still the fight is on about the water in that area flooding the farmers east of the reclaimed lake and also on this side of the Thief River east of Holt.

Ole Davidson Gets Check

Ole Davidson, Pioneer farmer of this community, reports that about 40 years ago he borrowed money from the Federal government for a seed loan. About 25 years ago he sent them the final payment on this loan and sent a few cents more than the balance amounted to. They sent back a small check for the difference and he laid it away and forgot all about it. A few days ago he received another check for nine cents due him and was asked to cash it so the government could close the books on this account. Some of you may wonder why it takes so long to get anything done thru the government can see thru this transaction that they are in no hurry about things

Give The Patrols A Hand

Now that school is soon over, lets give the Boy Scouts a hand for the part they had in making the highway crossing a safe one for the youngsters going to and from school. The boys have patrolled the crossing all year, in all sorts of weather. rain or shine. If they have saved one child from death or injury the past year, or if they save one in ten years, it is well worth the time and effort put into it. Our youngsters are precious.

Creameries Picnic June 12

Creameries of Marshall county will sponsor their tenth annual picnic at the new Middle River State Park (old mill site) on Sunday, June 15, plans for the coming event being outlined at a meeting of creamery representatives held Saturday night at Newfolden. Virtually all creameries of the county had representatives at the Saturday gathering, which was the association's annual business meeting.

E. M. Evans of Middle River was elected president of the association's picnic group. Otto Hjelle of Newfolden was elected vice president, and G. A. Sustad of Viking as secretary-treasurer. Committee appoinments annouced to direct the picnic outing were as follows:

Program and Publicity: E. M. Evans, G. A. Sustad, John Lager Land O' Lakes district field representative, and H. S. Beckwith. Argyle.

Grounds: Otto Hjelle, Henry Anderson, S. Loveid, Walter Larson and Walter Peterson.

Sports: Ralph E. Melbo, Hjalmar Martin, Oscar Fosholm, and Harold Anderson.

Final plans for the event will be detailed at a meeting of committee groups to be held at Newfolden at 8 p. m. May 28th.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN
© The Safety Man

What can we do for the pedestrian? Approximately three out of four traffic fatalities result from vehicles coming into contact with pedestrians. Safety education has helped to reduce the number of fatalities among school children. and from experience in various cities we know that adult education in safety is also effective in reducing the nnmber of accidents.

Law and regulations alone will not prevent accidents. The idea of carefulness must be instilled in the minds of our citizens, and until the time comes when every man, woman, and child is safety conscious, little progress can be expected.

Safetymeetings, lectures, movies, posters, and articles in newspapers and magazines will all help to educate the public and to keep the important problem of safety uppermost in the minds of pedestrians and motorists.

May Buy More Land For Lake

St. Paul—(AP)—Hign water on Lage Kabetogama created a new flood zone near the international boundry Tuesday as the state conservation department recommended federal purchase of farm lands in the Make Lake game refuge and requested an immediate survey of the reservoir there.

Several resort owners on Kabetogama, located in northern St. Louis county, were reported in the flood zone by Conservation Commissioner Herman Wenzel, who personally surveyed the district Monday while on a northern Minnesota speaking tour.

Wenzel wrote Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the United States biological survey, that purchase of land from farmers north and east of the Mud Lake sanctuary is necessary if project is to be continued

Angry farmres blasted an opening in a dam holding the Mud Lake reservoir last week. Court action to prevent further dynamiting is scheduled May 24 at Fegus Falls.

A dam operated by the Rainey River Lumber Co. at Kettle Falls on the outlet of Kabetogama was blamed by Wenzel for the flood condition there.

Carl J. Stenerson Died

Carl J. Stenerson died early Wednesday morning at the Physician's hospital at Thief River Falls. He had been suffering for some time. He was born on Nov. 14, 1880 in Wiar Cashton Wis. but had spent the last 25 years in Marshall county. He made his home with his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Silas Torgerson. He was never married. Funeral services were conducted Saturday at the Silver Creek Lutheran church. Rev. T. C. L. Hanson officiated. Interment was made in the Silver Creek cemetery. Mr. Steenerson was well known in this community and was active in the work of the Silver Creek congregation.

The Standard Oil Co. have put in another large storage tank at their bulk station here last week. S. E. Finstad of Newfolden had the contract for the job. Lynn Miller, local agent for the company announced that they will use the new tank for storage of high grade gas.

Mr. Crum, biologist at the CCC camp at Thief Lake, reports that a flock of whistling swans appeared at the Mud Lake refuge this year. These birds were almost extinct a few years ago and people are glad to see that they are making a come-back in this country.

Trapped Many Muskrats

According to reports there were about 6100 Muskrats trapped at Thief Lake this spring. Alfred Henning reports that he caught about 700 rats and that the State Department of Conservation caught 1400 of the little fur bearers.

Several other trappers came in on the dividing of the other 4000 rats that were trapped in the Thief Lake areas. It was estimated that only about half of the muskrats up there were caught and in as much as each family of rats will raise about 40 young ones in one season, there is high hopes that there will be a big crop in 1939. The average price per pelt received by the trappers was about 80c.

Slow Down At Night

Statistics show that the number of traffic accidents increases after sundown despite the fact that there are fewer cars on the road at that time of day.

Night driving requires additional care and slower speed. Possibly the primary reason for the fact that the greater percentage of accidents occurs at night is the tendency of so many motorists to drive at daylight speed. The lights on present day automobiles, although much improved, still do not throw a beam far enough to allow us to see objects a great distance ahead. Consequently we do not have sufficient time to apply the brakes when we come upon a stalled truck or another object on the highway. As daylight grows dim, decrease your speed and increase your cautiousness.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been of a wet variety and farmers have not been able to do any of the late seeding. Yesterday the sun came out and we hope to see it clear up soon.

Rev. Hanson spent Monday and Tuesday at Baudette in the interests of the Bible Camp which will open in a month.

Capitol News Review

We are still waiting for those streamer headlines in the daily press announcing the fact that the state real property tax for 1937 has been reduced by some four million dollars, as announced by C. A. Halvorsop, state treasurer, several weeks ago. We do not in any way attempt to insinuate that the newspaper refrain from printing the news. Nevertheleas we have an idea of what they would do with a story of this kind if such a tax reduction were brought about during a Republican administration.

We have accustomed ourselves to a certain amount of unemployment and a certain number on relief. But when one out of five young people in the state are still dependent on their parents, and when only about one out of three have full time employment, it is time for the Pollyannas to stop being cheerful and begin to think. It is even time for some of the Republican candidates to do some thinking, particularly the candidate who a few days ago at the University offered "to restore young people to their freedom." What the young people of this state need, as one of the students so well remarked, is not more freedom but more work.

Held Declamatory Contest

Mrs. Peterson will accompany the winners to Warren Saturday where they will speak at the County Declamatory Contest.

TWO dresses, as practical as they are pretty—one for shopping and general street wear, the other ideal for round the house, and made on slenderizing lines. Notice that they both use the smart front closing. Both these patterns are quick and easy to make up, and each is accompanied by a complete and detailed sew chart.

Frock With Girdled Waistline.

Fashion says everything must have a certain amount of soft detailing this season, and this charming tailored dress obeys with draping at the neckline, the girdled waist, and bust fullness beneath smooth shoulders. Easy sleeves, cut in one with the shoulders, make it a cool style for summer.

Short, pleated sleeves give plenty of ease for reaching and stretching. Make this up in pretty cottons that will stand plenty of wear and washing—percale, gingham, seersucker, broadcloth.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

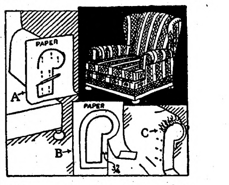
STRIPES are popular for slip covers this season. Don't forget to center a striped pattern in the back and the seat of a chair. The crosswise use of stripes may also have possibilities as for the bottom of the chair shown here.

Generally the main pieces of a slip cover are fitted and cut right on the piece of furniture with a generous allowance for seams and a tuck in around spring seats. For small shaped sections, such as the fronts of some chair arms and parts of some wing chairs, paper patterns may be made to use in cutting the fabric.

Pin the paper to the part of which you wish to make a pattern, as shown here at A, then mark the outline on the paper feeling your way along the edge line with the side rather than the tip of the pencil point. Cut the pattern ¾-inch outside the outline as shown at B. This allows for a seam and slight ease in the slip cover which should never be taut at any point. When gathers are needed to shape the fabric over rounded parts, gather the edge and arrange the gathers with the cover piece pinned in place as shown at C.



Directions for making various types of slip covers are given in my book, SEWING, for the Home Decorator; also many types of dressing table covers, seventeen different types of curtains, bedspreads, and numerous other useful and decorative things for the home. I shall be glad to send you a copy upon receipt of 25 cents (coins preferred). Address Mrs. Spears at 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

HUGE LOANS ON WHEAT

Bumper Crop Makes These and Acreage Reductions Probable . . . Wage-Hour Bill to Be Passed

Congresswoman Mary T. Norton of New Jersey, chairman of the labor committee, affixes her signature—the first one—to the petition which was signed by 217 other house members to force house consideration of the revised wage-hour bill. With Mrs. Norton are, left to right, Congressmen R. J. Welch of California, J. Burrwood Daily of Pennsylvania, Arthur Healey of Massachusetts and Edward Curley of New York.

Wheat Loan Program

ONLY a major crop disaster like a nation-wide drouth can prevent the United States from having the largest supply of wheat this summer in the country's history. Consequently the Department of Agriculture is preparing to announce a huge wheat loan program designed to prevent prices from falling to extremely low levels. Under the new crop control act loans are mandatory if the 1938 yield exceeds domestic needs and estimated export needs, which are put at about 740,000,000 bushels.

Sec. Wallace

At the same time Secretary Wallace, as head of the AAA, was contemplating the prospect of asking the wheat growers of America to make the heaviest reduction in plantings ever proposed. This reduction may be as much as 37.5 per cent. Growers who this season planted approximately 80,000,000 acres would be asked to reduce their operations to about 50,000,000 acres—the smallest since before the World war. Allotments then would be 12,500,000 acres less than for 1938.

Government estimates place the crop at between 925,000,000 and 950,000,000 bushels. The winter wheat estimate is between 740,000,000 and 750,000,000 bushels while the spring wheat crop is expected to reach 200,000,000 bushels.

Added to this will be a carry-over of 150,000,000 bushels or more from last year's crop of 874,000,000 bushels. The total supply is expected to reach an all-time high of approximately 1,100,000,000 bushels.

In addition to the loan program, Secretary Wallace will move to bolster the market through the new government crop insurance program. Already a campaign is under way to "sign-up" farmers for wheat insurance.

The insurance program is expected to remove about 50,000,000 bushels of wheat from the market through farmer payments of premiums on 1939 wheat insurance. The government will store this wheat in elevators for future indemnity payments to insured farmers.

Officials of the AAA expect that reduction of acreage will stir up protests from wheat growers similar to the current revolt in the corn belt, and among the cotton and tobacco farmers of the South. Concessions already have been made to the Southerners, and the AAA people said some "minor adjustments" in corn acreage allotments were planned. The revolt in the Middle West, however, was growing steadily under the leadership of the Corn Belt Liberty league, now incorporated in Illinois.

When and if wheat acreage allotments are made, farmers can comply with or ignore them, but only those who comply will be eligible for maximum federal benefit payments and wheat loans.

Crop Report Birthday

ON THE day it issued its May crop report, the Department of Agriculture celebrated the seventy-fifth anniversary of the government crop reporting service. The names of the oldest living crop reporters were inscribed on a roll of honor, and the ceremonies were witnessed by a group of veterans of the service who were invited to Washington by Secretary Wallace.

The crop reporting service was started in May, 1863, by Isaac Newton, first commissioner of agriculture, appointed by President Lincoln in 1862. The first report was prepared on the basis of reports from 2,000 farmers in 21 states. Today reports are based on returns from 200,000 voluntary reporters.

President Returns

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT returned to Washington from his ten-day fishing trip not only brown and well but highly elated. There was reason for his elation for the political tide in the capital had turned in his favor. The successful revival of the wage-hour bill in the house demonstrated the waning opposition among southern Democrats, following closely on the renomination of Senator Pepper of Florida, who defeated Congressman Wilcox, an opponent of the Roosevelt bills to enlarge the Supreme court, to reorganize the executive government and to control wages and hours of labor. The $5,000,000,000-pump priming bill seemed assured of passage with only some earmarking of funds to which the administration has no serious objection.

Mr. Roosevelt resumed work by calling Secretary Hull to the White House presumably to discuss the Nye resolution to lift the arms embargo against Spain. He then held a legislative conference with Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead, Majority Leaders Barkley and Rayburn and others. It was believed they considered resumption of the drive for enactment of parts of the President's program that have been defeated or delayed.

Wage-Hour Bill to Pass

WHEN 218 members of the house of representatives signed the petition to discharge the rules committee from consideration of the administration's wage-hour bill it became virtually certain the measure would be passed by the house on May 23. Chairman Mary T. Norton of the house labor committee and other proponents of the bill predicted it also would be approved by the senate, but admittedly it faces a bitter fight there, for the southern senators are angered by the omission of differentials favoring the South. There is a chance that they can organize a filibuster and prevent passage before congress adjourns.

Mary T. Norton

Opposition in the house crumbled suddenly and there was a veritable stampede to sign the petition forcing the measure to a vote. Mrs. Norton was first to put her name on the paper, and 217 other members rushed forward to get on the band wagon.

The 218 signers were divided by parties as follows: 182 Democrats, 23 Republicans, 8 Progressives, and 5 Farmer-Laborites.

In its present form the bill provides for minimum wages of 25 cents an hour to be raised to 40 cents an hour over a three-year period and maximum hours of 44 a week to be reduced to 40 hours in two years. It would be administered by the Labor department and enforced by the Justice department. It carries no differentials between the different sections of the country.

JOSEPH DAVIES, wealthy lawyer, was nominated ambassador to Belgium by President Roosevelt. Davies will be transferred from Moscow which he and his wife, Mrs. Marjorie Post Hutton Davies, found boring because of the lack of social life among the soviets.

WHAT TO EAT AND WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses the NEED FOR IODINE

Key Substance of the Thyroid Gland--Tells How to Avoid Iodine Starvation

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York City

THE discovery of our vital need for iodine is one of the most thrilling chapters in the long history of scientific research.

Many investigators contributed to our understanding of iodine hunger, but special credit is due to Dr. David Marine and his co-workers; and to Dr. E. C. Kendall of the Mayo Clinics at Rochester, Minn.

Today we know that although it constitutes only about one part in three million parts of the body weight, iodine is so essential that its absence from the diet may have the gravest consequences.

Thyroid—The Gland of Glands

Iodine is necessary for the normal functioning of the thyroid gland, situated in the front part of the neck. The thyroid is so important that it is often regarded as the throttle which governs the human locomotive, and when it fails to function normally, the body machinery may be thrown out of balance.

Thyroid disturbance during childhood may affect mental and physical development, and many children have been accused of laziness who are suffering from thyroid deficiency. Thyroid disorder may be a complicating factor in obesity, and specialists have found that it is associated with many stubborn skin diseases. It is also claimed that iodine starvation influences mental make-up and emotional tendencies.

Disfiguring Goiter

Simple goiter is a common disorder of the thyroid gland. At one time the very mention of this disease terrified girls and women, who feared the unsightly lump in the neck which disfigures the victim. Now, thanks to dramatic experiments, we know that simple goiter is an iodine deficiency disease.

Animal Experiments Point the Way

In 1916, it was estimated that a million young pigs died annually in Wisconsin. Investigation disclosed that their thyroid glands were abnormally large and abnormally low in iodine. When iodine was administered to the mothers, the young pigs were born normal.

Scientists reasoned that if goiter could be prevented in animals, it could be prevented in humans, and undertook the now famous census in Akron, Ohio. A study was made of the thyroid glands of all school girls from the fifth to the twelfth grades. Almost 50 per cent were found to have enlarged thyroid glands.

The girls were given small doses of sodium iodide dissolved in drinking water at given periods over 2½ years. At the end of that time, investigators found that of 2,000 pupils, only 5 developed thyroid enlargement. Of the same number not treated, 500 showed enlargement.

Danger Periods

This demonstration aroused the interest of the scientific world and gave impetus to additional experiments which increased our knowledge of the iodine requirement.

The great danger periods are during pregnancy, childhood and adolescence. The diet of the expectant mother must include an adequate supply to protect herself and avoid the early development of simple goiter in the child.

It is also essential to provide sufficient iodine for growing children, as the incidence of the disease increases steadily up to the eighteenth year in girls; in boys it reaches its peak at twelve.

Some investigators also claim that one way to enhance the action of the glands after middle life, and so prolong youth, is to include in the daily diet some foods with a high iodine content.

Nature's Storehouse of Iodine

It is the duty of every homemaker to learn where the necessary iodine can be obtained and to include iodine-rich foods in the daily diet, but it is especially important for those living in "the goiter belt." This area stretches along the Appalachian mountains, as far north as Vermont, westward through the basin of the Great Lakes to the state of Washington, and southward over the Rocky Mountain and Pacific States.

Iodine-Rich Foods

The sea is the great storehouse of iodine and hence, the most abundant sources are sea food, including salmon, cod, crabmeat and oysters; cod liver oil; and salt.

Fruits and vegetables grown near the sea contain varying amounts of iodine, depending upon the water and soil, and the season, the iodine content being at a maximum in the autumn and winter.

In general, it may be said that the leaves of plants contain more iodine than the roots, and that leafy vegetables and legumes store more than fruits, with the exception of cranberries, which are a good source. When the soil is rich in iodine, watercress becomes a fine source of this substance.

Iodized Salt

One of the most satisfactory methods for adding iodine to the diet, especially in goiterous regions, is through the use of iodized salt. In Detroit, a city-wide test of iodized salt reduced the prevalence of simple goiter from 36 per cent to 2 per cent. Similar figures have been cited for other localities. Iodized salt costs no more than ordinary table salt and is an excellent safeguard against simple goiter.

Iodine in Drinking Water

Even in early times, it was believed that there was some relation between goiter and drinking water, and recent evidence has disclosed that there was a sound basis for this belief. Two investigators found that the water in a large part of the northern half of the United States falls into a low-iodine classification.

Several communities have given consideration to the prevention of goiter by the addition of iodine to the water supply. This method is commendable, but it must be borne in mind that wherever iodine is taken in forms other than food, careful supervision by the physician or the public health authorities is necessary.

To those homemakers interested in planning the best possible diet for their families, I shall gladly send lists showing which foods are rich in iodine and which are poor in this substance.

Questions Answered

Mrs. M. S. F.—I do not approve of the strictly vegetarian diet because it is unbalanced. One who desires to omit all animal foods from the diet must also omit the top-notch protective foods, milk and eggs. It is doubtful if adequate protein could be supplied without milk, eggs or meat. Good health is best maintained on a balanced diet, and is such a priceless possession that I cannot understand why anyone should risk the consequences of consuming a one-sided diet.

Miss S. G.—There is no justification for serving toast at every meal instead of bread. It is true that proper toasting changes some of the starch to dextrine which is quickly and easily digested. But laboratory experiments reveal that the proteins of toasted bread and crusts have a lower digestibility, and animals gain less weight when fed on them than on the untoasted bread and the inside crumbs of the loaf.

Mrs. B. R. S.—The average meal leaves the stomach within four hours, though a large meal may stay for five hours. However, the length of time food remains in the stomach is only a fraction of that required for the entire digestive process, which varies in normal individuals from 12 to 47 hours. Carbohydrates leave the stomach most quickly, proteins are next, and then fats.

Costly Tears

Tears cost a lot of money in Hollywood. In the first place, it takes quite a time to induce a satisfactory flow, and time is worth dollars in the film studios. In the second place, complete "re-make-up" of an actress is necessary after every "cry." And, thirdly, the emotional strain, actresses claim, leaves them with such a "hang over" that they are unable to work the following day. The film is held up—but wages are paid just the same.

$1,977,819.75
1937 EXCISE TAX ON BEER to be placed in the GENERAL FUND for Allocation to Schools, Pensions, Unemployment Relief

The people of Minnesota have a business of their own. And it's a mighty big Business to run a great state efficiently.

Unlike a private business, the State cannot make money. It secures money only through taxation. But—like any private business—the State cannot operate without money.

The Brewing Industry of Minnesota paid $1,977,819.75 to the State for Excise Tax on beer during 1937. It paid to municipalities several millions of dollars for corporation income taxes, and for personal and property taxes. Its business gave employment to approximately 25,000 persons from whom the State received income taxes. From the retail sale of beer the State derived many more thousands of dollars in license fees.

All this money went to operate the State Business. Without it, your personal income, your real estate and property taxes would have been still further increased.

In addition to this, Minnesota Brewers afford the people a beverage of moderation, and a "Code of Practice" which pledges full cooperation with enforcement authorities.

It is, therefore, for the best interests of the people to guard their State against loss of this revenue. They can do this best by encouraging the use of beer as a beverage of moderation and sobriety.

High School

All the members of the biology class are busy preparing tests on the various chapters designated to them. These tests are given to the others in the class and proves to be a very effective method of review.

The English 2 class is reviewing narrative poetry by Alfred Lord Tennyson.

All the classes are beginning their book reports this week.

The American History class is reviewing colonization and the early settlements.

The final member of the junior class of the Happy Holt High School has been interviewed. She prefers hearing Ray Noble and his orchestra and picks the popular song "Who Do You Think I SaW Last Night"? as her favorite.

She has an extraordinary fondness for chocolate pie with heaps of whipped cream. Coco-Cola is her favorite drink.

For her own enjoyment she tickles the piano keys and exclaims Phooey! whenever she tickles the wrong key.

In screenland she considers the rank of Janet Gaynor and Nelson Eddy as the highest. Evidently her favorite movie seems to be "A Star is Born." The would rather read "A White Bird Flying" by Bess Streeter Aldrich than and other book she has yet discovered.

For some reason (she would not state it) she vows her pet peeve is living on a farm.

Her futuer ambition is to travel - through all parts of the U. S. and through foreign countries

Ommodt Visited Flood Area

Chas. Ommodt, Commissioner of Agriculture, St. Paul, spent Saturday in this part of the county looking over the flood situation in the east end of the county. Mr. Ommodt met with a group of farmers at Gatzke on Saturday afternoon to talk over the flood situation there and in western Beltrami county. He also spent some time going over the area with farmers and checking up on the results of the present flood conditions.

The farmers in the Grygla and Gatzke area are not going to be able to do much seeding this spring due to the high water condition which has flooded out many farms in that area. Flood waters from the eastern country has run wild over the outlying territory around Grygla and Gatzke the past few weeks and things there are in a bad stage. The high water has flowed over the regular drainage channels and cut thru ditch banks and road grades and flowed over many farms to follow the old water courses which has resulted in many good farms being entirely flooded out.

Miss Anna Norby of Thief River Falls, who is visiting at the Nelson home, and Mr. and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Nelson and Vernon attended a farewell party at the Trinity Lutheran church at Thief River Falls for Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Norby last Friday evening.

Mrs. Martin Olson and Mrs. K. Nyberg visited at the Paul Olson home Tuesday.

NYA Work At Local School

The National Youth Administration has two projects underway at the Holt Consolidated School. The book mending project has been under way for the past two months with Eleanor Peterson, Alice Bottem and Vivian Larson working. These girls have mended, cleaned and renumbered all the library books. This work has lengthened the use of approximately a thousand books with very little expenditure on the past of the local school.

The other project is the leveling of the grounds where the skating rink was last winter. Ralph Johnson, the only youth working on the project up to date has been doing some very fine work toward improving the rink for the coming winter. With this work completed the rink can be made larger and the grounds will be of more utility for other purposes as well.

These projects can be extended to take care of more youth who are elligible to work on the program as well as other improvements about the community. Any youth between the ages of eighteen and twenty five from needy families that are not working are urged to contact Mr. Karvonen if they are interested in working part time. Rural school boards that desire to take advantage of this opportunity to have their books mended during the summer with very little cost are urged to contact Mr. Karvonen.

Mrs. Oscar Johnson made a business trip to Grand Forks Saturday.

Commencement Exercises

With the close of the school year fast approaching many of our pupils are beginning to think in terms of the termination of that portion of their education which they can complete here.

The commencement at the Holt Consolidated School will be held on the evening of June 2nd. An interesting program for the exercises has been prepared largely by the students to graduate.

Those to graduate from the eighth grade are: Romal Burtness Lois Hanson. Betty Lou Lorentson, Orlin Ness, Rubin Ness, Jerome Sorum, Russell Sanoden, Ruby Werner.

Those in the high school who will complete their work here are: Inez Anderson, Harold Gavere, Clara Hoffman, Florence Kolden, Doris Larson, Marian Larson, Lorna Peterson, Robert Sandberg, Opal Werner, Vern Wilson.

The results of the final tests to be taken next week may alter the above lists of individuals, the hope of the pupils is that such will not take place. People of the community are welcomed and urged to be present.

Mrs. Oscar Moline became sudnenly ill last week and is now at a hospital at Crookston where she is under observation.

Drive With Care On Highway

Once a year, on Memorial Day, we respect and honor our dead. It is just and fitting that we do so.

During the holiday period, however, we frequently forget our own safety. In past years, many more dead have been added to our cemeteries because of reckless and unsafe practices on these week end holidays.

Make this Memorial Day week end a safety week end. Do not violate the rules of courtesy and the rules of the road. America can make Memorial Day a real day in the memory of our dead by safe, sane, and sensible driving.

A double baptism took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence O. Larson last Sunday when David Clarence Myers and Ronald Arthur Hedlund were baptised. David Clarence is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold C. Myers and was born on March 21, 1938. His sponsors were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence O. Larson. Ronald Arthur is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hedlund of Thief River Falls and was born on December 5, 1936. His sponsors were Mrs. D. C. Myers and Arnold C. Myers. Rev. Hanson officiated.

How Prisoner Used Rats to Cheat Death

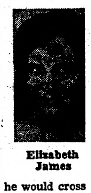
By ELIZABETH C. JAMES



Elizabeth James

THE prisoner opened his eyes to blackness. Fears shook him as he thought of the Inquisition Judges. Feeling painfully about him he discovered that his clothes had been changed while he was unconscious and he now wore an unfamiliar robe. Thus does Edgar Allen Poe set the stage in "The Pit and the Pendulum."

What manner of place was this? Perhaps he was dead and this was eternity. Perhaps he was entombed alive. Panic seized him. He must know the size and shape of his prison! Cautiously he felt his way until he found the wall. Ripping a piece from his robe to mark the starting place, he began to creep along, counting the paces. A circuit of 50 yards indicated that it could not be a tomb. Now he would cross the cell. Boldly he started away from the wall, but his feet tripped in the robe and he fell prone.

Taut he lay. A queer sensation stole over him, for his head seemed to be touching nothing, to be in space. Reaching out he found a well or pit. Pit! Almost swooning he recalled stories of the Inquisition pits which the people in Toledo had lately heard.

Some time later and with an effort, his benumbed mind saw that the prison was now lighted. He saw walls of metal, a stone floor, and a high ceiling. In the middle of the floor yawned the pit. How strange he felt—he could not move. Lying on his back he was bound to a wooden bench.

Pendulum Appears.

From the pit crept rats. The prisoner looked about him for some weapon. Only his arm was free from the elbow down, so that he could reach the plate of food on the floor. As the rats crept toward the plate he waved them away.

Again a noise, this one sounded like steam. Looking upward, he saw the silver object to be a pendulum that dropped slowly with each stroke. Then he divined the cunning of his captors. A blade of steel was descending slowly toward him. With days of mental torture and hours of physical torture, his death would be slow and horrible.

Time passed but he could not reckon how much. His mind alternated between fascination and insanity. Sometimes he laughed. Sometimes he cried. Sometimes he shrieked.

Now the blade was only a yard above him, then two feet above. Then one foot.

Rats Save Life.

Only inches separated them. Then desire for life surged through him so that he cried to heaven for help. Grasping the scraps of food he smeared the meat over his bonds as far as he could reach, using every drop of grease. Then he lay still. The rats had not before seen him lying so. They watched, crept closer, then jumped onto the bench. They were over his body in a flash. Voraciously they gnawed and chewed the bands of cloth. Greedily they tore it, trying to get the last drop of food.

The pendulum swung in long arcs, even closer. There was a pressure as the knife cut his robe. He did not dare move yet. Seconds passed, and he knew that his robe was cut through. As the blade reached the height of its arc, he lunged with all his force and fell free.

The pendulum stopped and swiftly rose to the ceiling. The prisoner lay as one lifeless, waiting for the next mode of death.

He did not wait long. The walls changed color, revealing hideous pictures which might have come from hell. Oppressive heat choked him as he saw that the walls were being heated and were coming together so that the cell was growing smaller. Their purpose was clear: to push him into the pit.

A crash sounded. The walls jerked away as with thunder. An arm clutched him. The French had conquered his enemies. He was saved.

TURBULENT LIFE

The life of Poe is more turbulent than any story that he wrote. Scores of biographers have attempted to reveal something of the spirit of this lonely and passionate man. Although Poe died in his fortieth year, he left literary criticism that is excellent, and short stories and poems that are unexcelled for sheer artistry.

Later biographers have stated that Poe's reputation was worse than Poe. His difficulties at the University of Virginia and at West Point, and his being disinherited by his foster father gave him a name for recklessness when he was very young which the events of his later life did nothing to offset.

Poe lived from 1809 until 1849, attaining a literary fame in Europe as well as in America.

The CLAY MASK

—By—
D. J. WALSH
Copyright.—WNU Service.

"I shall be a little late tonight," Merrick told his wife as he threw out the clutch and slipped the gear shift into low.

"Oh—you'll be late? How late, dear?" she asked with the color leaping into her usually pale cheeks.

Impatiently he held his foot on the clutch. "Oh a couple of hours or maybe three. I have to drive over to Speedwell's after business and it may take me some time there."

Nora nodded. "All righty, I'll look for you when I see you dear."

Until he had driven five miles Merrick thought nothing of his wife nor her slight flush nor her words. Now, however, they returned to him poignantly. Why should she want to know just how late he would be? What was she going to do with the time? Why had the color sprung into her cheeks so quickly? Was it possible that there was some one she would see in that time? Nora was always busy all day between superintending the house, looking after the children and giving her attention to certain social amenities that could not be overlooked.

He remembered suddenly how Nora had smiled at young Mills at the last Country club dinner. Was it possible—could they—he found himself driving on with set lips and glassy eyes. His Nora!

As the day passed Merrick managed to call to mind some dozen cases where Nora had seemed more than slightly interested in some man other than her husband. Yes, he had probably lost her. He had grown careless and this was his reward. At closing time he had worked himself up into such a frenzy about the whole thing that he drove straight home instead of going to Speedwell's. He was home a half hour earlier than usual.

Minette, the maid was at the door and her eyes frowned as she saw him.

"Madame is not—expecting you—yet—" she said. falteringly, in reply to his inquiry.

"No—well, I'll go right on up," he said trying to be casual.

"But—it would be best if you—" began Minette.

Without reply he went up the staircase, past her, the veins in his throat swelling uncomfortably. Throwing open the door of her room, he stood on the threshold, glaring.

There was a sudden yelp—hardly human—but he recognized the tone as that of his wife.

And his wife's face—gray as ash!

"Well?" he said harshly.

"Oh, Merrick, I thought you going to be late," she said lamely. "There is so little time during the day and I thought this would be a good chance to use my clay mask stuff."

And Nora wondered why it was that with the crumbling clay on her face her husband took her into his arms and affectionately caressed her.

"It just shows," she told herself later, "that men don't care a rap for looks—because who could be pretty in a clay mask!"

For Safety Sake

"CUTTING-IN" as an accident cause can be eliminated if motorists will remember that safety requires waiting until the car just passed can be seen in the rear view mirror before turning back into the same traffic lane.

Thinking about one thing while doing another causes accidents.

Flying around a corner in a car and honking all the way doesn't relieve your conscience if you hit someone.

Dirt on lenses may reduce the light intensity of automobile headlights from 10 to 50 per cent. In addition to glare caused by scattering of the light beam.

On long trips, get out of the car frequently and "stretch your legs." Tired muscles react slowly.

Speed must be consistent with volume of traffic, condition of road and time of day, even if laws allow a greater speed. Never drive so that you cannot stop quickly enough to meet any emergency.

According to scientific tests, the ear responds to a warning faster than the eye does. Thus, a bell, whistle or horn causes a driver to put on the brake faster than when he sees a signal.

The most important safety device on any motor car is the driver, safety officials point out. Even the "self-starter" needs a foot to start it, and the best brakes require quick toe pressure to stop the car.

C. Houston Goudiss Noted Food Authority

Describes the Need for

IRON and COPPER

Shows How You Can Help to Avoid Anemia by Including These Blood-Building Minerals in the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York City

OF ALL the nutrition problems that challenge the homemaker, none is more important than supplying her family's need for iron. This mineral is sometimes described as the supreme element in nutrition because it is an essential constituent of the blood.

How Blood Is Constructed

If you should examine a drop of blood under the microscope, you would observe that it is composed of red cells and white cells. In normal blood there are about 25 million times a million red blood corpuscles, owing their color to the iron-bearing protein hemoglobin. They carry oxygen to all the body tissues, and remove the carbon dioxide formed during the combustion of body fuel.

A reduction in the amount of hemoglobin in the blood may cause shortness of breath, quickened respiration and an accelerated heart action. Lack of appetite, weakness, and a slowing of all vital functions may also result from the diminished supply of oxygen to the tissues.

Lack of Iron May Lead to Anemia

In many young people the blood does not function normally, though frequently parents are unaware that anything is wrong. You may scold them for being lazy, for lacking interest in their work, or never heeding the things you tell them, when the real trouble is due to iron starvation which, if long continued, may lead to anemia.

The person who has a tendency toward anemia usually tires easily and lacks pep; complains of cold hands and feet; worries over trifles, and may have a complexion that is anything but rosy.

The great danger of an iron-deficient diet is that it deprives the body of its chief defense against disease. For when the quality of the blood is poor, one becomes an easy prey to infection. Moreover, if a serious illness occurs, lowered resistance makes it difficult to fight it off.

Two Forms of Anemia

Anemia may be due to loss of blood, deficient blood formation, or to increased blood destruction in the body. The different forms of the disease are sometimes classified as primary and secondary anemia.

Primary anemia is usually known as pernicious anemia. It is a grave condition in which the marrow of the bones has lost its power to make red blood cells.

Secondary or nutritional anemia may result from loss of blood in an accident, or it may follow a long, infectious illness. For any infection lowers the iron reserve in the body. But the most common cause is a diet lacking in sufficient iron over a long period of time.

How Much Iron?

It is believed that about 10 per cent of the total hemoglobin in adults is destroyed daily. And for this reason iron-rich foods must be included in the diet every day.

Investigators have found it difficult to determine the exact iron requirement, but according to the latest estimates, from 12 to 15 milligrams a day will not only provide adequately for bodily requirements, but will allow a reasonable reserve.

Women Need More Than Men

Women require more iron than men, in proportion to the body weight, to make good the losses that occur during the menses. Expectant mothers need a generous amount of iron, not only to provide for their own needs and for the normal development of the fetus, but to create a reserve supply in the baby's body which will last through the period of lactation.

The percentage of iron in the baby's body is about three times that of the adult. Nature has wisely designed this reserve to make up for the low iron content of milk which constitutes the chief food during the first six months of life. Nutrition authorities believe, however, that better health results when an iron-rich food, such as egg-yolk, is introduced very early into the diet. This helps to prevent the slight anemia which was formerly regarded as unimportant, but which is now recognized as making the baby more susceptible to infection and retarding growth.

Children's Requirement High

It is desirable to keep the iron intake at a high level throughout childhood, for it has been discovered that better health results when a surplus is allowed above the daily requirement. But there is a very special need for iron in girls from the beginning of adolescence through the eighteenth year.

Iron-Rich Foods

To maintain top health and prevent the possibility of nutritional anemia, the homemaker must learn to meet the daily iron requirement of her family and not leave this vital matter to chance. Iron-rich foods include egg yolk, liver, molasses, dried beans and peas, whole grain cereals, lean meat and green leafy vegetables. While milk has only a small amount of iron, experiments show that its iron is readily absorbed and is utilized to good advantage.

Eggs are such an excellent source of iron that one egg yields about one-tenth of the standard requirement. Lean meat furnishes a considerable amount, but liver is so much richer that it should be eaten frequently. Dried beans are inexpensive and when baked with molasses become a good source of iron.

It is a pity that parsley is so often used only as a garnish, because it has a higher iron content than most green leafy vegetables. Though potatoes contain only a moderate amount of iron, they are usually consumed in sufficient quantities to make them a significant source.

Copper Also Necessary

Investigation has demonstrated that adequate iron alone is not enough to prevent nutritional anemia, for the body cannot convert iron into blood pigment unless copper is also present. Therefore, in order to obtain the full benefits of iron, the diet must contain sufficient copper. Foods that supply copper in abundance are liver, nuts, dried beans and peas. Smaller but significant amounts are provided by whole grain cereals, dried fruits and poultry.

I shall gladly send to every homemaker a list of foods rich in both iron and copper, and also sample menus showing how to plan a balanced, blood-building diet.

I urge you to write for this material and keep the blood-building foods in mind when planning menus. Never forget for an instant that good blood is the best form of life insurance.

High School

We all enjoy seeing Lois in school again.

Everyone is busy reviewing for final examinations which will begin on Tuesday.

The juniors have all prepared their talks for graduation. We are again following the custom started a few years ago of having each junior give a talk. Several topics of interest to everyone have been chosen by the junior class.

Last Wednesday the juniors had a class meeting for the purpose of selecting their class colors, blue and gold, and their class motto "The Night Brings Out the Stars."

Teacher: What was the revival of learning?
Student: Just before exams.

6,000 horse power goes to work when the engineer notches the throttle open! Many unemployed railroad men will go to work when Congress opens the way for the railroads to recover some of the business they have been forced to surrender to the steamship lines.

If You Think So, Say So

Should the railroads—which furnish your transportation, employ your neighbors, share your tax burdens, and buy a great many of their supplies in Minnesota—be permitted to share in the long-haul freight business that can move by either steamship or railway?

If you think so, say so—to your Senators, because this is how it concerns YOU—

- INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT—After the Panama Canal was built, the railroads were prevented from making rates that would have enabled industries in Minnesota to continue to sell their products on the Pacific Coast in competition with industries farther east that could ship by water. The result has been a gradual drying up of industry, payrolls and tax sources in Minnesota. Repeal of this unfair restriction will remove the cause of these injustices.
- HOME MARKETS—You will get better prices for what you produce as larger consuming markets are developed closer to your farm.
- EMPLOYMENT—Repeal of this unfair restriction means jobs for many idle railroad workers throughout Minnesota. (The railroads' payrolls in Minnesota last year totaled $58,000,000.)
- BUSINESS—Increased railroad payrolls mean more business for local business and professional men throughout Minnesota.
- RAILWAY PURCHASES—More traffic for the railroads means larger railroad purchases. (Railroad purchases in Minnesota last year totaled nearly $15,000,000.)
- TAXES—The railroads share a large part of the tax burden of Minnesota—in normal times more than $8,000,000 annually. The more business they do, the more taxes they pay. Out of every $100 in revenue regained from long-haul shipments moving through Minnesota, the State will get $5 more taxes.
- RATES—The recovery of a large part of the long-haul traffic means a spreading of overhead costs, with a smaller portion falling on the traffic to and from the interior states—a step towards lower interior rates.

The Pettengill bill repeals the restrictive clause which prevents the railroads from making special rates to compete with the steamship lines. It has been passed twice by the House of Representatives by large majorities, and is now on the Senate Calendar with a favorable recommendation from the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

But unless this measure is acted upon during the few remaining days of the present session of Congress, it will automatically be killed.

If you believe that it should be passed, it is very important that you say so—to your Senators—right away!

The interior of the Nazareth Lutheran church has been redecorated recently and is now completed. The altar, woodwork and seats have been varnished, floor painted, a new rug laid, and new altar cloth and drapes put up. This was done at a minimum of cost as the members of the Ladies Aid did all the work. Much credit is due Rev. Hanson and the officers of the Ladies Aid for the work and worry they had in getting this project under way.

New windows have also been put in, the work done by Mr. L. Flak.

Loans On Wool To Farmers

Marshall county and other Minnesota farmers will be able to receive commodity loans on wool ranging from 15 to 21 cents a pound, depending on grade, from the Federal Commodity Credit corporation operating through the South Dakota Wool Growers association, R. A. Reierson, county agent announced last week.

A temporary organization of the Marshall County Wool Growers association was formed at a meeting last Wednesday evening when Otto Hjelle of Newfolden was elected president and John Rud, Radium, vice president and John Nelson, Newfolden, secretary-treasurer. Amos Aase, Gatzke; Martin Naeseth, Gatzke, and George G. Jorgenson, Argyle, were named on the executive committee with the officers.

The Northwestern Minnesota receiving point for the 1938 wool crop will be located at Crookston but local agencies will be established in several places in the county, Mr. Reierson believed.

The farmers will receive an advance check of 14 cents a pound at the time of delivery and after grading a second payment ranging from one cent to seven cents a pound net to the grower will be paid. There will be no deductions made for expenses.

The loans are made without recourse to the grower. Notes will be signed bearing four per cent interest and later a marketing agreement will be signed with the South Dakota Wool Growers association who have taken over the Minnesota Wool Growers association. If the association can sell the wool for more than the advance payments plus the expenses which in no case can exceed $2.65 per 100 pounds the wool can then be sold and if not sold by May 31, 1939 the wool will be taken over by the Commodity Credit Corporation and the note will be returned to the grower, cancelled. If the Commodity Credit Corporation sells the crop for more than expenses, the farmer will receive the surplus amount, Mr. Reierset pointed out.

A. R. Bemis, representing the South Dakota Wool Growers association will meet with the executive committee Friday night to select persons who will represent the Marshall County Wool Growers association to have charge of assembling wool and issuing drafts.

Many Farms Flooded Here

The farmers on this side of the Mud Lake area and especially along the west bank of the Thief River east of Holt are beginning to take some action in the matter of drainage. The flood waters coming down through the river lately has overflowed and soaked up the land for several farmers on this side. These farmers claim that the whole water control project is out of control at the present time.

According to reports received here there will soon be a meeting held in which all the people in the eastern drainage area will take part and discuss what proceedure must be taken to remedy the situation.

Several farmers who before did not take an active interest in the drainage problem in this area are now becoming very interested to see how far reaching the water control will be. Farmers in Holt and Excell township claim that too much water held back in he east country effects their drainage.

Hjalmer Peterson, proprietor of the Cities Service Station here has installed the latest and most up-to-date gas pump at his station. This pump computes the exact amount of gas the customer gets and does away with using small change in gas purchases.

EUROPEAN WAR AVERTED

Britain, France and Russia Would Not Stand for German Aggression Against the Czechs

Here is an armored car detachment of Czechoslovakia's up-to-date army which was sent to the frontier to meet the threats of aggression by Fuehrer Hitler's troops that were massed on their side of the border.

Edward W. Pickard
SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK
© Western Newspaper Union.

On the Verge of Hostilities

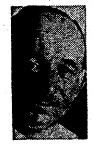
GERMAN and Czech troops by the thousands were massed on the frontier between the two countries. President Benes of Czechoslovakia and his cabinet decided to call 70,000 reserves to the colors. Poland assembled armed forces close to the Slovakia border. Hungary was reported to be taking "certain military measures." France was ready to defend her ally, Czechoslovakia, against Nazi aggression, and there was assurance that Great Britain and Russia would come to the aid of France if she were attacked without provocation.



President Benes

No wonder the governments of Europe were desperately worried by such a critical condition.

Hitler must have realized that the time was not ripe for aggressive action against the Czechs, for German authorities in Berlin solemnly assured Dr. Vojtech Mastny, Czech minister to Berlin, and the Czech military attache that Germany planned no military expedition against Czechoslovakia. This eased the situation somewhat, but the British cabinet continued to urge Benes and his government to make all possible concessions to Hitler concerning the demands of the Sudeten German minority. It was believed the Fuehrer would ultimately get about everything he wants from the Czechs without a fight. Both France and Britain were bringing strong pressure to bear on Berlin, and the British especially were determined to avert general war if it could be done.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, it was said, was working out a plan under which his government would play the part of mediator. The scheme was based on autonomy for the 3,250,000 Germans in Czechoslovakia with freedom in municipal and educational affairs.

Henlein's German party in the Sudeten districts of Czechoslovakia was winning victories in municipal elections, and this made the Nazis quite cocky in their attitude. They refused to negotiate with the government until their safety had been guaranteed.

Southerners Are Sore

KNOWING they were fighting a losing battle, Southern representatives bitterly contested the progress of the wage-hour bill through the house. The test vote on discharge of the rules committee was 322 to 73.

In the debate that followed Northern Democrats and most of the Republicans indicated their approval of the measure. The South opposed it mainly because it contains no differentials in favor of that section.

Martin Loses in Oregon

GOV. CHARLES H. MARTIN of Oregon, the veteran soldier who has been fighting against the C. I. O. and other radicals, was beaten for renomination in the Democratic primary by Henry Hess who had the backing of labor unions and of Secretary of the Interior Ickes. Charles A. Sprague was nominated for governor by the Republicans and they believe they have a good chance to win in the fall elections, for the Democrats, there as in Pennsylvania, were badly split.

Two Taxation Decisions

IN TWO far-reaching decisions the United States Supreme court further narrowed the field of reciprocal intergovernmental tax immunity. The rulings continued the trend in the direction of President Roosevelt's theory that the federal and state governments can tax the salaries of each other's employees and the income of each other's securities without a constitutional amendment.

In a decision delivered by Justice Stone, the court upheld levying of federal income taxes on employees of the Port of New York authority. In a decision delivered by Justice Roberts, the court upheld federal admission taxes on tickets to football games conducted by the university system of Georgia.

Italy Warns France

ITALY intimated it would keep out of the Nazi-Czech quarrel, but Mussolini broke off the friendship talks with France and warned that continued French acquiescence in the shipment of arms to government Spain would not be tolerated. He said the past conversations could not be resumed until Franco and his rebels had won a clear-cut victory.

The Duce declared that unless France ceases aiding transmission of Soviet and Czech arms to Barcelona, Italy and Germany may be forced to increase their assistance to the insurgents. This naturally would endanger the new Anglo-Italian agreement.

Must Re-Hire Sit Strikers

THE National Labor Relations board ordered the Kuehne Manufacturing company, Flora, Ill., to reinstate with back pay 164 American Federation of Labor sit-down strikers.

It was the NLRB's third major sit-down decision, but the first involving an A. F. of L. union.

The labor board refused to answer 74 questions put to it by the Ford Motor company in United States circuit court at Covington, Ky. The board particularly resented being asked whether Thomas Corcoran, Benjamin V. Cohen, John L. Lewis or Homer Martin were consulted in arriving at an order charging the Ford company with violating the Wagner labor act.

"Doom-Sealers," Says Farley

POSTMASTER GENERAL FARLEY attacked the critics of the administration's spending - lending program in an address to the Commonwealth club of Chicago.

James A. Farley

"The doom-sealers," he said, "are again sending forth their mournful prophesies of evil because of government acts performed or suggested.

"Stocks are down a bit. There is a recurrence of vast unemployment. Certain taxes bear heavily on people or corporations with plethoric purses. So the same element that has held every national emergency as a precursor of doom is out again in full cry."

Asserting that he would not underestimate "either the value of criticism of government acts or the service of those who think they are warning us of impending dangers," he told his audience "there should be some intelligence, some reasonableness and some moderation in these controversies."

"The republic," he said, "is in no danger. It never has been in danger since the present administration checked the downward spiral of the big depression and started us again on the upward path."

Too Late for Wheat Quotas

SECRETARY WALLACE said that under the new crop control law it is too late to invoke marketing quotas on this year's indicated bumper wheat crop. He explained that the law authorized quotas this year only in the event congress appropriated funds by May 15 for "parity payments" provided in the new legislation.

Asks 23 Millions for Navy

CONGRESS received from the President a request that it appropriate $23,875,000 immediately to begin strengthening the nation's sea and air defenses in accordance with the billion dollar naval expansion act.

The President outlined the intended uses of the fund as follows in a letter to Speaker Bankhead:

For three new warships, ten auxiliaries and a fleet of small vessels of great speed and maneuverability, $16,500,000.

For nine patrol planes of the latest type, $3,375,000.

For a dirigible—the first since the Macon and Akron crashed several years ago—$500,000.

For improvements at navy yards, $3,500,000.

Predestination Is Out

GENERAL assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States, in session at Meriden, Miss., voted 151 to 130 to omit from the confession of faith these two important sections:

"By the decree of God, for the manifestation of his glory, some men and angels are predestined unto everlasting life and others foreordained to everlasting death.

"And their number is so certain and definite that it cannot be either increased or diminished."

Crop Loan Losses

LOSSES incurred by the federal government in crop loan operations by the Commodity Crop corporation since its creation in 1933 have totaled $83,987,495.

This was made known in a communication President Roosevelt sent to the capitol, asking that $94,285,404 be appropriated to restore the $100,000,000 capital of the corporation.

A budget bureau statement accompanying the President's communication showed that the bulk of the losses grew out of the shrinkage in the market value of cotton, corn, tobacco, turpentine and other commodities put up as collateral for price bolstering loans.

The principal loss of $51,459,150 was incurred in loans on the 1934 cotton crop.

Phil La Follette Snubbed

THE Wisconsin Farmer-Labor-Progressive federation snubbed Gov. Philip LaFollette, president of the new National Progressive party, and unanimously indorsed Daniel W. Hoan, Milwaukee's Socialist mayor, as progressive candidate for United States senator.

The convention applauded when the secretary ruled out Governor LaFollette's name as the indorsee for re-election.

Earle Beats C.I.O. Man

THE desperate primary battle among the Pennsylvania Democrats resulted in complete victory for Gov. George H. Earle and his state machine and equally complete defeat for the Duffey-Lewis-C. I. O. faction, whose candidates all the way down from senator and governor to minor county offices, were routed. Earle won the senatorship nomination over Mayor Wilson of Philadelphia, Charles Alvin Jones, Pittsburgh lawyer, captured the gubernatorial nomination, beating Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, who was on the Duffey-Lewis ticket.

Gov. Earle

Jim Farley, national committee chairman, had projected himself into the hot fight by advising the compromise choice of Earle and Kennedy, but the governor indignantly told him it was none of his business, and the voters gave him a swat on the head by rejecting his advice.

Republicans were elated because the returns showed a ground swell back toward G. O. P. conservatism. The Republican total vote exceeded the Democratic vote, and this fact, together with the graft and bribery charges that enlivened the campaign of the Democrats, led the Republican leaders to hope the Keystone state would return to the Republican fold in November.

Judge Arthur James won a smashing victory over Gifford Pinchot, twice governor, for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, and this was another swat at John L. Lewis, for he was reported ready to back Pinchot if Kennedy lost. Sen. James J. Davis was renominated by a heavy majority.

Both Senator Guffey and Lewis appear to have lost their claims to political leadership. Lewis had boasted that he controlled 800,000 C. I. O. votes in Pennsylvania, but the best he could do was 520,000. Earle, though he came out on top, was considered to have lost prestige greatly by the accusations of mis-rule made against his administration. His presidential aspirations were believed wrecked.

The C. I. O. has lost other political fights, but none so important as this. President William Green of the American Federation of Labor called the vote a complete "repudiation of the C. I. O. leadership." He added:

"It now has become abundantly clear that no candidate who bears the C. I. O. brand can be elected to high office in this country. The primaries proved the C. I. O. is a political liability, not a political power."

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Describes the Place of Fats in the Diet

Nationally Known Food Authority Compares the Different Cooking Fats and Shortenings

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York City.

THERE are, perhaps, more false notions concerning fats than any other class of foods.

Some homemakers, considering them as "fattening" only, try to eliminate them entirely from the diet. Others have the impression that foods containing fat are difficult to digest, and for this reason deprive their families of many delicious and healthful foods. Both points of view arise from ignorance of dietary facts.

Fats Are Necessary to Health

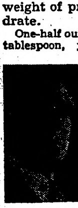
Fats have a number of important functions to perform. They are a concentrated fuel food, having more than twice the energy value of an equal weight of protein or carbohydrate.

One-half ounce of fat, that is, one tablespoon, yields 100 calories, and were he able to eat it, a man could obtain an entire day's fuel from three-fourths of a pound of fat. It is interesting to note that it would require nearly eight pounds of cooked rice to give the same number of calories.



In Oriental countries, where large populations live in great poverty, fat is usually scarce and it is necessary to consume huge quantities of food in order to meet the daily fuel requirements. As a result, most of the people develop distended abdomens.

Children Must Have Fat

Because fat is such a compact food, nutritionists agree that for growing boys and girls, and men engaged in strenuous physical exercise, fat is almost essential, if they are to get enough total calories.

There is also experimental evidence that at least a small amount of one or more of the unsaturated fatty acids must be supplied by the food if normal nutrition is to be maintained. And two competent investigators found, experimentally, that the presence of fat in the diet tends to conserve vitamin B in the body.

Some fats, especially those from animal sources, are rich in vitamins A and D, and fats made from vegetable oils may contain vitamin E.

Fat and Hunger

Perhaps the greatest service performed by fat is its ability to give "staying power" to the diet—to satisfy hunger. In this respect, it directly affects the disposition and may influence the ability to enjoy life.

The shortage of fats in European countries during the World war graphically demonstrated how a deficiency of this class of foods can destroy the morale of entire nations.

With supplies cut off or very greatly curtailed, the warring countries found it necessary to ration fats closely. As a result, their people were always hungry and dissatisfied, even when their actual needs were satisfied. In this connection, it is interesting to note that a slice of bread and butter or margarine will delay the onset of hunger longer than a slice of bread and jam, even though the number of calories may be the same.

Different Fats Compared

As sources of energy, the different food fats are very similar. Thus, the homemaker's choice may be determined by preference, convenience, economy, and the use to which the product is to be put.

The various forms of edible fats and oils are derived from both animal and vegetable sources. They include butter, margarine, lard, compounds, which are a mixture of animal fats and vegetable oils, hydrogenated fats, and the liquid vegetable oils.

Butter and margarine are used chiefly as a spread, and it is interesting to note that the annual per capita consumption of margarine is steadily increasing, as homemakers have discovered that the use of this less expensive product releases more money for milk, fruits and vegetables. Margarine is interchangeable with butter for dressing vegetables and in doughs containing spices, fruits and chocolate. Its shortening power and keeping qualities are similar to those of butter.

Lards, compounds and other shortening fats are useful not only as a means of increasing palatability and food value, but to add flakiness to baked foods and to produce a crisp coating which seals in the minerals and vitamins of fried foods.

Lard is used chiefly as a shortening for pastry, and a good grade will be found to be white and free from objectionable odors. The highest grade, called leaf lard, is produced from the leaves of fat in the sides of the hog.

When made by a reputable manufacturer, the compounds prepared especially for cake making, for shortening pastry and for deep-frying, are wholesome, highly nutritious and give most satisfactory results. They are a most economical form of shortening.

Digestibility of Fats

Because of their ability to retard digestion somewhat and thus give satiety value to a meal, the impression has grown up that fats are "difficult" to digest. This results from confusing the length of time required for digestion and the completeness with which a food is digested.

When "digestibility" is regarded in the popular sense of the ease, comfort and speed with which the digestive organs carry on their work, it is conceded that fats in general retard the secretion of the gastric juice and thus cause food to remain longer in the stomach.

On the other hand, most fats have such a high coefficient of digestibility, that under normal conditions only about one-twentieth of the fat eaten escapes digestion. Experiments indicate, for example, that the coefficient of digestibility of oleomargarine is 97.55 per cent.

It is sometimes erroneously stated that pastry is indigestible. This statement is without foundation, provided the pastry is made from a high grade shortening and is properly baked. Similarly, fried foods come in for a great deal of criticism that should not be charged to the use of fat, but to incorrect methods of cooking. If food is properly cooked in fat that has a high smoking point, there will be no opportunity for decomposition products to develop.

How Much Fat?

Nutritionists have ample evidence that health is best served when 30 to 35 per cent of the total energy value foods is provided in the form of fat. This will include the fat of meat and the fat used in cooking the many delicious fried and baked foods which make eating a pleasure.

Miss C. B. R.—It is difficult to compare the iron content of meats because of variations in the amount of fat. It has been established, however, that organ meats, as liver and kidneys, contain more iron than muscle meats, and that pork and lamb contain much less iron than beef.

Don't Pick The Flowers

Visitors to any of Minnesota's 36 state parks are invited by Harold W. Lantrop, director of parks, to enjoy, but warned not to destroy the wild flowers that beautify the landscape.

Mr. Lanthrop calls attention to the law that makes it a misdemeanor to pick wild flowers in state parks, and continues: "With the thousands of visitors that flock to the parks in spring and summer, it is obvious that if flower picking were permitted, the parks would soon be stripped of one of their main assets."

Daniel and Noah Webster

The relationship between Daniel Webster and Noah Webster, if any, has never been established. Records show that Daniel Webster, the statesman and orator, was born at Salisbury, N. H., January 18, 1782, and was descended from Thomas Webster who first appeared in Watertown, Mass., in 1638; and that Noah Webster, of dictionary fame, was born in Hartford, Conn., October 16, 1758, and was descended from John Webster, one of the first settlers at Hartford, in 1630. But there is no known relationship between the two.

The Commencement exercises held at the local school on June 2 were well attended. Eighteen pupils were honored in the program for their completion of the eighth grade course and the high school offered here.

The following people received letters as recognition of outstanding achievement: Milton Hanson for his work as leader of the School Patrol; Lorene Fluke, highest scholastic average of the girls in ninth grade; Arthur Kolden, highest average of the boys in the ninth grade; Phyllis Inman, highest average of girls in the tenth grade; Francis Johnson, highest average in the tenth grade; Opal Werner, highest average of girls in the eleventh grade; Robert Sandberg, highest average of boys in the eleventh grade.

Farmers & Businessmen Meet

On Thursday of last week a large delegation of farmers from the eastern end of Marshall county met with business men of Thief River Falls at a dinner with the Civic and Commerce Association. The purpose of this meeting was to enlist the assistance ot the business men in getting something about drainage work in the east country. The business people of Thief River claim that about forty percent of their trade comes from this area and that they are much interested in the welfare of the people out there.

A committee of five business men and five farmers were appointed to serve as a body to work out some sort of program that would relieve the flood situation and set up a permanent drainage system.

Gov. Benson Starts Campaign

If opponents of Governor Benson thought that he was going to be forced into a defensive campaign, their hopes were somewhat dashed when he made his opening campaign address at Pipestone last week.

The Governor made it clear that he will campaign on the Farmer-Labor record in office and his party's program for meeting current social and economic problems, but, he added, "we are also going to campaign on the Republican party's record in office and the program - or lack of program - they have to offer."

The Republican record of most recent date, the Governor pointed out, was made by the 1937 Republican controlled state senate. This record included an attempt to put over a tax program which would have resulted in a state rate on real property double what the rate had ever been before; defeat of the oleomargarine tax bill and a state labor relations act; and defeat of such progressive measures as "a bill to increase personal property exemptions for farmers to $500, state aid to schools in full, an adult education program, a measure to prevent importation of thugs and strike breakers during labor disputes, and a bill to limit hours of work for women in industry to 44 hours a week."

Very significantly, the Governor pointed out that while some of the Republican candidates are trying very hard to talk like liberals, they have thus far failed to repudiate the record of the 1937 Republican-controlled senate. Until they do they must be tarred with the same stick of reaction.

The State Highway department has the past week been fixing up the highway 32 between Holt and Steiner and also between Holt and Middle River. There were a few soft spots in the oiled road that broke up during the spring and had to be dug out and graveled.

Farley May Visit This State

Postmaster General James A. Farley may become a Minnesota tourist this summer if efforts of the business men of Walker and the Minnesota Tourist Bureau are successful.

Walker has invited the Postmaster General to visit that city and the Leech Lake section in September during the Airmail Special Flight week. Mr. Farley will be in St. Paul during part of September, the Minnesota Tourist Bureau announced, and may be induced to make the trip to Walker then.

Ed. L. Shave, director of the bureau, reports that more than 10,000 pieces of Minnesota vacation literature have been distributed through the International Baby Chick association to the 7,000 visitors expected to participate in that organization's international convention and exposition in St. Paul, July 18 through 21.

The bureau has been cooperating with other convention organizations in advertising Minnesota resources to prospective delegates to their meeting here this summer. More than 25,000 pieces of literature containing two pages of Minnesota scenes have been mailed out by the University of Minnesota in advertising the 1938 National Collegiate Track and Field meet at the University stadium June 17 and 18. The meet is expected to attract 10,000 non-residents.

Additional Minnesota literature has been distributed all spring by the Minnesota Tourist Bureau through this State's delegation in Congress, under the direction of Harold Hagen, secretary to Representative R. T. Buckler of Crookston.

As a result of the bureau's distribution of literature and free publicity in newspapers and magazines throughout the middle west, interest in Minnesota as a vacation state is running high through Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, according to James A. Hall of St. Paul, who has just returned from a trip to Boston distribtributing 5000 pieces of Minnesota literature enroute.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Warns Against

Food Fads and Fallacies

Nationally Known Food Authority Explains How They May Endanger Health

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th St., New York City.

AS SCIENCE and civilization have progressed, painstaking investigators have sought to replace ignorance with knowledge, to substitute truth for superstition. But in spite of their efforts, our eating habits are still influenced by a multitude of food fads and fancies, which should have no place in this enlightened age.

Some of these are harmless; others may endanger health. And the homemaker must learn to distinguish between fact and fancy.

Fish Is Not a Brain Food

One of the most persistent fallacies is the notion that certain kinds of food are especially beneficial for certain parts of the body. Many people believe that fish is a brain food and celery a nerve tonic. Lettuce is thought to be a soporific. None of these things is true.

The idea regarding fish probably arose because fish contains phosphorus and the brain also contains phosphorus. How simple it would be if one could increase brain power merely by eating fish. Unfortunately, there is nothing to it! The brain, like other parts of the body, requires a balanced diet. No case has ever been reported of a man soothing the irritated nerves of his wife by feeding her celery. And as for lettuce, it is a fine source of minerals, vitamins and gentle roughage, but it does not contain any narcotic drug that induces sleep.

Other Fallacies Disproved

Science has exploded many common notions about vegetables which may change your ideas of what is best to buy and eat. Many homemakers prefer lettuce that is light green in color and they believe that string beans which snap are superior in quality. But it has been demonstrated that deep green lettuce is much richer in vitamins and that a snap in string beans merely indicates that the beans have been kept in a cold, moist place.

A score of superstitions cling to the eating of fruits. There is a false notion that acid-tasting fruits cause or aggravate rheumatism, because they produce "acidity." The truth is that most fruits, regardless of their acid taste, leave an alkaline ash following digestion.

One often hears that fruit should not be taken at the same time as milk because the fruit acids will cause the milk to curdle. But the fact is that milk is always curdled in the stomach by the hydrochloric acid.

Not Necessary to Sip Milk

Another false idea is the widespread notion that milk must be sipped slowly or it will be difficult to digest. This has been refuted by a widely known investigator who made many tests. One day he fed a man a pint of milk in 10 seconds. The next day the same man was fed the same amount of milk in 10 minutes. On both occasions the contents of the stomach were examined a half hour later.

It was discovered that the milk which was drunk in 10 seconds had formed smaller curds than the milk which was sipped in 10 minutes. And in both cases, the curds were of practically the same consistency.

Water With Meals?

It is widely held that water should not be taken with meals, the argument being that it dilutes the gastric juice and thus interferes with digestion. This sounds logical and many people have been fooled. But the truth of the matter is that water stimulates the flow of the digestive juices and careful research has established that normally, water taken with meals in reasonable quantities aids digestion.

Danger of Half Truths

The most insidious food fallacies are those which contain some portion of truth—for example, the belief that cooked fruit is more wholesome than raw fruit. It is true that cooking increases the digestibility of some fruits and also has a sterilizing effect. On the other hand, most fruits are easily digested in the raw state, are more palatable and richer in vitamins.

A widespread belief which has a small portion, but only a small portion of truth, is that whole wheat bread is vastly superior to white bread. Whole wheat bread contains more minerals, vitamins and roughage than white bread. But the minerals and vitamins lacking in white bread can easily be supplied by other common foods, and there is no justification for going to the extreme of omitting white bread entirely from the diet.

Fad Diets Lack Balance

Far more harmful than the fallacies regarding individual foods are the fad diets constantly put forth by those who seek to exploit the homemaker's desire for dietetic knowledge.

Foods Not Incompatible

A fad diet which has gained a large number of adherents in recent years is based on the notion that certain foods — notably starches and proteins—are incompatible and should not be consumed at the same meal because they cannot be digested at the same time. It is interesting to note that this fad has been condemned by the medical profession and that a physician of the highest standing has proved clinically that starches and proteins do not interfere with one another in the stomach.

The fallacy of this theory is further appreciated when one realizes that there are few pure proteins or pure carbohydrates, most foods containing varying proportions of protein, carbohydrate and fat. Such foods as dried peas and beans and whole grain cereals contain a substantial percentage of both starch and protein.

Dangers of Fasting

Fasting is urged by some faddists as a means of "detoxifying" the body. Advocates of this practice claim that it is nature's method of housecleaning. As a matter of fact, fasting for any length of time may be dangerous to health, because it may result in the accumulation of incomplete oxidation products of fat, and the development of acidosis.

Homemakers must put aside superstitions, half-truths and food fallacies if they are to nourish their families properly.

Put your faith only in established food facts. Remember that upon your knowledge and breadth of vision depend, to a great degree, not only the health but the happiness of your family.

Questions Answered

Mrs. A. F. R., Jr.—Light corn syrup yields nothing but energy values, but dark corn syrup is a good source of iron. Pure molasses is rich in calcium and iron.

Miss M. F.—Nut protein is similar to the protein of meat and fish and nuts may be used in place of these foods when desired. They should not replace milk and eggs, however, as with few exceptions, they are low in minerals and cannot compare with eggs or milk as a source of vitamins.

WHAT to do about it? The popular song, just now, advises "Let's turn out the lights and go to sleep." But there's a much better way to solve the problem of the low family finances. Plan a whole week of dinners that cost less—and taste better. With present-day sales, it's just a matter of using your head. And when those dinners are eaten, plan more—like this:

Bread and Butter 8¢
Asparagus and Romaine Salad 25¢
Banana Gelatin 12¢
Demi-Tasse 3¢

New England Stuffed Tomatoes: Cut stem end from four large firm tomatoes and scoop out the centers. Dust the inside with salt and pepper. Stuff with the contents of a No. 2 can of oven-baked beans, and bind around the outside with a strip of bacon, holding it together with a toothpick. Top with grated cheese and set in a hot oven for twenty to twenty-five minutes.

Asparagus and Romaine Salad: Chill the contents of one round 10½-ounce can of asparagus. Drain and lay the tips along romaine leaves. Pour over chilled French dressing and serve.

TAX BILL NOT SIGNED

President Lets It Become Law, Calling Attention to "Unwise" Modification of Profits and Gains Levies

Tax Bill Unsigned But Law

FOR the first time since he entered the White House, President Roosevelt permitted an act of congress to become law without his signature. He took this course with the tax revision bill in order to emphasize his objection to "those unwise parts of the bill" which removed all but the skeleton of the undistributed profits tax and drastically modified the levies upon capital gains.

President Roosevelt

The President announced his action in a speech delivered to 148 mountain families of the New Deal-sponsored rehabilitation community of Arthurdale, W. Va., at the graduation exercises of 13 high school students. His words, however, were carried to the nation by radio networks.

"I call the definite attention of the American people," said Mr. Roosevelt, "to those unwise parts of the bill I have talked to you about today—one of them which may restore in the future certain forms of tax avoidance, and of concentrated investment power, which we had begun to end, and the other a definite abandonment of a principle of tax policy long ago accepted as part of our American system."

The President declared that he had no objection to removing any obstacles to little business which might be contained in the revenue laws but he reiterated the administration's determination not to allow the use of corporate forms to avoid what it considers legitimate tax burdens.

Mr. Roosevelt made plain that he hoped for a future revision of the revenue laws in line with the objectives he seeks. Such revisions, he said, should be designed to encourage new investment and the entry of private capital into new fields.

Immediately after the address, Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt left for Hyde Park, where they spent the Memorial day week-end.

Strike Back at Morgan

TESTIFYING before the joint congressional committee of investigation, David E. Lilienthal and Harcourt Morgan, directors of the Tennessee Valley authority, accused Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, their ousted colleague, with trying to sabotage the TVA's legal defense in a court case involving the constitutionality of the authority. They said, too, that he had engaged in a campaign of dissent and obstruction.

David E. Lilienthal

These charges, together with a general denial of Arthur Morgan's accusations against themselves, constituted in the main their defense statements.

Referring to the trial last winter of the suit of 18 private utility concerns against the TVA, Lilienthal said: "It is a record which suggests that he was seeking to find a way to obtain a judicial decision against his own agency. It is a record of tampering with prospective witnesses for the government and of obstructing and harassing counsel and witnesses in the very heat of the trial of a crucial constitutional case."

Former Chairman Morgan told his side of the long, bitter controversy on the first day of the inquiry, charging his fellow directors with dishonest management. He explained he did not mean David Lilienthal and Harcourt Morgan took bribes or stole money, but that they deceived the President, congress and the public; that they covered up important facts tending to throw doubt on the advisability of the government's huge social experiment; reported a false electric power yardstick, and were subservient to political and other special interests.

Concerning the Berry marble claims, Lilienthal said: "Any assertion that we (Harcourt Morgan and himself) by word or attitude encouraged any one to pull punches on Berry's claims is an outright falsehood. There was absolutely no evidence upon which any charge of fraud could have been based; there were only rumors and suspicions."

Chairman Donahey recessed the hearings until after the adjournment of congress.

Oil Group to Pay Fines

IT WAS announced by the Department of Justice in Washington that 14 oil companies and 11 executives awaiting trial at Madison, Wis., on anti-trust charges, plan to enter nolo contendere pleas and pay maximum fines and costs totaling $400,000.

The department said that the pleas, "amounting virtually to pleas of guilty," had been accepted by the department and recommended to the Madison court.

The defendants comprise the second group to be brought before the Madison court, where 46 defendants were convicted on similar charges last winter. These cases have been appealed.

The present indictments charge the oil companies and their executives on three counts with violation of the Sherman anti-trust act by a series of unlawful agreements between 1931 and December, 1936.

War Pensions Boosted

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT signed a bill to increase the pensions of certain soldiers, sailors and nurses who served in the Spanish war, Philippine insurrection or China relief expedition.

The act provides a $60 monthly pension for veterans sixty-five years old who served at least 90 days and to those who served less than 90 days and were discharged for disability incurred in service.

Alicante Is Bombed

FRANCO'S war planes attacked the city of Alicante in what was described as the most disastrous single air raid of the Spanish war. At least 250 persons were killed and 1,000 injured when six huge insurgent bombing planes circled suddenly in the sky and dropped their missiles squarely in the market place where hundreds of women waited in queues to buy food.

Air raids also were made on Sagunto and other cities.

Government troops started an ambitious offensive on the Catalan front but were checked by hastily reinforced insurgent forces.

Nazi Inquiry Voted

THE house voted for an investigation of un-American propaganda activities in the United States following a charge by Representative Martin Dies of Texas that a member of the German-American bund had advocated the assassination of President Roosevelt.

Dies, who presented the resolution for an inquiry, said he based his statement on affidavits which he had seen. The suggestion that the President be slain was made, he said, in a speech at a Nazi camp.

Events Here and There

CHARLES YATES of Atlanta, Ga., won the British amateur golf championship.

Floyd Roberts of California won the 500-mile automobile race at Indianapolis, setting new record of 117.2 miles an hour average.

Body of twelve-year-old Peter Levine, kidnaped from New Rochelle, N. Y., February 24, was found in Long Island sound, mutilated and bound with wire.

Four winners of Canadian "stork derby" received $100,000 each.

American Pilots Accused

SATURNINO CEDILLO, who started an agrarian rebellion in San Luis Potosi state against the Mexican government of President Cardenas, had two airplanes and used them to bomb several towns which were occupied by federal troops engaged in suppressing the revolt. The Mexican war minister, Manuel Avila Camacho, asserted the planes were piloted by Americans, but did not disclose the source of his information.

The government also declared Japan was aiding the Cedillistas. Three hundred Japanese rifles and a large quantity of Japanese ammunition were seized at Cerritosa.

Reports from Tampico, important oil-shipping port on the Gulf of Mexico, said a plane presumed to be one of Cedillo's, flew over, dropping quantities of rebel propaganda.

Wage Bill in Conference

LONG battle over the wage-hour bill passed by the house was averted when the measure was sent to conference by the senate with the southern opposition given representation among the conferees. This compromise also probably headed off a threatened filibuster and led to belief that final action on the bill would be taken in time to permit the adjournment of congress on the date set.

The chief fight in the conference was to center on the demand of the South for wage differentials as provided for in the bill which the senate passed. These were rejected by the house.

The measure establishes rigid wage-hour standards for certain classes of workers in all industries operating in interstate commerce, regardless of prevailing sectional scales. It fixes an initial wage of 25 cents an hour which steps up to 40 cents an hour in three years, and a 44-hour week graduating to 40 in two years.

A coalition of farm state representatives and the southern Democrats put over a drastic amendment offered by Mrs. Norton, exempting thousands of employees engaged in the processing of agricultural commodities from the provisions of the measure.

Lewis Backs Barkley

JOHN L. LEWIS, C. I. O. chieftain, has asked labor to support Sen. Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky in the primaries August 6. In his capacity as chairman of Labor's Non-partisan league, Lewis said of Barkley:

"He is recognized as one of the nation's leading statesmen, liberal in his viewpoint and co-operative in his attitude toward legislation in the interests of labor and the common people."

Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator, found occasion to say a good word in favor of Rep. Otha Wearin of Iowa, who is seeking to take the Democratic senatorial nomination away from Senator Gillette.

For this Hopkins was denounced by senators who were demanding that the relief appropriations be earmarked so they cannot be used for political purposes.

Ickes Weds in Dublin

HAROLD L. ICKES, secretary of the interior and PWA administrator, put one over on all but his closest friends. He sailed secretly from New York to Ireland and in Dublin was quietly married to Miss Jane Dahlman of Milwaukee, twenty-five years old and a clerk in his department. Mr. Ickes, who is sixty-four years old, lost his first wife nearly three years ago in an automobile accident in the Southwest.

Harold Ickes

The new Mrs. Ickes, red haired and pretty, is a niece of John Cudahy, American minister to Ireland, and sister of Mrs. Wilmarth Ickes of Winnetka, Ill., widow of Mr. Ickes' step-son.

Minister Cudahy did not attend the wedding, but was represented by S. J. Shattuck, an attache of the legation. The couple left Dublin by automobile for a brief honeymoon trip. Mr. Ickes cabled friends in Washington that he would return there in a week and would be at home on his estate near Olney, Md.

Japs Bomb Canton; 800 Dead

JAPAN'S war planes rained bombs on Canton for three whole days, killing at least 800 persons and injuring a thousand. Flying low over the Wongsha railway station district, the raiders shattered hundreds of buildings and then machine-gunned the fugitive citizens and the rescue workers. They then bombed the central district and the Tungshan residential suburb.

Chinese reports said the Japanese were driven back in a fierce battle for the city of Lanfeng on the Lunghai railroad, and thus Kaifeng, gateway to Hankow, was saved for the time being.

Auto Makers Indicted

GENERAL MOTORS corporation, Ford Motor company, Chrysler corporation and a number of the officers of these automobile manufacturing concerns were indicted by a federal grand jury at South Bend, Ind., on charges of conspiracy to violate the Sherman antitrust law.

BOOKS IN BRIEF

Ulysses Made Great Hero in Homer's Saga

By ELIZABETH C. JAMES

WE FORGET 70 per cent of all we have ever learned—so the scientists say. But fortunately, we never entirely forget anything. The path is still in the brain, though not plain enough for use. No doubt you remember Ulysses as a former acquaintance, but perhaps his story as told by the immortal Homer, is vague.

When Paris stole Helen of Troy from Greece, all the kings of Greece were held to their oaths to fight in her behalf.

Ulysses, noted for his wisdom, refused to go into such a war. His life was happy with Penelope, his beautiful wife, so he feigned madness and went about the countryside sowing seeds that had been cooked. The councilmen of Greece suspected cunning so they placed the young son of Ulysses in the path of his plow. When the "madman" reached the child he turned the plow aside, thus disclosing his sanity.

Elizabeth James

The ten years of siege at the walled city of Troy were tedious to Ulysses, who ever longed for Penelope and who feared for her safety after his long absence. In olden days a beautiful woman was none too safe without a husband to protect her. Glad was he indeed, when Troy fell into the hands of the Greeks after the trick of the wooden horse. With light heart he sailed away.

But ill winds beset him and Ulysses wandered over the whole sea, suffering disappointments and narrowly escaping death on many occasions. It was even necessary for him to make a trip into Hades, land of departed souls.

"GREATEST UNKNOWN"

Seven cities claim to be the birthplace of the Greek poet Homer. There is no accurate source for any definite information about the life of this man, yet he composed two of the greatest epics in all the centuries of mankind.

We do know that he lived sometime between the Sixth and Twelfth centuries before Christ was born, and we know that in old age Homer was blind. He made his living wandering from city to city entertaining the people with the stories of the Trojan war and of the wanderings of Ulysses. His "Iliad" and "Odyssey" are known round the world.

Once he and his men found themselves on the island ruled by the one-eyed giants known as Cyclops. They hid in a cave which they discovered to be the home of a giant, who gleefully shut them in his cave and killed two men each day for his dinner. While he slept one afternoon, Ulysses heated a staff and put out the eye of the giant, hoping then to escape. But the passageway was narrow and the giant carefully felt each animal as he let his sheep out to pasture.

With cunning, the Greeks killed all the sheep and skinned them. In the morning they walked out, holding the skins over them.

Other adventures beset the men. There was the island of the Sirens, the lovely women who sang divinely, luring men to their island where the men were then powerless. By stuffing cloth and wax into the ears of his men and having himself lashed securely to the mast, Ulysses passed the Sirens, being the first man to hear them and to escape their charm. Another adventure was the island where an enchantress turned men into animals, but Ulysses gained power over her and freed all the men whom she held.

Penelope's Troubles.

After wandering long and far, Ulysses reached Greece. He had heard of the suitors who had fastened themselves to the household of Penelope on the assumption that her husband had long been dead. They had stolen her substance until she had much ado to protect her husband's home. To evade them she had said that as soon as she completed the web which she was weaving, she would choose a husband. Each day she wove, and each night she unravelled, but now they had discovered her trickery and had forced her to set a date for choosing a husband from among them.

Disguised as a beggar, Ulysses went to the back of his home. The only living thing that recognized him was his dog and it died of joy. His old servant, now a swineherd, recognized a scar on Ulysses, and rejoicing and sorrowing together, told his master of the situation in his home. He praised Penelope's skill in handling the lecherous men. Ulysses sent for his son, now a man, and they two planned revenge.

As a beggar Ulysses went to the banquet. While the revelry was high, he removed the weapons from the hall, leaving the suitors without arms. The time came, and with his son, Ulysses killed the suitors.

Lightning Damaged Home

Lightning struck the Sam Lorentson residence here duriug the rain and thunder storm at noon on Monday. It appears that the bolt of lightning must have followed the electric light wires leading into house as there were no holes torn in the roof. The entire upstairs of the house was aflame in a few minutes.

Being cream day in town many farmers rushed to help put out the fire. They were able to check the fire with chemicals and water but not until all their clothes and other belongings and furniture upstairs were destroyed. The people removed all the furniture and other things from the downrtairs as everyone there thought they would be unable to save the house. The entire upstairs of the home was wrecked and the Lorentson family suffered a big loss in having all their personal belongings burned. Mrs Lorentson had a large and valuable collection of fancy hand work which burned. Their house hold goods downstairs was also damaged but they are glad that so many people came to help them to save what they could.

The house belongs to R. J. Lund of Thief River Falls and was insured against the loss to the building.

Haukeness Visited Here

Rev. and Mrs. Haukeness and daughters Eleanor and Sylvia of Rose Valley, Sask., called on a number of friends here Monday. They had attended the convention of the Lutheran Free Church held at Thief River Falls last week.

Mr. and Mr. Jack Heofek of Thief River Falls visited at the O. Moline home Monday evening.

Scouts Are At Cass Lake

Hartley Peterson. local scoutmaster, and fourteen of the boys of Troop 112 left on Monday for their summer camp at Cass Lake where they will spend a week returning home on Sunday. The troop from here will do the same as last year in camping. That is they cook and camp for themselves instead of boarding there during their stay. They are, how ever, this year making use of the large camp tents at the camp instead of bringing their own as before.

Mr. Peterson, Mr. Karvonen and Mr. Hjalmer Johnson took the boys and their eqnipment to the camp on Monday. The parents of tne boys will go and get them on Sundav.

Anton Enge, Big Woods farmer, has been named county supervisor for the Crop Insurance program of the Federal Government which will cover insurance on the 1939 wheat crop, R. A. Reierson, county agent, announced recently.

The insurance will cover damages due to insects, plant disease, hail, wind, lightning, drought, and flood. The only thing not covered in the program is poor farm practice.

Premium rates for the county are .7 bushels of wheat for an acre of wheat with all expenses to be borne by the U. S. Government. The premiums are payable in kind or cash equivalent and losses are to be paid in the same way.

County community committees will gather in Warren on Wednesday, June 22 when the program will be completely explained. After that meetings will be held throughout the county to acquaint the farmers wlth the insurance program.

War Againnst Marijuana Weed

All this summer and fall the Minnesota Highway patrolman as he cruises the trunk roads of the state will not only be watching for traffic law violaters and motorists in distress but also he will be constantly sweeping his eyes over the highway right-of-way and adjoining fields on the lookout for the narcotic marijuana weed.

At the same time, members of the Highway maintenance crews who received instructions in identifying the plant in a special course of instructions last summer, also will seek out the weed.

In cooperation with the American Legion, M. J. Murray, chief of the patrol, has enlisted his force in the state-wide war against the freely growing drug.

The patrolmen have been ordered to report to the nearest county agent at once to obtain knowledge of the plant and to learn its physical characteristics so that they can spot it readily among other vegetation.

In the last several years evidence has shown that that the weed grows prolificly in Minnesota. During the summer of 1937 the maintenance division of the Minnesota Highway department went to school to learn to know the marijuana plant and as a result were able to report a number of patches to the authorities for destruction. When the weed was found along the state owned right-of-way it was immediately eradicated.

The enlistment of the patrol in this fight, in the opinion of Chief Murray, will because of the wide circle of patrol travel, turn up a number of marijauna patches which might otherwise have escaped detection.

A similiar fight against the habit-forming weed is being conducted by the Legion, federal government norcotic forces and state and local agencies all over the nation where "loco" weed or "Hashhish" plant flourishes.

Many At Creameries Picnic

One of the largest crowds that have ever assembled at the annual Marshall county creameries picnic, was in attendance at the picnic held at the Middle River State Park (Old Mill) on Sunday. It was estimated that about five thousand people were there for the doings that day.

John Brandt, head of the Land O' Lakes organization in Minneapolis was the main speaker. Another outstanding speaker was Mr. Selvig, chief accountant of the cooperating audit of the department of agriculture.

The main feature attraction of the day was the ball game between the eleven candidates for sheriff and the nine candidates for county commisoioners in the fifth district. The sheriff candidates won the game.

Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Nohre returned home Sunday morning after spending several weeks in Spring Grove, Minn., where Mr. Nohre looked after business interests for his relatives after the death of his mother.

This Baby Is Not An Orphan

The vacationist who finds a baby deer or moose lying alone in the woods and thinks he has found an orphan is mistaken.

Minnesota game wardens and forest rangers have had well meaning people deliver little spotted fawns, when they should have left the babies entirely alone.

Fishermen following trout streams through the dense woods have discovered fawns and have petted the youngsters. In most cases, the doe discovering the dangerous human scent on its baby will disown it and leave it to starve to death. In other cases the youngster will follow the one who pets it for some distance. If it is one from a set of twins or triplets, the mother will take the rest of her family and find a new hiding place, leaving the one to a slow death of starvation or a violent end by predators.

"When you see a fawn leave the place at once, and by all means "Keep Your Hands Off", says Conservation Commissioner Herman C. Wenzel. The department cannot issue permits to individuals to keep dear as pets. The law prohibits this practice, so don't pick up a fawn with the idea of making a pet of it.

Farm Reporters Wanted

Checking for 1938 compliance under the Agricultural Conservation Program will start in July The county committee requests that anyone interested in the position as farm reporter should submit their application in writing at once setting forth their qualifications and experience. The selection of these men will be made by the State Committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Voth and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Holst and daughter returned home Saturday from Goodhue county where they had been visiting with relatives.

4-H Club Picnic For Fun

Marshall County 4-H Clubs will hold their annual picnic at Menzel's Grove east of Argyle on Thursday, June 23. There will be kittenball contests, races and other contests held during the day. The arrangements for this picnic are in charge of a committee composed of Alphonse Johnsou, Art Haugen. Geo. Wiley, Allard Nelson, Mrs. Regina Fitzsimons, and Mrs. Erland Nichols, while the kittenball games and contests will be held under the supervision of Fred Field, Art Haugen and Lon Palmer. The program committee, made up of Mrs. Erland Nicholls and Mrs. Regina Fitzsimons has requested all clubs in the county to furnish a number for the program.

There will be no speeches, and this picnic has been arranged in order to have parents, friends, and 4-H club members gather for a good time.

The local boy scout troop had a refreshment stand at the county creameries picnic on Sunday and report that they made enough to pay most of their expenses at the summer camp this week. These young boys are plucky and try to earn their own way in scout work. They stuck right to their stand all day and much credit is due Mr. Peterson, scoutmaster, who stayed with them there, for his fine method of training these young boys.

Three children were baptised at the parsonage on Saturday afternoon with Rev. Hanson officiating. They are: Raymond Myron Kolden son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Kolden, born on April 18, 1938; Roy Arthur and Bennie Edward, sons Mr. and Mrs. Albert Anderson, born on Feb. 18, 1934 and May 28, 1937 respectively. They all live northeast of Middle River.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Haagenson on June 4, a boy.

Cotton Fashions for Mother, Daughter

THESE two designs are particularly good inspirations for summer daytimes—they're cool, simple, becoming and easy to make. More than that, they are styles that adapt themselves to all seasons and many different materials, so that you can use them over and over again. The house dress can be made in a few hours, with a diagram, and the jumper frock includes a detailed sew chart, so it's no trouble at all.

House Dress in Large Sizes.

With darts at the waistline and inside tucks on the shoulders, this dress has an unusually good line—trim and slenderizing. Pleats in the short sleeves make them loose and easy to work in. It buttons down the front, and therefore goes on in a jiffy. Gingham, seersucker, percale and broadcloth are the best materials for this. Trim it with bright ricrac braid.

Girl's Jumper Blouse Frock.

With a jumper frock in dark cotton and several crisp white blouses, it's easy to keep your young daughter looking fresh and smart—and cuts down on the laundry, too. This style, with its flare skirt and puff sleeves, is the most becoming fashion in the world for girls between six and eighteen. For the jumper, choose shantung, pique, gingham or linen. For the blouse, frilly, sheer things like dimity, organdy, mull or dotted Swiss.

The Patterns.

1533 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 requires 4⅝ yards of 35-inch material. 1⅝ yards ricrac braid to trim.

1520 is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1⅜ yards of 35-inch material for the blouse; 2 yards of 35-inch material for the jumper.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Strange Facts

Movies Catch Fire-Rain

A RAIN of fire, thousands of degrees in temperature, fell upon the surface of the sun. Sprays of flaming atoms shot up 150,000 miles from the sun's surface. A terrific explosion took place in which part of the sun's atmosphere was lifted 600,000 miles above the sun's surface. On the earth there were clear skies and cloudy skies, sunshine and rain. Men and women going about their daily work saw nothing strange or different in the heavens above. Even the sensitive radio waves were not disturbed. Yet one instrument, made by man, recorded this rain of fire.

The spectroheliograph is the instrument invented by scientists which has made possible these amazing photographs of fire-rain. This instrument is essentially a spectroscope with a slit which transmits only one line of the spectrum. A photographic plate is moved across the slit at a rate equal to the sun's apparent rate of passage, the sun's light entering the slit through the object glass or mirror of a telescope. On September 17, 1937, the eye of the solar camera received and recorded celestial fireworks in motion pictures.

These solar pictures were shown for the first time in Philadelphia at the recent annual meeting of the American Philosophical society. They are the work of Dr. Robert R. McMath. The rain of hot fire falling upon the sun, revealed for the first time by improved solar photography, presents the greatest mystery. No one knows why it rains fire on the sun, or where the fire-rain comes from. Yet pictures have been taken of it, falling in great curving spirals. It is as mysterious to modern scientists as rain water was to our primitive ancestors.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

Robertson Has Remedy for Gloom

CZECHOSLOVAKIA and all that may hang on its destiny is just an added starter in the up-and-coming cosmos of A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing company.

It is the always assured and hopeful Mr. Robertson who announces his company will spend $12,000,000 on additions and betterments this year, and, from where Mr. Robertson sits, that's just a couple of white chips compared to spendings to come.

Mr. Robertson is the H. G. Wells of industry. His "shape of things to come," which he has been outlining for the last year or two, includes the following specifications:

Migratory humans, shifting north and south like the birds. "Just whether the children will be born in the North or the South," he said, "is not quite clear to me, but I expect we will follow the policy of the birds and have the children in the North."

Windowless houses, pasteurized air, and artificial sunlight.

One-man planes, with folding wings, kept in the hall rack, with the umbrellas.

Pocket radios for two-way talk with anybody, anywhere.

Noiseless cities with double-deck streets.

Flat houses, with a push-button crane which will park the the auto on the roof.

Young Texan Rode Herd on Rail System

IT WAS only a year ago that Robert R. Young, thirty-nine-year-old Texan, quite unknown to Wall Street, rode herd on the straying Van Sweringen system and corralled it. It was all bewilderingly complicated, but, finally sifted down, it appeared that Mr. Young had picked up a $3,000,000,000 rail "empire" with an original investment of $225,000.

He is a quiet, inconspicuous, unassuming man, and now the feature writers are just getting around to calling him a "Titan."

He won a rock-and-sock proxy battle for the control of the Chesapeake and Ohio railway. Within the last few years, he has infiltrated gently into high finance, which is just now becoming acutely conscious of his presence.

His family was in and around Canadian, Texas, before the battle of the Alamo. They started the First National Bank of Canadian, which is now in the hands of the fourth generation.

Career at Culver Was Prophetic

At Culver Military academy, Robert R. Young was graduated at the head of his class, its youngest graduate, and later he attended the University of Virginia. With the Du Ponts in 1916, he got his preliminary work-out in finance and joined General Motors in 1922.

In 1932, he founded his own Wall Street firm, with Frank F. Kolbe, his later associate in the Van Sweringen putsch.

Mrs. Young is the former Anita Ten Eyck O'Keefe, of Williamsburg, Va., sister of Georgia O'Keefe, the painter. In 1935, they leased Beechwood, the Astor estate, in Newport.

Mr. Young, a Democrat, like his father, paid $15,000 for a consignment of those famous Democratic convention books, which congressmen, badgering him at a senate hearing, insisted wasn't nearly so much of a bargain as the Van Sweringen deal. "You are a bigger sucker than I thought you were," said Senator Wheeler.

Languages of Nations

Switzerland is not the only nation having more than one official language. Palestine has three recognized tongues, English, Hebrew and Arabic. Actually more than one language is spoke in every country in Europe but one. Portugal is the only nation having a single language. In Asia, India has 220 distinct vernacular languages. But even with four languages Switzerland is not finished, says the Washington Post. There is still one more obscure dialect called Ladin, spoken by a small group of people.

HOW TO SEW

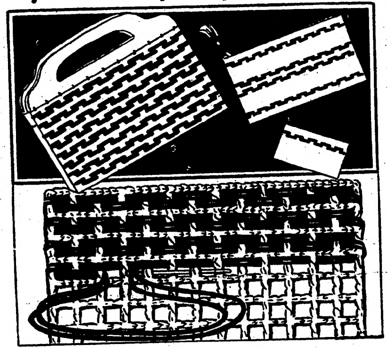
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



Woven Fillet for Bags and Purses.

EITHER crochet cotton or wool yarn in two or more colors may be used for a knitting bag or purses of woven fillet crochet. The foundation is made in the lightest color. The knitting bag in the sketch is white fillet with navy blue threads woven through, as shown. The zipper purse and vanity pouch are ecru with carmine and Delft blue woven stripes. The plain spaces between the stripes are made by weaving through the fillet mesh with matching thread.

To start the fillet foundation, make a chain the length of your bag, then chain 5 more, turn, and make a double crochet in the 6th stitch from the hook. Chain 2, skip 2 and make a double crochet in next stitch. Repeat to end of row, then chain 5 and turn. *Make a double crochet in the top of the last double crochet. Chain 2. Continue across the row, then chain 5 and turn. Repeat from * until you have enough of the fillet mesh to make your bag or purse. The weaving is done with double thread and a large blunt needle. Work across and then back through each row of the fillet mesh as shown. When a new weaving thread is started, hide the ends in the edge of the crochet.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' latest book gives complete directions for making many other things for yourself and to use as gifts. It also fully illustrates ninety embroidery stitches with interesting variations. You will use these again and again for reference. Ask for Book 2, enclosing 25 cents (coins preferred). Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

That's Luck

Luck doesn't float around the air
And light on Tom or Dick or Harry
Just anyhow and anywhere.
The wit to know the thing you want,
The will to work, the faith to fight,
The strength to use but tempered tools
And only weapon honors bright;
The spirit and the spunk to dare,
The heart to hope, the grit to bear;
And when disaster falls, the grit to grin, and start again—
That's luck.

Madness?

Kulper—What reason have you for marrying my daughter, young man?

Fogmore—No reason at all, sir; I'm in love with her.

The following appeared some years ago in a wedding report: "Among the gifts of the bride to the bridegroom was a gorgeous dressing down."

Gone Forever

They were both writing letters, but suddenly hubby stopped and looked worried.

"What's the matter, dear?" asked his wife.

"Why—er—I had it on the tip of my tongue and now it's gone."

"Never mind," she said, "just think hard and it's bound to come back."

"Thinking won't bring this back. It was a stamp," said hubby.

Willing to Wait

The tiny brother of the bride was given a piece of wedding cake to put under his pillow. The following morning his mother said to him, "Well, Bobbie, did you sleep with the wedding cake under your pillow and dream of your future wife?"

"No, mummie," replied the boy. "I ate the cake, 'cause I wanted my wife to be a surprise."

DO SOMETHING!

"Do you realize," said the statistical fellow, "that everytime I breathe someone dies?"

"You should try cloves," said his neighbor.

Mrs. Harder—Yes, and one visit of the paper hangers beats a cyclone.

Going Down

Two cronies met at lunch.

"How's things?" one asked.

"How are they? Rotten, old boy. Honestly, if they keep on like this it looks as though my last income tax return will be just about correct!" said the other, gloomily.

Any Excuse—

One day a neighbor came over and wanted to borrow Grandpa's new rope. Said Grandpa: "No, I've got to use that rope today to tie up some sand."

After the neighbor had left a friend said: "Grandpa, you know you can't tie sand with a rope!"

"Remember, my boy," replied the old man, "you can do pretty near anything with a piece of rope if you don't want to lend it."

An Operator's Dream

"I'm sorry I gave you the wrong number," said the operator.

"Don't mention it," replied the caller, "I'm sure the number you gave me was much better than the number I asked for, only it just happened I wasn't able to use it."

Safetygrams
BY FRED W. BRAUN

It's peculiar to note that automobile racing experts who compete at Indianapolis and other speedways year after year are very slow and careful drivers.

Statements from these men and evidence of their driving habits prove they are careful. They know the results of excessive speed. They know what will happen when the car gets out of control. They must have good judgement on turns. They exercise common sense.

Safety is about 99 percent common sense - accidents are 99 percent thoughtless hurry.

It's better to say, "Give him the right of way" than "Get him right of way."

"It's smart to be careful."

Prize Winning Recipes To Be Announced Soon

C. Houston Goudiss, who writes our "WHAT TO EAT AND WHY" series, reports that the Cake Recipe Contest which he recently conducted through the columns of this newspaper was a gratifying success.

A tremendous number of recipes were submitted and the home economists on the staff of his Experimental Kitchen Laboratory in New York city have been busy for days testing and tasting almost every imaginable kind of cake. They report that our town has some very fine cake bakers!

Because of the volume of recipes submitted, they will require a little while longer to complete their tests and to arrive at their decision as to the winners of the $25.00 first prize, the five second prizes of $10.00 each, and the ten third prizes of $5.00 each.

Prize winners will be reported in these columns in the near future, and as announced at the beginning of the contest, prize winning recipes, together with those receiving honorable mention from the judges, will be printed in a booklet to be distributed nationally.

Signs of Commerce

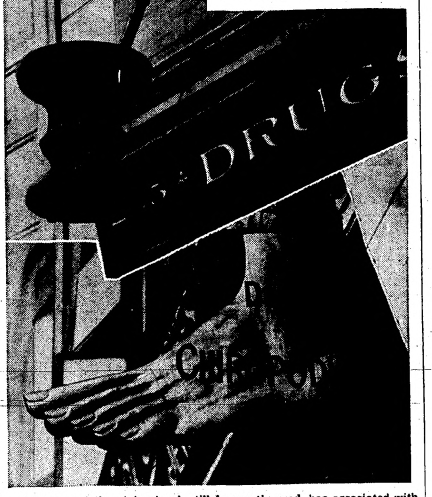
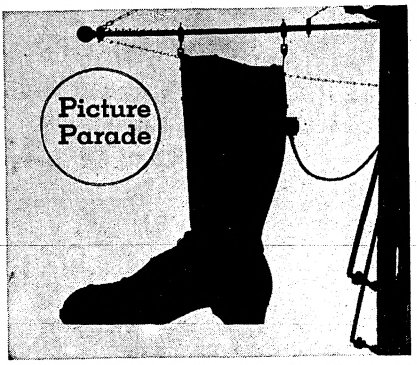
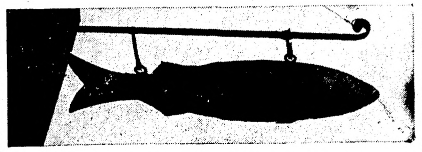
Gone is the day when every trade, every guild had its time honored insignia of profession. But a few such emblems still persist in out-of-the-way places. Once every fur store placed a stuffed bear out front, often scaring passing children half to death. A more picturesque sign by far was the wooden Indian who advertised a cigar store. Both of these symbols have gone out of favor but some are destined to retain their popularity. Barber shops will always depend on the red and white striped pole and the jeweler will always hang a huge clock outside his door. So, also, will blacksmiths continue to hang a horseshoe above the entrance way.



The druggist's mixing bowl, still frequently used, has associated with it the faint aroma of professionalism that will always be present in drug stores. A less symbolic—and more practical—sign is that of the chiropodist. He works with feet, so why not hang out a giant foot?



Modern advertising men "outlawed" such symbols as the above shoe repairing sign, but no more picturesque substitute has ever been found. In an age of electric signs, the quiet professional symbol still bears a hallmark of quality.



You don't need to read it . . . a glance tells the story!

Secrets of Ancients Survive Attacks of Modern Science

With television soon to become serious rival to the movies, and giant airplanes and "press-the-button" warships things which raise little comment from the average man, it is surprising that there are many secrets known to the ancients which have survived the attacks of modern science, says a writer in London Answers.

The Greeks could not weave linen or wool on anything like the scale we weave them today. But they wove them into the pilema, a form of cuirass which could not be penetrated by the sharpest dart or arrow. The secret has been lost—perhaps forever.

The Romans sank wells for water to great depths. Exactly how they did the boring is unknown.

The beautiful purple dye, known of old, has eluded the dye-makers of today. And modern builders can make nothing of the strong and durable cement used by the Greeks and the Romans in their walls. This cement was stronger and harder than the stone itself.

The knowledge possessed by the ancient Egyptians was very extensive. They had a method of dressing stone to withstand the ravages of time and weather. They also perfected the art of embalming. Probes, forceps, and other surgical instruments have been found in Egypt. For what purpose they were used we will never know.

That secret, along with many others, passed away with the destruction of the famous library at Alexandria in the Fifth century. The loss of the knowledge contained in that library was a blow to civilization.

Reading and Thinking

Reading furnishes the mind only with materials of knowledge; it is thinking makes what we read ours. So far as we apprehend and see the connection of ideas, so far it is ours; without that it is so much loose matter floating in our brain.—Locke.

Must Books Be Read?

The collector of books need not fear the challenge that is sure to be made, sooner or later, by his skeptical acquaintances: "Have you read them all?" The first idea he ought to get out of his head is that he must only buy books for immediate reading.

"The charm of a library," said that devout book lover, the late Arnold Bennett, "is seriously impaired when one has read the whole or nearly the whole of its contents."

Bennett confessed that he had hundreds of books he had never opened, and which, perhaps, he never would open. But he would not part with them. He knew they were good, and as he gazed on them, he said to them, "Some day, if chance favors, your turn will come. Be patient!"

Best Thoughts

Try to care about something in this vast world besides the gratification of small selfish desires. Try to care for what is best in thought and action—something that is good apart from the accidents of your own lot. Look on other lives besides your own. See what their troubles are, and how they are borne.—George Eliot.

WHEN LIFE DEPENDS ON TIRE SAFETY

On May 30, Floyd Roberts shattered all track records for the 500 mile Indianapolis Race, averaging 117.2 miles an hour using Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires.

IT'S ALWAYS Firestone

FOR 19 CONSECUTIVE YEARS THE WINNERS OF THE INDIANAPOLIS 500-MILE RACE HAVE PROTECTED THEIR LIVES WITH FIRESTONE GUM-DIPPED TIRES

THEY said it couldn't be done — that tires could not withstand the torture of the new high speeds. Yet Floyd Roberts set a new record, at this year's Indianapolis Race, averaging 117.2 miles an hour for the 500 miles on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires.

With the sun-baked brick of the straight-away and the granite-hard surface of the turns pulling and grinding at their tires, 33 daring drivers, every one on Firestone Tires, waged a thrilling battle for gold and glory. Never before have tires been called upon to take such punishment. Never in all the history of the motor car has tire safety been put to such a gruelling test. Yet not one tire failed — not one single cord loosened — because Gum-Dipping, that famous Firestone patented process saturates and coats every cotton fiber in every cord in every ply with liquid rubber counteracting the tire-destroying internal friction and heat that ordinarily cause blowouts.

Why risk your life and the lives of others on unsafe tires? Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign today by equipping your car with Firestone Triple-Safe Tires — the only tires made that are safety-proved on the speedways for your protection on the highways.

The sheriff was called to investigate the matter.

Boy Scouts Returned Home

The local boy scout troop returned home Sunday from Cass Lake where they spent a week at their new summer camp. The boys had a fine time at the camp. Hartley Peterson, local scoutmaster spent the week with the troop there so they could get as much as possible out of their summer outing. Mr. Peterson has cooperated with the local scout committee to the extent that he has gone to summer camp with the boys every year. The parents and committee extend their appreciation to Mr. Peterson for his fine work with the troop.

Those who spent the week at camp from here were: Clayton Olson, Rusell Sanoden, Howard Lorentson, Jerome Sorum, Roy Hagberg, Cardiff Leiran, Ray Sagstuen, Roy Johnson, Francis Johnson, Harold Gavere, Rubin Ness, Wayne Larson, Carlton Castle, Milton Hanson and Scoutmaster Hartley Peterson.

The boys again took honors at the camp, one being that of passing 105 tests in all which was more than any other troop attained.

The Marshall County Fair

County Fair days are soon here and residents of the Holt community are making plans to attend the bigger Marshall County Fair at Warren on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 7, 8, and 6. when the greatest program ever brought to this section of the Northwest will be presented.

Interest in the coming exposition is growing daily with hundreds of persons in Marshall and Northern Polk counties planning to enter exhibits to compete for the $J,500 in cash premiums which will be offered this year. The exhibits will feature livestock of all descriptions, garden vegetables, grains, grasses, baking, canning, sewing and fancy work. Premium lists may be secured by writing O. M. Mattson, secretary, at Warren.

Marshall county 4-H clubs will be on display with their projects during the three day exposition. The club exhibits, annually, take the spotlight at the fair and show what the young boys and girls of our farms are doing.

The big fair will open on Thursday July 7, with Childrens day when the fair management will award six stream-lined bicycles to children residing in Marshalll and Northern Polk counties. Tickets for the bicycle awards have been given to all school children. These tickets must be brought to the fair grounds entrance gates. During the day, all shows and rides on Dee Lang's Famous Shows Midway may be enjoyed by the children at one-half price until 6 p. m.

Each afternoon's program will feature Thrill Day attractions by Frank Winkley's suicide Club. Never before has a county fair witnessed an attraction like the sensational program this organization will present. Automobiles will crash into each other at 50 miles an hour. Another car will leap through the air, jumping completely over two other automobiles. Motorcycles will crash through walls of fire. Cars will be driven through exploding dynamite, others will roll over and over, end on end, at 60 miles an hour. Motorcycles will stage races and numerous other stunts will be staged.

Lew Rosenthal will present his 10th anniversary program at the Marshall County Fair this year. This program will feature "The Merry-Go-Round Revue" with a gorgeous stage setting and a cast of 30 people for each evening's performance. Numerous circus acts, such as the Namedil troupe direct from Denmark; the Groth Brothers, clowns on a breakaway revolving ladder; The Great Franzelon, defying death on an 85 foot high pole; The Three Olympia Boys, flying perch artists; Beebe and Rose Kress Co., European novelty bears with "Bear Facts" and the Dexter Duo, sensation roller skate artists.

In addition there will be band music by the Strandquist and Warren high school bands and numerous other attractions which will be announced in later issues of this paper. You are urged to plan now to spend at least one day at your fair at Warren. Take the family along as children under 15 years of age will be admitted free.

Had Unpleasant Visit

P. B. Malberg and son Egbert of Excel returned home last week from Cannon Falls where they had gone to take in the 80th anniversary of the church in that community.

Mr. Malberg reports that when he arrived there he found his brother very ill in a hospital and was shocked by his sudden death a few days after arriving there. His brother, John S. Malberg was 63 years old. Mr. Malberg had gone there to be one of the main speakers at the festival and all the sorrow he has had recently with the death of his wife and brother did not make it very pleasant for him. The people of this community extend their sympathy to him and his family in their hour of sorrow.

Mrs. S. H. Nohre, Mrs. Agnes Conklin and son, Elmer Nohre, Mrs. Edgar Horien, and Henry Nohre left Thursday for Spring Grove, Minn. where they will visit relatives and also attend the Golden Wedding of Mrs. Nohre's parents.

Mrs. Walter Sandberg and son left last week for Velva, N. D. to visit with the Sam Reierson family. From there they will return to their home in Palmer Alaska. They have spent the past several months here visiting relatives and attending to matters of business.

Mr. and Mrs. Hartley Peterson Mr. and Mrs. Ludvig Sagstuen and family, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Ness and children, and Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Sorum and Ronnie and Jean drove to Cass Lake Saturday to get the local Boy Scout troop who spent a week camping there. They returned home Sunday.

Mike Fricker of St. Hilaire and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Fricker and children spent Sunday at Lake Bemidji.

Many Attending Bible Camp

More than 130 campers were registered for the week at the Lake of the Woods Bible Camp Tuesday, according to Rev. E. B. Kluver, registrar. This is the largest attendance at the camp since 1934.

The camp activities began Monday evening with the inspirational services conducted by Rev. H. B. Raun.

At these services the camp also accepted a lecturn and chair, given by P. B. Trelstad of Middle River. Mr. Trelstad had constructed these of plywood trimmed with natural birch, designed in a rustic pattern.

It is expected that several visitors will be at the camp for the Sunday festivities. The morning services begin at 11:00. Rev. H. B. Raun will preach the sermon. The afternoon services begin at 2:30. The speaker at the services is Rev. R. M. Fjelstad, dean of the camp. Various vocal groups will sing at both services. Those who come may purchase their dinners at the camp kitchen Those who would rather do so, may bring their picnic dinners.

Those who went from from here were Opal and Rnby Werner, Jean Sorum, Lois Hanson, Betty Lou Lorentson, Caroline Aspeline, Agnes Oppegaard, Evelyn Larson, Beatrice Larson, Vivian Larson, Florence Moe, Angeline Johnson, Evelyn Stienhauer, Lorna Peterson, Eleanor Peterson, Gertrude Nohre, Rev. and Mrs. T. C. L. Hanson.

Rev. Hanson, Mrs. S. Lorentson and Caroline Aspelin took them there by car on Monday.

Einer Shoots Big Bug

The boys at Carlson's store had a tussel with a large Tarantula on Tuesday when one jumped out of a bunch of bananas as they were unpacking it. The tarantula, which has a poisonous bite, hopped around and could not be caught nor struck. Einer rose nobly to the occasion and shot it with a twenty-two gun.

American Admiral Refuses to Remove His Warships From the Yangtse River . . . Congress and Politics

Here Japanese soldiers with fixed bayonets are seen rushing a Chinese position in a part of Suchow which the Japanese artillery had reduced to flaming ruins. There, as elsewhere, the defenders practically destroyed the city before retreating.

Edward W. Pickard

SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

© Western Newspaper Union.

Japan's Demands Rejected

AMERICAN warships will remain in the Yangtze river and will go to any place where Americans are in danger. This despite the demands of Japan. Naval officials of Japan asked that all foreign warships leave the Yangtze river area between Wuhu and Kiukiang because the invaders were about to start an offensive toward Hankow, provisional Chinese capital. But Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander of the United States Asiatic fleet, rejected the demand sharply. Furthermore, he at once planned an inspection trip up the Yangtze and through the war zone, and he did not ask Japan's permission.

Admiral Harry Yarnell

These three "principles" of American naval operations in Asiatic waters were set forth by Admiral Yarnell in his note to the Japanese:

The United States navy will retain complete freedom of movement on the Yangtze, and will proceed to any place where Americans are in danger.

The American command will not change the color of its warships, which are painted white, to conform to any color scheme suggested by the Japanese.

The United States does not regard the warning of Japanese naval officials relative to the Yangtze as relieving the Japanese "in the slightest degree" of responsibility for damage or injury to United States warships.

Chinese claimed the drive of the Japanese on the central front was held up by Yellow river floods. Chengchow, once a prosperous railway center, was still held by the Chinese, but had been reduced to ruins by Japanese shells and bombs and by the Chinese themselves in pursuing their "scorched earth" policy.

Japanese air raids on Canton continued by day and night. Perhaps 10,000 persons had been killed there, many thousands were injured and the metropolis was shattered. A great portion of the population fled from the city.

Kennedy to Resign?

AMBASSADOR J. P. KENNEDY left London for the United States and, according to the London Daily Express, he intends to report to the President as soon as he arrives in Washington on his plan to settle the British war debt, and then will resign his post. He has held the position only three months.

Healing Party Rifts

THOUGH it was believed Tommy Corcoran and his "eliminating committee" would continue the efforts to "purge" the Democratic party of opponents of administration policies, the President himself undertook to repair some of the breaks in the party ranks. For instance, he invited Senator Gillette, victor in the Iowa primary, to the White House where they took off their coats, ate luncheon together and, according to reports, planned common action against the Republican enemy in November. Also, it was disclosed, Mr. Roosevelt had sent word to the New York Democrats that the renomination of Governor Lehman would be acceptable to him. He has not liked Lehman since the governor came out against the court packing bill. There had been a plan to run Lehman for senator and Wagner for governor, but this switch presumably is now out.

Gov. Lehman

Railway Aid Postponed

WHEN the leaders of the senate and house made up their minds to adjourn congress not later than June 15, they went to the White House and told the President the proposed legislation to expedite the reorganization of railroads would have to be postponed to the next session. They agreed, however, to put through two other railway measures. One permits RFC loans to railroads without interstate commerce commission certification. The other establishes a special unemployment insurance system for rail workers.

Sloan on Wage Law

ALFRED P. SLOAN Jr., chairman of General Motors, told the stockholders of the corporation that federal legislation for minimum wages and maximum hours will increase unemployment, penalize small business and further unbalance the entire national economy. He criticized the spending-lending program as recovery medicine and said "There certainly is nothing in the picture to warrant optimism so far as the immediate future is concerned, or to establish my confidence as to any intelligent solution of our difficulties."

A. P. Sloan Jr.

Sloan said that one of the two major contributing causes of the present depression has been the unstabilizing of the national economy by too rapid an increase in wages and too rapid a shortening of hours in many key industries—thus unbalancing purchasing power in relation to prices.

The second cause, superimposed on the first, Sloan continued, "is the fact that there has been developing a growing lack of confidence and a fear as to the attitude of government toward business, as well as to economic policies that have been enacted as affecting the national economy and penalizing the operating effectiveness of industry."

Martin Suspends Five

PRESIDENT HOMER MARTIN of the United Automobile Workers suspended five members of the union's international board on the ground that they were disturbing union harmony. The five were Vice Presidents Richard T. Frankensteen, Wyndham Mortimer, Ed Hall, and Walter N. Wells, and Secretary-Treasurer George Addess.

Lindberghs on Island

COL. AND MRS. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH and their two sons are now established in their new home on little Illiec island just off the Brittany coast of France. Illiec island is large enough only for its castle, formerly the home of the opera singer, Mme. Adelina Patti. It is near St. Gildas island, home of Dr. Alexis Carrell, American scientist with whom Lindbergh developed the mechanical heart.

Son James Won't Run

JAMES ROOSEVELT, son and secretary of the President, rejected a citizens committee's request that he run for lieutenant governor of Massachusetts, declaring "I feel that I have an obligation above all else to remain at my duties in Washington."

Nazis Win in Elections

HENLEIN'S Nazi Sudeten party won an overwhelming endorsement from voters in Czechoslovakia's German districts in a landslide decision which featured the country's final municipal elections.

In the Czech districts President Benes' party gained substantially, while the Socialists and Agrarians held their own. Communists also showed a gain in the Czech areas.

Few incidents of violence marked the day and no Czech troops were in evidence. Great Britain, acting to avert a fresh war crisis, received permission from the Czech government to station observers throughout the larger election districts.

Our Slump Worst

ACCORDING to the monthly bulletin of the federal reserve board, the present business depression is more severe in the United States than in any other industrial country in the world.

The manufacture of war materials in other countries was pointed out, however, as one of the principal supports to business activity, many other industries showing almost as poor results as in the United States.

The social security board reported that during March two out of every thirteen persons in the United States received some form of public aid, federal, state or local. The total number was estimated at 19,700,000. The statistics did not embrace farm subsidy payments, the federal housing program and other planned economy measures.

Plan Relief Politics Quiz

HARRY HOPKINS, head of the WPA, asserted that the renomination of Senator Gillette by Iowa Democrats showed that his vast organization was not playing politics. But prominent Democratic senators are not so sure this is true, or will be true during the remainder of the year. Ten of them signed a resolution, introduced by Millard E. Tydings of Maryland, calling for the appointment of a senatorial committee of three to investigate any charges of politics in relief that may arise during the 1938 election campaign. The resolution made no reference to the Iowa primary in which Hopkins backed Otha Wearin, the loser.

Senator Tydings

The ten signers of the resolution, including both supporters and critics of the Roosevelt administration, were, besides Tydings: Adams of Colorado, Bulkley of Ohio, Burke of Nebraska, George of Georgia, Gerry of Rhode Island, Hatch of New Mexico, King of Utah, McAdoo of California and Wagner of New York.

Senator Hatch said he would try again at the next session to impose restrictions on participation by relief workers in party conventions or other political activities.

House Unseats Jenks

ARTHUR B. JENKS, Republican, who had served 18 months of his term as representative from New Hampshire, was unseated by the house and replaced by Alphonse Roy, Democrat, who was declared defeated in the 1936 election. The vote to oust Jenks was 214 to 122. When it was announced, all the Republicans, Progressives and Farmer-Laborites and some Democrats marched out in a body as a gesture of protest.

The action by the house was apparently taken to aid the campaign of Senator Fred Brown of New Hampshire for renomination. Roy has a large following among the French population of Manchester, N. H.

Eight Army Flyers Die

EIGHT army airmen from Chanute field in Illinois were caught in a storm, lost one wing of their big bomber and crashed in a farm field near Delavan, Ill. All of them were killed and the tanks burst into flame. Three of the victims were commissioned officers.

Kidnaped Boy Dead

LITTLE James Bailey Cash, five years old, who was kidnaped from his home in Princeton, Fla., was found dead by federal agents, his body lying in a clump of palmetto. The $10,000 which his father had paid for the lad's ransom was recovered.

Franklin Pierce McCall, twenty-one years old, a truck driver, was arrested by J. Edgar Hoover and his G-men and confessed the crime. He said the boy was accidentally killed by suffocation before the first ransom note was delivered to his parents.

Huge Navy Plane Planned

THE house appropriations committee included in the second deficiency bill an additional million dollars for construction of the world's largest military plane, and the navy department is now ready to go ahead with the construction of the monster, which may weigh 50 tons. The original model will cost upward of $3,000,000.

Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, said the new plane would exceed considerably the 5,000-mile range needed for a nonstop round trip from San Francisco to Honolulu.

C. Houston Goudiss Offers More Advice About Reducing

Describes the Perils of Unscientific Methods for Losing Weight

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York City.

MY RECENT discussion of reducing in these columns brought many letters, indicating that the modern woman is, fortunately, weight conscious. This is an encouraging sign. For it shows that you are alert to the dangers of overweight, which not only destroys beauty but may indirectly contribute to heart disease, kidney disorders and diabetes, which take their greatest toll from among the heavyweights.

Guard Against Unscientific Reducing Methods

Some of these letters caused me great concern, however, because they indicate that in spite of my warning against unscientific methods of weight reduction, many women still cling to the idea that there is some magic in the various pills, powders, capsules, soaps, salts and mechanical devices that are sold at fancy prices and hold out alluring promises of speedy reducing without dieting or exercise.

It is bad enough that most of these fail to reduce. For they may delay the day when the victim of overweight will undertake a sound and scientific program of weight reduction that will effectively take off weight—thus improving appearance, benefiting health and increasing the chances of longevity. But what is far more serious is that some of these preparations may endanger health or cause lifelong physical impairment.

Dangerous Drugs

Drugging is particularly to be condemned, and no one should attempt to reduce by this method except under the advice and watchful eye of a physician. There are many invalids today who would be happy and healthy if they had not attempted to take some "reducing medicine" without consulting a physician.

One preparation that is still bought by foolish women—in spite of repeated warnings against its use—may even result in permanent blindness.

Almost equally objectionable are excessive purging — which may leave you a wobbly wreck—and fasting, which is even more dangerous to women than men.

Don't Diet Without Direction

A carefully regulated diet will not only maintain normal weight, but will banish overweight by forcing the body to burn its own excess fat as fuel. Having heard of this scientific principle, many women frantically and foolishly attempt to prescribe their own reducing diets — often with disastrous results.

There is always the possibility that one may omit calcium-bearing foods and thus impair the teeth, or leave out foods rich in iron and copper and interfere with the formation of the hemoglobin or red pigment in the blood.

One of the most common and most serious errors is to omit all bread, potatoes and cereals, in the belief that carbohydrates are "fattening foods." Carbohydrates are required by the body in order to utilize the fats in the diet, and when reducing, they are also necessary to burn up excess fatty tissue.

Just as fire cannot burn without air, fat cannot be utilized in the body without the presence of starch or sugar. When the diet contains insufficient carbohydrates, fat burns incompletely, resulting in the dangerous acetone type of acidosis.

Counting Calories the Easy Way to Reduce

The one safe, sure and scientific method of getting rid of surplus weight and at the same time maintaining top health—is to consume a diet that is balanced in every respect, but to count your calories at every meal, making certain that you consume fewer calories each day than your body requires for its normal energy expenditure.

I will gladly send to every reader of this newspaper, a copy of my reducing bulletin. This includes a chart showing the caloric value of all the commonly used foods—plus a week's sample reducing menus. By following this scientific plan for weight reduction, you can easily lose from one to two pounds weekly. A more rapid reduction is not advisable. At that rate, you can lose from six to eight pounds in the course of a month—twenty-four pounds at the end of three months. That is a lot of weight to lose and will make a vast difference in your appearance and in the enthusiasm with which you greet your daily tasks.

The Film Stars' Method

This simple and scientific method of controlling the weight is the one used by film stars in Hollywood. It is essential that they keep slim and practically every important film player has a clause in her contract calling for a cancellation if she permits her weight to increase beyond a certain point. But at the same time, film stars must safeguard their health, for their work is the most strenuous of occupations!

Counting Calories Is Fun

In Hollywood they make a game of counting calories. You, too, will find it amusing, as well as beneficial to health and looks. And you will be rewarded by noting a drop in weight every time you step on the scales.

If Your Weight Is Normal Keep It That Way

It has been determined that the ideal weight—that is the weight that best promotes health and longevity—after thirty, is the normal weight for one's height at the age of thirty.

If you are approximately thirty and your weight is normal, you should send for my Calorie Chart and Reducing Bulletin and use it to help maintain your present weight!

If you are over thirty and overweight, you should not lose another day before sending for the bulletin so that you can begin at once to regain your normal weight by the safe, simple, scientific and comfortable method of counting calories.

As the pounds disappear you will feel as though you had stepped out of a prison of fat into a new world of physical freedom.

Questions Answered

Mrs. G. B., Jr.—There is absolutely no truth in the false notion that aluminum cooking utensils may adversely affect health. Numerous experiments have demonstrated that they are perfectly safe.

Miss A. G.—One tablespoon of cod-liver oil provides about 100 calories, which is equal in fuel value to one slice of bread, one medium potato, or three-fourths of a cup of cooked macaroni.

BOOKS IN BRIEF

O. Henry Tells Tale of 'Cop And Anthem'

By ELIZABETH C. JAMES

A DRY leaf fluttered into Soapy's lap. That would be the calling card of Jack Frost. In fact just last night Soapy had noticed that winter was approaching because three newspapers adroitly disposed did not keep out the chill as he lay on his favorite park bench. Soapy disliked the cold months, but with a little luck, he would manage.

Being an observant man, Soapy had learned long ago that there were two alternatives for him during the winter: Philanthropy or the Law. The former carried with it certain circumstances that interfered with a gentleman's privacy, as baths and such. So, Soapy had long favored the Law which did not meddle with his tastes as an individual.

Elizabeth James

Since he must do something at once about the cold weather, and since there was nothing to deter him now, he might as well begin at once. There were certain activities that Soapy knew carried ninety days on the Island, where there was heat and food, and clothing enough.

Soapy went into a not too respectable looking restaurant and ordered a pleasing dinner. When he had dined slowly and with precision, he announced that he had no money and suggested that the waiter call a cop. The next instant Soapy was gathering himself together off the sidewalk.

Soapy Is Luckless.

The second method would likely work. Picking up a brick he slammed it into a plate glass window. When the cop came, Soapy said "Here I am, I did it." The cop answered, "Who are you trying to kid, wise guy?" And was off to catch a man who was running after a street car.

Those were two of Soapy's best cards, but he still had a few up his sleeve. Across the street stood a modest looking girl, gazing at the winter styles. He sidled up to her, cleared his throat, and carried on the usual antics of a masher. She walked slowly along, Soapy after her. There was a cop nearby that Soapy was counting on. Finally the girl turned, caught Soapy's arm and whispered, "I would have come over sooner, but the cop was watching us and I had to figure it out." She hung onto him as to an old friend, but at the next corner Soapy bolted. He didn't want anything to do with women.

ONCE IN PRISON

William Sidney Porter was born in 1862 in Greensboro, N. C. O. Henry, his pen name, came later. As a young man he went to Austin, Texas, where he worked in a bank. It was there that the embezzlement of $1,150 occurred, a crime that has never been really cleared up. However, Porter was sentenced to serve five years in an Ohio penitentiary for the crime.

In prison he settled down to a concentrated program of writing. In 1903 he contracted with the New York World to do a story a week at $100 each.

When he died in 1910, his body was interred in Asheville, N. C. Of him the Encyclopaedia Britannica states, "The tragedy of his own life taught him a chivalrous tenderness for the unlucky."

Disturbing the peace is a sure one, thought Soapy, tugging at his coat to hold it closer, drunks and crazy people are always locked up. Accordingly he began his act, yelling and dancing around wildly. The cop watched a minute, and turning to the bystanders, he explained, "'Tis one of them Yale lads celebratin' the game. We've instructions to lave them be."

Fatalistic End.

Soapy was disheartened. What did it take to rate the three months on the Island? He mused over his possibilities, and like a homing pigeon, he rambled along the avenues toward Madison Square Garden. Presently he passed a cathedral, dark except for one window that was rimmed with light. Soapy looked, and then his ear caught the pulsing tones of a pipe organ. What in the world? An anthem, one that did things inside of Soapy. He thought of all the forbidden thoughts, of his mother, of when he was a little boy and had a respectable way of living. These thoughts upset him until the result was that Soapy gave up his idea of spending the winter on the Island. He would get a job, he would be somebody and show the world!

A familiar touch sent a shiver down his arm. Looking up he saw the broad face of a cop. "What you doin'?"

Soapy answered, "Nothin'."

"Then come along."

The Magistrate gave him three months on the Island on a charge of vagrancy.

Uncle Phil Says:

You'll Cherish the Smile

If you can make a person smile on you it is a greater victory than to make one laugh at your wit.

It sometimes happens that the quest for gold leads to the land of guilt.

Some are perpetually lamenting that they "are not understood"; and some are afraid they will be.

But Not Angry Enough

Usually a man is quite angry at the circumstances that prevent him from doing his best.

Everyone has the right of free speech, but the higher up he is, the less he'll use it.

"What passes for woman's intuition is often nothing more than man's transparency," says a critic.

Every Thorn Has Its Rose

Gold-brick fakers have entirely disappeared since the government segregated all the gold.

If your host and hostess want you to stay longer, you always know it.

Who wants to be "logical" with those they love?

LET'S TAKE A LESSON FROM THE SCANDINAVIANS

Since the dawn of history, beer has been the bulwark of moderation and sobriety.

You have only to consider the Scandinavian and other European countries to find proof of this! Beer has been their national beverage for generations and, today, they still maintain the highest percentage of sobriety among civilized nations.

So it was both wise and fortunate that our Congress offered beer as a substitute for prohibition. Wise because beer satisfies the normal human need for a stimulating beverage . . . fortunate because its mildness promotes moderation and sobriety.

But beer, in this instance, should not be confused with distilled spirits. By its very nature and process of manufacture, beer alone contains healthful vitamins. Made of top quality barley, corn, yeast, and pure water, beer has the purity and nutritional ingredients of bread. Scores of world-renowned physicians, including Dr. Wm. Geery Morgan, past president American Medical Association, Dr. E. A. Locke, Harvard Medical School, and Dr. W. R. Miles, Yale University testify to the healthfulness of beer and claim its mildness promotes temperance.

Minnesota can well take a lesson from the Scandinavian and other European countries. By promoting wider use of beer, Minnesota can also attain the true temperance desired by all.

Borderline Breezes

The following was taken from the daily bulletin "Borderline Breezes" issued daily at the Lake of the Woods Bible Camp last week.

Mrs. Rolland and Caroline Aspelin are the human alarm clocks of Nervig Nest. Caroline was so wound up last night for need of sleep she did not think she could wake up by three-thirty.

Wanted: Someone to out-talk me at night or to out-sleep me in the morning. Rev. T. C. L. Hanson.

Rev. Hanson's legs are so sore and stiff (from playing kitten-ball) he has to lift them very gingerly over the table benches one at a time.

We did not get details but we hear that Mrs. Hanson found her pillow in the water pail.

To settle a long standing dispute Beatrice and Evelyn Larson of Back-to Nature Cottage are twins.

Haaland Hut and Nervig Nest win top housekeeping honors today. (Many of the girls in these cottages were from Holt).

According to reports received here state highway No. 32 will be reoiled from near Middle River and thru Holt to a point near Steiner. The gravel has already been placed on the highway and work of mixing the oil will begin as soon as the weather stays dry and warm.

The farmers are now all busy with haying. According to reports the hay crop will be heavy this year because of the rain we have had in this area.

Geo. Karvonen, Supt. of the local school, returned here on Saturday from a two-day fishing trip in the lake region southeast of here.

The Marshall County Fair

County Fair days are soon here and residents of the Holt community are making plans to attend the bigger Marshall County Fair at Warren on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 7, 8, and 6. when the greatest program ever brought to this section of the Northwest will be presented.

Interest in the coming exposition is growing daily with hundreds of persons in Marshall and Northern Polk counties planning to enter exhibits to compete for the $1,500 in cash premiums which will be offered this year. The exhibits will feature livestock of all descriptions, garden vegetables, grains, grasses, baking, canning, sewing and fancy work. Premium lists may be secured by writing O. M. Mattson, secretary, at Warren.

Marshall county 4-H clubs will be on display with their projects during the three day exposition. The club exhibits, annually, take the spotlight at the fair and show what the young boys and girls of our farms are doing.

The big fair will open on Thursday July 7, with Childrens day when the fair management will award six stream-lined bicycles to children residing in Marshalll and Northern Polk counties. Tickets for the bicycle awards have been given to all school children. These tickets must be brought to the fair grounds entrance gates. During the day, all shows and rides on Dee Lang's Famous Shows Midway may be enjoyed by the children at one-half price until 6 p. m.

Each afternoon's program will feature Thrill Day attractions by Frank Winkley's suicide Club. Never before has a county fair witnessed an attraction like the sensational program this organization will present. Automobiles will crash into each other at 50 miles an hour. Another car will leap through the air, jumping completely over two other automobiles. Motorcycles will crash through walls of fire. Cars will be driven through exploding dynamite, others will roll over and over, end on end, at 60 miles an hour. Also motor cycle races.

Many Attend School Meeting

About 400 Marshall County public school officers met in the high school auditorium at Warren last Thursday for a school officers conference called by Nels M. Engen, county superintendent of schools. The conference was called so that public officials would have an opportunity to discuss and consider numerous changes in laws governing administration of school affairs.

A former Marshall county resident, O. R. Sande, represented the state department of education at the conference and discussed the various changes which have been made in regulations relating to school administration.

Those from here who attended from Dist. 35 were Gilbert Sanoden, H. O. Hanson and Olaf Ness. Many from outlying districts around Holt also attended.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Honestly now, what's your hurry? Have you ever been confronted by an officer of the law who asked you, "Where is the fire?" or, "What's your hurry?" Some countries handle speeders entirely differently from the way America does. In Jugoslavia traffic officicials don't ask questions. If an officers finds a speeder, he maneuvers the driver over to the curb and politely lets the air out of all four tires. No ticket is issued. Pumping air back into four tires leaves a lasting impression with any driver.

It is a good lesson in safety. Too many times people pass us fifty feet from a stop light which shows red, only to have to wait until they get the signal to go ahead. How silly, and how dangerous! It's smart to be careful.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Leiran of Thief River Falls, Mrs. L. Sagstuen and Raymond and Dorothy motored to Fertile Monday to attend funeral services for Arnold Bolstad, 16 year old son of Mr. and Mr. Ole Bolstad.

Lloyd Gilbertson and Myron Gunheim made a trip to Lake of the Woods Bible Camp near Baudette Sunday to take back a load of people who had spent the week there.

In the nation's worst railroad tragedy in years, approximately 40 passengers were killed when the Milwaukee road's crack "Olympian" train plunged into the flood waters of Custer creek near Miles City, Mont. ## The Captain of the Minerals

Nationally Known Food Authority Explains How to Include This Vital Food Element in the Daily Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City.

A FEW years ago there was an earthquake in the Far West. When the tremors were over, the frightened people looked in dismay upon the damage that had been done. In some places they were saddened by the loss of a great number of their buildings, and in one community, mingled with their sorrow — almost crowding it out of their emotions—was indignant ANGER. For they observed that their schools had suffered greater damage than any other group of buildings in the city.

On every side, the cry of indignation arose. It was all too plain that poor materials had gone into the construction of those schools which were supposed to house children in security.

The most vehement cries went up from the mothers, not only in that community, but all over the country. That is natural, for all mothers believe they have the children's welfare at heart. Unwittingly, however, they may be doing them irreparable harm by failing to feed them the foods that will construct sound bodies, able to withstand the stress and strain of life.

Calcium Starvation

The mineral calcium is to the human body what steel and stone are to a building. It is necessary to construct the bony framework. The mother who fails to consume adequate calcium before her baby is born, or fails to give the child adequate calcium throughout the growing years, is as guilty as the contractor who constructs a school building of poor materials.

Without sufficient calcium, the bones become soft and porous. They break easily and knit slowly after they are broken. They may bend and twist during growth, so that the child who is a victim of calcium deficiency may become bow-legged and deformed, with a malformed chest or enlarged forehead. Rickets—that horrible deficiency disease which causes stunted mis-shapen bodies—may develop. And so may tetany—another scourge of childhood.

Crooked Defective Teeth

The teeth, too, depend upon calcium for the soundness of their structure. When this precious mineral is inadequately provided, the baby teeth may soon decay; the permanent teeth may come in crowded and unsightly—and quickly develop cavities.

There are also many other ways that calcium deficiency may handicap your children. For this mineral is intimately concerned with all the body processes. It increases the strength and pulsations of the heart; helps the blood to coagulate in case of injury, thus effectively aiding in preventing hemorrhage. It strengthens the resistance of the body in fever and other diseases. It tones up the nervous system, lessening nervous tension.

Adults have a vital need for calcium. A lack of this mineral not only results in defective teeth, but may also be responsible for nervousness, quivering and twitching of the muscles and defective heart action.

To be normal, the full-grown human body must contain more calcium than any other mineral element. Yet, every individual is, of necessity, born calcium-poor. For if the bones were as rigid as they must eventually become, the ordeal of birth would be too difficult for both mother and child.

Easily Lost From Body

The homemaker's task of providing adequate calcium is complicated by the fact that the body loses large amounts of calcium every day, and this loss is greater during sickness, especially in fever or when one is worried, overworked or has taken too strenuous exercise.

Outstanding nutritionists unanimously agree that the American diet is more deficient in calcium than in any other element. And it is squarely up to the mothers and homemakers to correct this tragic state of affairs, which is undermining their own efficiency and threatening the present health and future happiness of their children.

How to Obtain Calcium

Milk is an outstanding source of calcium. That is why it should form the cornerstone of every balanced diet. Cheese, which is milk in concentrated form, is likewise notable in this respect, and one and one-fourth ounces of American Cheddar cheese are the approximate equivalent of an eight-ounce glass of milk. Leaf and stem vegetables are richer in calcium than other vegetables or fruits, but while their calcium has been found to be well-absorbed by adults, it is not so readily available to children.

Among the vegetables, however, there is a wide variation, turnip tops and dandelion greens providing unusually large amounts.

List of Calcium-Rich Foods

I have prepared a list of foods rich in calcium which I shall gladly send to homemakers upon request. I urge every woman to write for this list and use it in planning the daily diet of herself, her husband and children.

You really need such a list in order to avoid the grave consequences of calcium deficiency, for so many of our common foods are calcium poor that it is possible for a diet to be abundant and varied, and still be inadequate in respect to calcium.

The list of calcium-containing foods will help you do a perfect job of building strong, fine bodies for your children.

There is no joy like the joy of creating perfect, healthy children. The architect and the sculptor stand in awe before the realization of their dreams. But you, the mothers of children, the builders of their bodies, you are the mightiest of all. A diet adequate in calcium, for you and your children, will help you build beautifully, wisely and well. Your reward will be the joy, the pride, the heart-warming satisfaction of having accomplished a worthwhile purpose.

Make a Pattern For a Slip Cover

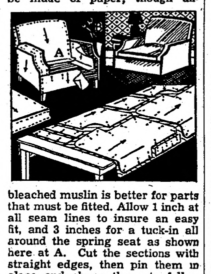
By Ruth Wyeth Spears

THE most economical way to cut a slip cover is to make a pattern first. Do this before you buy the material, then fold several bed sheets the width of the fabric you wish to buy, and lay the pattern pieces on them to estimate the amount of goods needed.

Some of the pattern pieces may be made of paper, though unbleached muslin is better for parts that must be fitted. Allow 1 inch at all seam lines to insure an easy fit, and 3 inches for a tuck-in all around the spring seat as shown here at A. Cut the sections with straight edges, then pin them in place and shape them to follow the lines of the chair as at B. Also mark each pattern piece with an arrow, as shown, to indicate which way the grain of the goods should run. The lower sketch shows the pattern pieces pinned on the slip cover material. Brush fringe accents the main lines of this slip cover. The top of the fringe is stitched in place at the same time the seams are sewn.



NOTE: Every homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' book SEWING, for the Home Decorator. It contains forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slip covers and curtains; also dressing tables; lampshades and other useful articles for the home. Price 25 cents postpaid (coin preferred). Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St. Chicago, Ill.

ASK BUSINESS' HELP

Five 'Spending' Chiefs Tell Their Recovery Hopes . . . Government Agencies Warned to Avoid Politics

John Roosevelt, youngest son of the President, and his bride, the former Anne Lindsay Clark, leaving the old church in Nahant, Mass., where they were married.

Ask Business to Help

FIVE of the officials who will have most to do with carrying out the President's spending-lending drive went on the air in a nation-wide broadcast and urged that business co-operate with the administration in restoring permanent recovery. These speakers were Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, acting PWA Administrator Howard A. Gray, United States Housing Administrator Nathan Straus and Brig. Gen. John J. Kingman, acting chief of United States army engineers.

Harry Hopkins

Outlining his plans for use of federal funds allocated his agency, Hopkins said that the purchase of materials alone for WPA projects will give indirect, full-time private jobs to 250,000 workers, in addition to relief jobs for the unemployed.

"And so the WPA money flows, like the blood in the human body, giving life and strength to the economic system all the way from its toes to the top of its head," he said.

Secretary Wallace said that under the new agricultural legislation the farmer is in good shape to do his part in the recovery drive.

"If business would only start producing as it knows how to produce, the market for agricultural products would expand during the next year to a point which would help amazingly in bringing about a solution of the farm problem," he said.

Gray, who has been administering PWA affairs in the absence of Interior Secretary Ickes, said that the spending of money set aside for public works under the recovery program should result in industry's receiving $1,000,000,000 in orders in the next two years.

Straus outlined his agency's program of slum-clearance and low-cost housing and said that it will result in increased employment and the "creation of that finest and most needed of all commodities—better homes for Americans."

The administration's flood control program, General Kingman said, will produce "equally beneficial results not alone in the reduction of human suffering," but in keeping open business channels and providing additional employment.

Terrible Train Wreck

OLYMPIAN, crack passenger train of the Milwaukee road bound from Chicago to Tacoma, Wash., crashed through a flood-weakened trestle over Custer creek, near Saugus, Mont., and at least 40 persons perished, most of them being drowned in a submerged tourist sleeper. About 65 others were injured.

This was the worst railroad wreck in America in recent years, and it sadly marred the safety record of the Milwaukee road which had not lost a paying passenger in accidents in the previous 20 years.

The eleven-car train ran into a cloudburst near Saugus but the crew had no warning of the trestle's condition until the engine plunged through the span, dragging several cars after it.

Wage Law Effects

STRAIN of the new wage and hour law on industry, say labor experts in Washington, will be eased by the existing unsettled economic conditions. They size up the situation thus:

At industry's present pace not more than 200,000 wage earners in manufacturing industries would get more pay.

The big high speed industrial machines, such as automobile plants, hardly will be touched by the law.

It will affect certain garment factories and a very small number of textile mills.

It will affect the fertilizer industry of the South and southern sawmills.

Even when business is as good as it was last summer, unofficial estimates indicate that only about 260,000 factory workers would be affected by the 25 cent wage minimum of the law, and somewhat more than 1,000,000 workers would find their hours shortened by a 44 hour weekly limit, effective next October.

At the outset the law's effect will be to improve "the worst conditions" in certain industries engaged in interstate commerce, the economists believe.

Child labor provisions will affect mainly scattered minors working at odd jobs in various mills and factories.

'Keep Out of Politics'

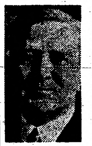
SENATOR MORRIS SHEPPARD of Texas and the senate campaign expenditures investigating committee of which he is chairman has directed all government agencies to take no part in primary and election campaigns. And it has issued warning that persons suspected of improper political conduct will be exposed and cited for criminal prosecution.



Senator Sheppard

The committee at its first meeting adopted a resolution pledging that its investigations will be conducted with "vigor and vigilance" without fear or favor and without partisanship. The warning against use of improper tactics was directed first to all candidates for senatorial offices, their friends and aids. It was then extended to all government agencies.

Besides Sheppard on the committee are Senators Harrison, David I. Walsh, Joseph O'Mahoney and Wallace White.

German Spies Indicted

AFTER five months of investigation by government agents, 18 persons were indicted as spies by a federal grand jury in New York. Moreover, no secret was made of the fact that they are charged with being spies for the German government, engaged in obtaining information concerning our national defense.

Four of the defendants are in this country and will be tried here. The others, including three German officers, are abroad.

John Roosevelt Weds

IN A little old stone church at Nahant, Mass., John Roosevelt, youngest son of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, and Anne Lindsay Clark were made man and wife. After the ceremony there was a reception in the old Nahant club, and the young couple then started on a honeymoon trip to Campobello Island, N. B., the location of the President's summer home.

Calls Germany Welsher

GERMANY insists she is not liable under international law for the foreign debts of the former government of Austria. In reply Secretary of State Hull says, in polite language, that Germany is a welsher. His note on the subject, delivered by Ambassador Hugh Wilson, contends that Germany, when it absorbed Austria, assumed full responsibility for Austria's post-war debts to America and other liabilities totaling about $50,000,000.

The fountain cost $1,000,000 and is set in a garden 600 feet square with three basins rising in a central pool surrounded by four minor pools. When in full play the fountain flows about 5,500 gallons of water a minute, one column rising to a height of 75 feet. It is beautifully illuminated at night in five different colors.

Another Auto Accident

Last Monday night on the way from Newfolden, the car in which Herman Schenkey, his brother, Gladys Anderson, Hazel Furr and Lester Rodahl were riding, went into the ditch. Miss Anderson and Miss Furr, who were injured in the crash, were taken to the hospital in Thief River Falls immediately. Miss Anderson returned to her home Tuesday, while Miss Furr, whose injuries were more serious, is expected to remain in the hospital for another week. Herman Schenkey said that the headlights were stolen in Newfolden and that they were driving home with only the parking lights when the accident occurred.

Nine Caribou Are Brot To State

To perpetuate the fast dwindling herd of Woodland caribou in Minnesota, nine animals have been brought from Alberta, Canada, by the Farm Security Administration, and being kept on the Red Lake Game Refuge in Beltrami County.

Seven of the imported animals are calves, and will be kept in semi-confinement for some months until they are large and strong enough to take care of themselves in the wild.

The Red Lake Refuge is the last stand of the woodland Caribou in the U. S. At the time the original band was last seen there, were only four animals remaining.

The Farm Security Administration is working in cooperation with the Minnesota division of Game and Fish, and it is expected that the new stock, kept under strict supervision, will return the caribou to the wilderness area, according to Harry E. Speakes, Director of the Division.

Mr. and Mrs. Hilmer Moberg attended the Ostfoldlaget which was held at Finley, N. Dak. on June 25 and 26, visiting old friends along the way, and returning home Monday of last week.

Clean Up Rural Box Week

Unserviceable and unsightly rural mail boxes both retard the delivery of mail and detract from the natural scenic beauty of the highway. Particularly to be deplored are the nonregulation, old type, top-opening boxes, as well as makeshift receptacles which expose mail to the elements.

It is the desire of the U. S. Post Office Department not only to csrrect the above-mentioned unsatisfactory situation but to encourage all rural mail patrons generally to possess pride in their boxes, both in the manner of erection, neat stenciling and tidy apyearance.

To help accomplish these desirable objectives the U. S. Post Office Department is designating the week of August 1 as "Clean Up Rural Box Week."

Special opportunities will be given visitors to see the livestock and poultry work before the dinner hour. Field tests of corn varieties for mature corn, and extensive planting of fruits can be sbserved on the newly acquired farm west of the school campus.

The summer meeting of the Red River Valley Crops and Soils Association will be held in conjunction with the Crops and Soils Day program. ## The Marshall County Fair

Featuring the most elaborate program of entertainment and educational events ever presented in this section of the Northwest, the stage is all set for the opening of the 32nd Annual Marshall County Fair at Warren, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 7, 8 and 9.

Hailed as the Bigger Marshall County Fair, directors of the association have spared no effort or expense in bringing to the exposition the best the entertainment world will afford.

Lew Rosenthal's Tenth Anniversary program of grandstand, circus and novelty acts collected from all parts of Europe and America will be one of the many highlights of the fair. The evening performance will feature the Merry-Go-Round Revue with a cast of 30 people including chorus, comedians and specialty dancers. A stage setting, the like of which has never before been exhibited in the Northwest, will serve as a background for the evening performances.

Thrill Days presented by Frank Winkley's Suicide Club, featuring sensational stunts with automobiles and motorcycles will feature each afternoon's performance. This oganization is reputed to be one of the very best in the business and has been brought to Marshall County at big expense in an effort to provide the people of this section with the best in entertainment features.

Grant Moore's ten piece colored swingband will furnish the music for the Wigwam Dance Pavilion during the three nights of the Fair. Here dance lovers will be provided with exceptionally fine music, while the Wigwam floor is recognized as one of the best in this section.

Children under 15 years of age will be admitted free to the grounds every day during the Fair when accompanied by an adult. This change in age limit was made to make it easier for parents to bring their entire families to the Fair. The exposition is held annually for the benefit of young and old and no one should stay home because of having a large family.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Olson and family were visitors at the Paul Olson home last week.

How long is it since you had the steering mechanism on your car checked? Is your automobile hard to steer?

One of a number of conditions may be responsible. The tires may be soft; the steering gear may need grease; tie-rod bushings may need lubrication. Many other items should be checked, but these are some of the most important.

If, after checking these possibilities, you find the difficulty still there, better consult a mechanic. Very probably some part of the steering mechanism on the front axle is bent.

It is absolutely essential that steering apparatus be in perfect working order at all times.

It's smart to be careful.

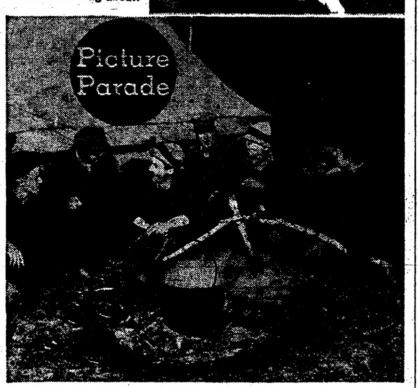
Though America's logging industry has been on the downgrade several years because of heavy imports, this spring one of the largest timber log drives ever run in New England took place near Machias, Maine. Over 4,000,000 feet of lumber—pine, hemlock and spruce—was floated down the river to the Whitfield mill 45 miles south. Lumberjacks work hard all winter but the drivers have more adventure during the drive when they must balance themselves on swirling logs, pry open jams and sleep in a different "home" every night. They wear caulk shoes with spikes.

There's little waste time or waste space in the camp's kitchen where Cook Leonard Elwell prepares 240 meals a day, moves 35 miles down the river and sets up his equipment again. To supply 60 men participating in the last drive he cooked 500 doughnuts, 500 sugar cookies, 200 biscuits, 16 loaves of bread, boiled four hams and cooked 50 pounds of beef, all on the above stove. And it was plenty good, if the young driver at the right knows what he's smiling about!



They eat four meals a day, these drivers, and when the day is over they sit around the campfire and chat about one of America's most colorful industries, logging, a business that demands hardy men who like outdoor life and isolation. Gone forever is the heyday of America's logging industry with its Paul Bunyan and blue oxen, but the colorful picture of north woods life will live forever in song and story.

Consent Lost Upon John In His Great Anxiety

John felt that he could never ask Pamela to be his wife.

True, he loved her as he had never loved anyone else before, but then she was an angel, while he had many little weaknesses of which no angel would ever approve.

Pamela, on the other hand, spent her time thinking that it was high time John spoke up!

One night he came to the point. "Pamela, Pamela," he urged, "will you marry me?"

"You bet," she replied briskly.

"I know, darling," he answered, ashamed. "But if you'll only say, 'Yes,' I'll promise never to back another horse!"

Rose as Rent

Henry William Stiegel, the glassmaker, erected Zion Lutheran church at Manheim, Pa., and donated it in consideration of a nominal rental, one item of which was one red rose yearly. Every second Sunday in June the ceremony of placing the rose on the altar is observed at Manheim.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Persistency

All men have fits and starts of nobleness: but the characteristic of true heroism is its persistency.

CHANCE FOR RECOVERY

President's Call for Help Indicates Compromise . . . He Demands Election of Liberals to Congress

Speediest ship in our navy, the destroyer McCall, was commissioned at the Mare Island navy yard in California. The McCall, first privately built navy vessel since 1921, has a specified speed of 38½ knots, but in recent tests was reported to have averaged 42 knots. It carries four 5-inch guns and four quadruple torpedo tubes and is especially fitted for quick attacks on capital ships.

Signs of Compromise

THERE are distinct indications of compromise and co-operation in the American picture, and hopes for restored prosperity are somewhat revived. The stock market has become unusually active, and private enterprise is awakening. Unfreezing of three billions in stored-up credit is expected to result from new banking regulations ordered by the President. Thousands of contracts for approved projects to cost almost $500,000,000 have been sent to all parts of the country by the Public Works administration.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his latest radio address to the nation, said: "In simple frankness and in simple honesty, I need all the help I can get," and it seems that the people are ready to give that help if the administration will do its part.

Notable in the President's talk was the admission that mistakes have been made not only by his opponents and by industry and labor, but also by government leaders. He sharply attacked reactionaries in business, blaming them for much of the current depression.

Asserting his continued belief in individual enterprise and the profit motive, he criticized the recent congress for failing to enact his program for government reorganization and legislation to aid the financially depressed railroad industry. At the same time, however, he said the legislators "achieved more for the future good of the country than any congress between the end of the World war and the spring of 1933."

Wants Liberals Elected

MOST of the President's radio speech was frankly political. He declared himself the leader of the liberals and held that, as such, it was his privilege to intervene in state primary and election campaigns for the purpose of insuring the defeat of those whom he characterized as conservatives, the opponents of his policies.

This aroused the indignation of many Democratic statesmen like Senators Burke of Nebraska and King of Utah.

"I believe the people in the districts and states will resent the President's interference," Burke said. "If we were to follow the course he has suggested, we would all be goosestepping behind a leader no matter how beneficent that leader may be. I do not approve of that course."

Senator King asserted the President should not use the great advantage he has in controlling the purse strings of the huge spending program. "People who have fought for the Democratic party for a great many years do not like interference in their state affairs by outsiders," he said. "I do not believe the President should meddle in the primary elections of the Democratic party or any other party."

General opinion was that Mr. Roosevelt had widened the split in the Democratic party and by his words had placed the stamp of his approval on the attempted "purge" directed by Corcoran, Cohen and others of his advisers.

Latest War Scare

BOMBING of loyalist Spanish cities and of British ships in Spanish ports by Generalissimo Franco's insurgent planes led directly to the most recent war scare in Europe. It was reported in London that the loyalists had threatened to bomb Italian and German cities if Franco did not call off his airmen, and in Italy it was asserted that this probably would be regarded as an act of war and would be the cause for appropriate action.

The rumors were denied, but their dissemination may have done some good, for information reached the British government that Franco had ordered his aviators to stop bombing British merchant vessels.

However, this news was followed immediately by dispatches saying two more British ships had been bombed in the ports of Valencia and Alicante, several seamen being killed or wounded.

Swedes Celebrate

AMERICANS of Swedish descent by the thousand and many from Sweden gathered at Wilmington, Del., for the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the landing in America of the first Swedes and Finns. From the old country came Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf with a large party, but he was confined to his suite on the liner Kungsholm by illness. His place was taken by his son, Prince Bertil.

Prince Bertil

The principal event of the opening ceremony was the presentation of a monument erected by Sweden on the landing site. The presentation was made by Prince Bertil and accepted by President Roosevelt. Then the President presented the monument to Gov. Richard McMullen for the state of Delaware.

After the monument ceremony there was a lawn party attended by Crown Princess Louise.

The celebration was continued for four days in Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, parts of which states were embraced in the New Sweden founded in 1638 by a company of 150 Swedes and Finns sent to America by Gustafus Adolphus.

Mustn't Seize Hainan

THE British and French envoys in Tokyo warned Japan that any occupation of Hainan, Chinese island off the south coast of China, would be met by joint Franco-British action. The island, which lies near French and British trade routes, was bombed by Japanese flyers.

Germany is recalling the Germans who have been acting as advisers to the Chinese army, and diplomats believe Germany may now give active aid to Japan.

Ireland Installs Hyde

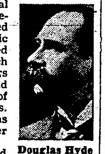
IRELAND'S first president, in the person of Dr. Douglas Hyde, was installed in St. Patrick's hall, Dublin castle, where former viceroys held their social functions. The ceremony was conducted entirely in Gaelic and was witnessed by state and church officials, members of parliament and representatives of foreign countries. Among the last was American Minister John Cudahy.



Douglas Hyde

Dr. Hyde read and signed a declaration in which he promised to defend the constitution and dedicate himself to the service of the people of Ireland. Prime Minister De Valera made a speech in which he said:

"You are now our president, freely chosen under our own laws, inheriting authority and entitled to the respect which Gaels ever gave to rightful chiefs. Not all the territory of Ireland is at the moment under your sway, but the justice of our claim and the tenacity of the Gaels will set that right."

President Hyde has been a poet, historian and educator. He is the son of a protestant clergyman and it is hoped he will bring about a union of Roman Catholic Ireland and Protestant northern Ireland.

For Naval Expansion

IMPETUS was given the naval expansion program with PWA allotments of $27,883,000 for the enlargement, extension and remodeling of existing plants and facilities of the navy department.

With orders for full speed ahead the navy department said that 113 projects, approved by Mr. Roosevelt, will be under way by August 15. Among the projects are power plant improvements, foundry building, high frequency radio station, fleet moorings, turret assembly facilities, improvements to ship building ways, structural assembly, electric and sheet metal shops, water storage, railroad tracks, noncommissioned officers' quarters, storage buildings and other improvements.

Some for Every State

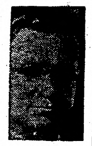
NO SOONER had President Roosevelt signed the pump priming measure than the flood of federal money was released. The Public Works administration of which Secretary Ickes is the head, made public two lists of grants and loans covering 590 projects in every state in the union with a total estimated cost of $148,795,895.



Secretary Ickes

Four more lists were ready, and these, PWA officials said, would complete the "first push" toward a $2,000,000,000 construction program to provide work and stimulate industry. Officials further estimated that these initial groups of projects may run as high as 1,500 or 2,000 with a cost of $600,000,000.

Federal grants under the PWA procedure cover 45 per cent of the cost and, when a PWA loan is made, 55 per cent. The difference between the estimated overall cost of the projects and the sum of loans and grants made by PWA is supplied by the various applicants.

Fish Attacks Hamilton

HEATED discussion over immediate control of campaign funds among members of the Republican national executive committee, meeting in Washington, gave Rep. Hamilton Fish of New York an opportunity to renew his fight on National Chairman John Hamilton, whose removal he demanded.

Rep. Fish

With Hamilton out of power, Fish said, the Republicans would win 10 senate seats and 100 house seats. With Hamilton at the helm, he warned, Republican gains would be reduced by half.

Rep. Joe Martin of Massachusetts and Sen. John Townsend of Delaware, chairmen, respectively, of the house and senate G. O. P. campaign committees, have demanded allotment of funds from the national committee and exclusive control of their expenditure. Hamilton has resisted these demands.

Representative Bertrand Snell of New York, Republican leader in the house, told the committee that he intended to retire from public life and would not seek re-election this fall.

Group for Labor Survey

NINE men and women were appointed by the President as members of a special commission that will study the workings of the British labor disputes law and Swedish labor relations. Most of them already are in Europe ready to begin their work.

The group is composed of Lloyd K. Garrison, dean of the University of Wisconsin law school; Robert Watt, American Federation of Labor representative; Gerald Swope, president of the General Electric company; Henry I. Harriman, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; William H. Davis, chairman of the New York labor mediation board; Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, regional director of social security for New York; Charles R. Hook, president of the American Rolling Mills company; Miss Marion Dickerman, principal of Todhunter school, New York, and William Ellison Chalmers, assistant American labor commissioner in Geneva.

Louis K.O.'s Schmeling

JOE LOUIS of Detroit, the "Brown Bomber," stands the undisputed heavyweight champion of the world. His amazing victory over Max Schmeling of Germany in the Yankee stadium at New York gave him that status. In less than one round the challenger was hammered to the floor three times by the crashing blows of Louis, and his seconds threw the towel into the ring, for the German was quite helpless. The referee declared Louis the winner by a technical knockout.

The loser said his defeat was caused by a blow over the kidney. X-ray examination of the German after the battle showed a projection from a vertebra was broken. The blow was not a foul for it was not struck in a clinch.

Eighty thousand persons witnessed this epochal battle, the shortest heavyweight championship bout in history. Louis got 40 per cent of the gate and 20 per cent went to Schmeling.

C. Houston Goudiss Noted Food Authority Explains What Is Meant by CORRECT NUTRITION

Describes How to Construct a Balanced Diet, So Essential to Maintain Optimal Health

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York City.

TO SOME families, a summons to the dinner table means nothing more than a chance to satisfy hunger. To others, it represents an opportunity to gratify the palate, sometimes to the extent of overtaxing the digestive system.

Neither of these extremes fulfills the true function of food, which is to provide adequately but not to excess, for growth, maintenance and repair of the body.

Food May Fail to Feed

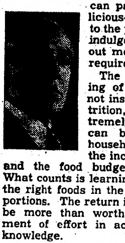
You can satisfy hunger without providing correct nutrition. You can partake of delicious-tasting foods to the point of overindulgence — without meeting bodily requirements.



The mere spending of money will not insure good nutrition, for extremely poor diets can be found in households where the income is large and the food budget is ample. What counts is learning to provide the right foods in the correct proportions. The return in health will be more than worth the investment of effort in acquiring this knowledge.

A Balanced Diet

Science has discovered what foods are necessary to help build top health and keep us 100 per cent fit. The amount of food required by a man for a day's work can be accurately determined. We know that a specific disease may be produced by one diet and cured by another; that growth can be influenced through changes in the quality of the dietary; that old age may be deferred by choosing the food with care.

We know that the body is a working machine which never stops but may slow down or get out of order unless the daily diet includes every element, every mineral, every vitamin needed to maintain health and avoid the deficiency diseases.

Seven Essentials

There are seven factors to be considered in planning a balanced diet. Protein for building body tissue and repairing the millions of cells that are worn out daily. Carbohydrates to produce quick heat and energy. Fats—a more compact form of fuel, which are also essential in a satisfactory diet. Minerals which serve both as builders and regulators of body processes. The six vitamins, A, B, C, D, E and G, that also act as regulators and prevent a number of deficiency diseases. Water—which serves as a vehicle by which food is carried to the tissues. And cellulose or bulk—required for the normal functioning of the intestinal tract.

Danger in Omitting One Food Substance

The homemaker who fails to take every one of these factors into consideration is depriving her husband of the opportunity to develop his greatest efficiency. Moreover, she may be robbing her children of their birthright. During every day of childhood, the body is being built, and defects in body structure are likely to arise if the child is improperly nourished. It is then that disease and disability make their appearance as a result of faulty nutrition. How tragic to deprive the young body of substances so necessary to its well being.

How to Check the Diet for Balance

Perhaps you are like the homemakers who tell me that they do not know a protein from a carbohydrate. Or it may be that while you understand the difference, you do not know what quantities should be included in the diet each day.

To simplify your task of serving balanced menus at every meal, I have prepared a Homemaker's Chart for Checking Nutritional Balance. In convenient chart form, it shows what foods should be included in the diet every day and gives the standard amount for each food. There are also skeleton menus outlined by food classifications, which enable you to plan balanced menus for every meal by making a choice from each group of required foods.

I urge every homemaker to write for this chart and use it daily. Then you won't make such common mistakes as serving a dried legume as a vegetable at a meal in which meat is used, which tends to concentrate too much protein in one meal; or choosing a too-heavy dessert following a main course that is overly rich in carbohydrates.

60 Per Cent Carbohydrates

Carbohydrates should form at least 60 per cent of the supply of food fuel. Rarely are menus deficient in carbohydrates, because they are so widely distributed in such common foods as cereals, bread, potatoes, macaroni products, sweets, and sweet fruits and vegetables, such as oranges, grapes, apples and peas.

Fats should supply about 20 per cent of the caloric content of the diet. They are obtained from butter, margarine, cream, egg yolk, salad dressings, vegetable oils and the fat of meats.

A protein food should be provided at each meal. Meat, poultry, fish, eggs, cheese, milk and most nuts supply complete protein. Cereals and legumes furnish incomplete protein which may be supplemented by the complete protein of milk.

The Protective Foods

It is essential that the diet should contain an abundance of minerals and vitamins which are furnished by the protective foods—milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables.

Nutritional Balance

PLANNING a balanced diet will cease to be a puzzle if you send for the Homemaker's Chart for Checking Nutritional Balance, offered free, by C. Houston Goudiss.

It lists the foods and the standard amounts that should be included in the daily diet, and includes skeleton menus for breakfast, dinner and lunch or supper, to guide you in selecting the proper foods in each classification.

A postcard is sufficent to bring you this valuable aid to good menu planning. Just ask for the Nutrition Chart. Address C. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th St., New York City

Cellulose or bulk is obtained from fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals. Water comes from juicy fruits, succulent vegetables, milk and other beverages, as well as the water that is consumed as a beverage.

To provide adequate amounts of the seven food essentials at every meal—to avoid the mistake of serving too much of one type of food and too little of another—should be the worthy aim of every homemaker. You will find the task considerably easier if you send for the Homemaker's Chart. Tack it up in your kitchen or in the room where you plan your menus, and use it to check the nutritional balance of every meal you prepare.

If you faithfully follow the food program outlined in the chart, you will help to assure your family of correct nutrition. This is the most priceless gift you could bestow upon them. For nutrition is the architect that draws the plans of human destiny. In providing the right foods, you lay a firm foundation for health on which to rear a life of happiness and success.

Questions Answered

Mrs. A. G.—Prunes are a fine natural laxative food for those in normal health. They furnish vitamins A, B and G. But they must not replace oranges or tomatoes as they do not supply vitamin C.

A. F. B.—When thorough chewing is impossible, food can be finely minced or put through a sieve, to make it easily digestible.

Mrs. F. C. T.—Dried figs contain from 60 to 70 per cent sugar and 4 to 5 per cent protein. They are a fine energy food.

Mrs. G. L.—There is evidence that a lack of vitamin A more quickly affects the eyes of children than adults. However, both children and adults require generous amounts of this vitamin to help maintain healthy eyes. A shortage may affect the tear glands causing a failure of secretion and dryness. The membrane becomes sensitive and inflamed, and the lids may swell.

For Tea and For Tennis

TWO of the most important things for midsummer are: a sleeveless dress of the most casual sort for sports and daytime, and a cool dress with cape or jacket, to wear on the street and for afternoons. The two here suggested represent the very best of these types. Make them yourself, in fabrics and colors of your own choosing, and rejoice in the knowledge that you have some very individual new clothes, and got them very economically! Each pattern includes a detailed sew chart.

Sleeveless Sports Frock.

Even if you never take a tennis racquet in your hand, you'll enjoy having this cool, classic dress for summer daytimes. In pique, linen, seersucker or gingham, it will look and feel so cool and fresh! Perfectly straight and plain, it has darts at the waistline to make it fit with becoming slimness. This is a diagram pattern—practically nothing to make! In just a few hours you'll have it all ready to button on at your shoulders.

Afternoon Cape Ensemble.

With or without the cape, this dress with lifted waistline to flatten the midriff, is a charming, slenderizing style. The cape is a darling—puffed high at the shoulders, and made with arm slits so that it won't be always slipping off your shoulders. Make this design in georgette, chiffon, linen, or in a pretty combination of plain or printed silk, and you'll have a very distinguished, expensive-looking ensemble.

The Patterns.

Pattern No. 1544 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20; 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards of 39 inch material for the dress; 2¼ for the cape; to line cape, 2¼ yards.

Pattern No. 1546 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20; 40 and 42. Size 14 requires 3 yards of 35 inch material. 3½ yards bias binding to trim as pictured.

BE SURE OF WHEN TO VACCINATE

—Prepared by American Foundation for Animal Health

There is a right time and a wrong time to vaccinate pigs against hog cholera. Failure to recognize this fact may cause the hog raiser costly losses.

The most dependable time to vaccinate is about two to four weeks after weaning. The pigs then do not require so large a dose of serum and virus, and if they are given the "double-treatment," the immunity against cholera will generally last throughout their lifetime.

Sometimes, when there is cholera danger in the vicinity, it may become necessary to vaccinate before the pigs are weaned. In this case, they should be left with the sows at least two weeks longer. This prevents the pigs being doubly-weakened by going through both weaning and vaccination at the same time.

Above all, pigs should be in a healthy condition when vaccinated. Enteritis is one of the most common causes of losses, following vaccination. It should be definitely determined that this condition is not present in the swine, before they are vaccinated.

Wormy pigs are a bad risk to vaccinate. The same is true of swine which are badly infested with mange. These conditions should be cleared up before immunization is attempted.

Of course, it is difficult for the layman at any time to tell with certainty, whether his hogs are in condition to undergo vaccination. Some symptoms are obscure and can be recognized only by the trained eye of the veterinarian. That is why it is always best to have a veterinarian go over a herd thoroughly, before vaccination is attempted. He can help put the hogs in condition, if they are not up to par. A check-up of this kind is the best insurance against unnecessary losses.

Only a veterinarian should be entrusted with the vaccination itself. For any layman to attempt it is to take a big chance with a valuable herd of hogs. Once the treatment has been given by a veterinarian, the farmer knows that his hogs are really immune from cholera, and that is what he wants, after all.

Road Being Oiled

The work of oiling the stretch of highway from four miles north of Middle River to about three miles south of Holt has gone ahead rapidly this week. Rain stopped activities for a little while, and increased the bad condition of the road; but now the road-surfacing is being completed.

Spread Hopper Poison Now

Grasshoppers are causing a large amount of damage to crops in Marshall County. Farmers from the townships of Bigwoods, Donnelly, Augsburg, Nelson Park, Foldahl, Alma, McCrea, Warrenton and Holt have reported quite extensive damage. The county has shipped in 3 cars of sawdust and one of bran which together with bait on hand from previous years should take care of the situation.

A mixing station has been set up at Argyle under W. P. A. where any farmer may go to obtain bait. This bait is free of charge to all persons who will spread it. By spreading poison now serious damage can be prevented in the future. The eggs laid this year determine the number of grasshoppers next year.

Spread poison now. Its free.

FARM ACCOUNTING REVEALS LESSONS

Principles of Sound Business Management That Apply to All Farms

An analysis made of detailed records kept by a group of Wisconsin farms revealed several important lessons and the principles of sound business management derived from them apply equally well to other farms, says an article in the Bulletin of the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association. The article says:

"Investment costs, including interest, depreciation, repairs, taxes and insurance, are approximately two-thirds of all farm costs. Furthermore, these costs are largely independent of the production program of the farm.

"This means that if a farmer cuts his production of crops or livestock, he increases his investment costs per unit of product produced, as a smaller number of units must then carry as large an expense load as before. This illustrates the importance, from the standpoint of costs, of operating a farm at or near capacity.

"Investment mistakes are more costly than many others because they cannot easily be corrected. If a farmer pays too much for his farm, his investment costs will be abnormally high as long as he owns it. If he constructs a $4,000 barn, when a $2,000 barn would have served his purpose, he will have excessive barn costs, year after year, during the entire service life of the structure.

"This emphasizes the importance of a knowledge of investment values and the specific investment requirements of individual farms.

Determining Real or False Economies

"In working for greater economy, it is essential that the farm manager be able to distinguish between a real and a false saving. This can be done only through a careful estimate of the contribution to income, over a period of time, of each item of expenditure. Only if more is saved in expense than will be lost in income, can a contemplated cut in expense be designated as a real saving.

"For example, dropping dairy herd improvement work may result in a yearly expense reduction. The question to decide is what effect the dropping of this work will have on the present and future income from the dairy herd. If the estimated loss in livestock receipts due to a lowered efficiency in feeding and breeding is greater than the original saving, then it would obviously be a false economy.

"Substantial savings can be effected on many farms through the use of more home grown garden produce and farm cured meats. Why pay out money for products of this kind that can be produced much cheaper at home? The money saved from the family food budget can be used for the purchase of many things that will make the farm home a more comfortable and pleasant place to live."

WPA Can Supply Workers

Farmers of Minnesota should have no troulbe securing harvest help this summer, cooperative action by the WPA and the State Employment Service indicates.

Every rural box holder in the state is in receipt of a letter from the Employment Service urging that application for qualified farm and harvest hands be made at the nearest local office. The letter states that workers for shocking grain, stacking hay driving binders, tractors or mowers can be supplied on short notice. The offices are located as follows: Bemidji, Virginia, Fergus Falls, St. Cloud, Montevido, Mankato and Rochester. Branch offices operate from these centers

With each letter was enclosed a copy of provisions in WPA regulations regarding farm employment. Those who accept and notify project foremen are given a preferred status when the temporary work is ended through no fault of their own.

"Through the working cooperation of these two agencies, the Minnesota farmer should have no complaint concerning summer help," R. C. Jacobson, acting WPA administrator, said today. "In the past complaints were made that WPA workers refused to leave the relief rolls and take temporary private employment. These workers no doubt had hesitated taking a short-time job because they feared they would be unable to return to WPA when the harvest season ended. However, our policy of re-employment protects them now."

WPA workers are expected to take any temporary private employment providing it is suitable to their training and experience, provides reasonable working conditions and pays much more for the same length of service as WPA, he pointed out. In farm employment, WPA has determined that because farm labor is paid generally on a daily or monthly basis, the hourly rate cannot be used as a basis of comparison. The rate per day or per month is used as a criterion. In the case of single workers without dependents, board and room, if furnished in addition to cash, is valued at a dollar a day. If the employment is by the month, board is valued at $22.00. If the WPA worker has dependents in his household, only the cash rate per day or per month is used as a comparison.

Traffic Fatalities Take Jump

If Minnesota is to capture in 1938 the national traffic safety award that it won in 1935, 1936 and 1937, drivers in the state will have to improve over the first five months of this year.

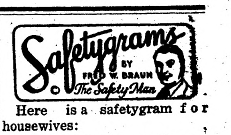
Up to June 1 this year, 26 more persons were killed on the streets and highways of the state than were slaughtered during the same period a year ago. During the first five months, 189 persons died horribly in motor vehicle crashes. Despite the raise in gasoline consumption and increase in auto milage traveled, this total raised the death rate per passenger mile 6.1 per cent over the first five months of 1937.

N. W. Elsberg, Minnesota Highway commissioner, and W. F. Rosenwald, state traffic engineer heading the department's safety division, deplore this raise and have issued a plea to the driving public to be more cautious, courteous and wideawake when using the roads of the state.

During the year Minnesota has witnessed an out of the ordinary number of traffic accidents in which wholesale death occurred. This fact, in Mr. Rosenwald's mind, accounts somewhat for the growing total of fatalities. Speed in most instances, the traffic engineer said has been the greatest factor in such accidents. An open winter with greater car travel in January and February also tended to swell the tragic toll, he said.

M. J. Murray, chief of the Highway patrol, has issued instructions to his force not to relax in their vigilence in attempting to lower the death rate. Mr. Elsberg, however, feels that regardless of what the department does in eliminating physical hazards and in law enforcement, the death rate will continue to mount unless the individual drivers will "help themselves to safety."

Einer Ness, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nels Ness, returned Saturday from St. Lukes hospital where he underwent a minor operation.



Here is a safetygram for housewives:

Delivery men as a rule are efficient and safe drivers, not just because of long training and intensive safety education, but because they have been taught to be patient, courteous and tolerant. Problems and questions that would try the patience of Job are put in their path a hundred times a day. For example:

Mrs. Smith asks for a special delivery, then forgets about it and leaves home.

Mrs. Brown asks the driver to wait while she inspects the goods, and then decides she doesn't want the package after all.

Mrs. Jones calls at five minutes to six and insists that the meat market deliver immediately an order of meat which she must have for dinner.

Mrs. White complains that the material was not what she ordered, so she takes her spite out on the driver.

Every one of these cases means more bookkeeping and more worry for the driver.

Help him by being just a little more considerath. Give him time to deliver your goods so he will not be rushing through the streets with the possibity of injuring people.

Its smart to be careful.

Attractive Designs For Sheer Cottons

THESE pretty styles will make you and your daughter feel fresh and cool, and look smart and charming. They have a summery, dressy effect, and yet they are not fussy. Make them yourself, and have something very individual as well as fashion-right. It's so easy; a detailed sew chart comes with each pattern.

Afternoon Dress With Shirring.

Shirring is one of the smartest details you can choose—it's used just this way in new and expensive models—on the shoulders, to give fullness over the bust, and at the sides only of the skirt. Thus your dress has animation and grace, and yet the front and back are plain and won't crush and muss when you sit down. In dimity, voile, organdy, handkerchief lawn or mull, with a youthful tie belt and frills of lace, this will be the most flattering frock you own.

Bolero Frock for Little Girls.

With or without the sleeveless bolero, this dress is a perfect darling for little girls! It's so simple and yet it has loads of style, with its very puffed sleeves, very full skirt, and little round collar. Notice how short the bolero is—that's the smart new kind. Make this up in dotted swiss, dimity, organdy or batiste, and trim it with ricrac, irish edging, or linen lace.

The Patterns.

1505 is designed for sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. Size 6 requires 2¼ yards of 35 inch material for dress alone. Three-eighths yard for bolero; ¼ yard for contrasting collar, if desired. Two and three-eighths yards is required for trimming bolero and collar.

1545 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 4⅞ yards of 35 inch material. Three yards of lace edging for neckline and sleeves. One and one-fourth yards ribbon for belt.

The judges report that they have never seen a finer collection of cakes assembled at one time. Because almost all the cakes were so exceptionally good, it was extremely difficult to choose the winners. But a most careful scoring system was used, and the cakes were checked for general appearance, including shape, size and crust, both color and character; flavor, including odor and taste; lightness; crumb, including texture, rated as to its fineness, tenderness, moistness and elasticity, color and grain.

C. Houston Goudiss has said that he regrets that every woman who entered the contest could not win a prize. He offers his congratulations to the winners and his thanks to the many other homemakers who helped to make this Cake Contest such a splendid success.

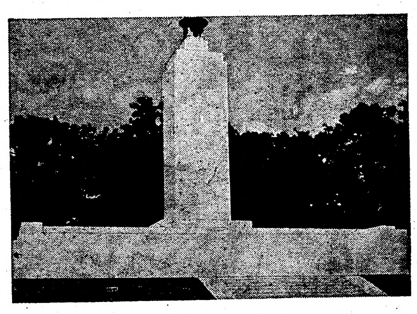
Veterans of Gettysburg Celebrate Together on Field of the Crucial Civil War Battle



Here is the new Peace Memorial in the Gettysburg National Military park which was dedicated by President Roosevelt during the celebration of the 75th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, in which veterans of the Northern and Southern armies participated. On the top of the shaft burns "The Flame of Eternal Peace."

Yanks and Johnny Rebs

SEVENTY-FIVE years after they faced each other in deadly conflict, some 2,000 old soldiers gathered in friendly concert to celebrate the great Battle of Gettysburg. The Stars and Stripes and the Stars and Bars flew side by side on the once bloody field, and the veterans of the Northern and Southern armies that fought there in one of history's biggest battles wandered together over the hills and meadows or sat in their tented city, exchanging reminiscences and renewing old friendships.

The war department had done everything possible to make the now feeble old warriors comfortable and safe, and the Pennsylvania National Guard and Boy Scouts attended carefully to their every want. There were feasts, parades, and military displays in plenty, but the veterans were not called on to do the entertaining. They were the entertained.

In the Gettysburg National Military park, comprising the battlefield, had been erected a beautiful peace memorial, and President Roosevelt was there to dedicate it on the afternoon of July 3. At the top of the monument's shaft is a burner for natural gas that supplies "The Flame of Eternal Peace." This was kindled by the President as the climax of the day's celebration.

There were no re-enactments of battle scenes.. The observance was all of peace, and peace and harmony of all the land breathed all through the talks made by Mr. Roosevelt and other speakers.

From a common platform Commander-in-Chief Overton H. Mennet of the Grand Army of the Republic and Commander-in-Chief John M. Claypool of the United Confederate Veterans spoke to their comrades.

Politics in Relief

CHAIRMAN SHEPPARD of the senate campaign funds committee put it up to the members of that body whether they should investigate charges that the WPA had increased relief wages in Kentucky and Oklahoma to aid the candidacies of Senators Barkley and Thomas.

Harry Hopkins

Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins denied that the WPA has been made a political instrument in Kentucky.

In a statement accompanied by exhaustive documentary evidence, Hopkins challenged 22 charges that his agency has subjected WPA workers to political pressure. He said the facts do not substantiate the charges, but reiterated his promises of summary and stringent action in all cases where political coercion could be proved.

"Every charge in which a WPA worker or official was named has been thoroughly investigated and documentary evidence conclusively establishes that out of more than a score of cases in which political activity was alleged, only two instances of improper conduct could be found," he said.

Hopkins' statement referred to a series of articles on the Kentucky senatorial primary fight between Alben W. Barkley, senate majority leader, and Gov. A. B. ("Happy") Chandler. The articles enumerated specific instances where, it was asserted, political pressure was being exerted on relief workers in behalf of Barkley.

Real Drive on Depression

WITH the start of the new fiscal year the administration began what the President calls "the real drive on depression." In the coming fiscal year relief agencies, army and navy, public works departments and federal lending corporations may pour out approximately $8,500,000,000. Some of this money is returnable to the treasury.

Administration officials said this huge sum—equal to more than $66 for every person in the nation—was needed because there are approximately 10,500,000 unemployed in the country. This estimate, furnished by a federal economist, was 4,500,000 higher than last October, when the recession's effect became visible.

Officials left little doubt they hope to get business positively on the upgrade by Labor day, although economists estimated it would take a year from the upturn to recover the ground lost since last summer.

Upholds Free Press

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT delivered two speeches in New York, on the site of the world's fair that is being built. First he spoke at the laying of the cornerstone of the federal building at the exposition after dabbling in cement with a silver trowel.

Then the Chief Executive appeared before a convention of the National Education association, and declared that the mission of America is to carry the torch of free thought and free learning in a world in which dictators have smothered the fires of freedom.

He did not mention Nazi Germany or Fascist Italy by name, but he condemned in most positive language such purges as burned libraries, exiled scientists, artists, musicians, writers and teachers, dispersed universities and censored news, literature and art.

"If in other lands the press is censored," Mr. Roosevelt declared, "we must redouble our efforts here to keep it free. If in other lands the eternal truths of the past are threatened by intolerance, we must provide a safe place here for their perpetuation."

In his address to the teachers the President warmly defended the spending of his administration on the ground that the outlays of federal money had increased national and human resources.

"The only real capital of a nation is its natural resources and its human beings," he said. "So long as we take care of and make the most of both of them we shall survive as a strong nation, a successful nation, and a progressive nation—whether or not the bookkeepers say other kinds of budgets are from time to time out of balance.

"This capital structure—natural resources and human beings—has to be maintained at all times. The plant has to be kept up and new capital put in yearly to meet increasing needs. If we skimp on that capital; if we exhaust our national resources and weaken the capacity of our human beings, then we shall go the way of all weak nations."

Strike at New York Fair

MORE than 6,000 workers were affected by a general strike of construction men at the New York world's fair, called by the Building Trades and Construction council, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor. All construction work was tied up except structural steel work. The strike was precipitated by a jurisdictional dispute.

Heads N. Y. Exchange

WILLIAM McCHESNEY MARTIN of a St. Louis brokerage firm and chairman of the New York Stock exchange since last May was elected president of the exchange at a salary of $48,000 a year. His selection was the final step in the reorganization of the executive personnel of the exchange which was brought about through the insistence of the securities and exchange commission and the "liberal" group within the exchange membership.

Rail Wage Parley Set

REPRESENTATIVES of the Railroad Trainmen and of the Carriers' Joint Conference committee agreed to meet in the Stevens hotel, Chicago, on July 18 to start negotiations over the 15 per cent wage reduction proposed by the railroads. The trainmen, numbering about 150,000 workers are headed by A. F. Whitney, who declares they cannot and will not accept the wage cut.

On July 20 the 18 other railroad brotherhoods affected by the proposed wage reduction will start their negotiations with the managements under the leadership of George M. Harrison, chairman of Railway Labor Executives' association.

Indiana G.O.P. Picks Willis

RAYMOND E. WILLIS of Angola, Ind., a newspaper publisher and veteran political leader, was nominated for the senate by the state Republican convention in Indianapolis. Willis was named on the third ballot, defeating four rivals, among whom was James E. Watson, former senator.

The nominee, who is sixty-two years old, has been the active editor and publisher of his weekly paper, the Angola Republican, since its establishment in 1898. He is president of the Steuben Publishing company, and, with another editor at its head, publishes the Angola Herald, a Democratic organ.

Spending Is a Stop-Gap

DECLARING the New Deal's objective is to give wages for real work and that he is opposed to the outright dole for bare existence, President Roosevelt said in a press conference that he is still looking for a permanent solution of the unemployment problem. He made it clear that he did not believe relief or public works afforded anything more than a stop-gap remedy for a little understood dislocation of the nation's economic and industrial life. In fact, he said, no country in the world had as yet worked out a method for dealing with the most acute unemployment situation in the history of the world.

President Roosevelt

He noted that public works expenditures had worked better in Sweden than in this country, because the Swedish government had been able in recent prosperous years to put on heavy taxes and pay off its borrowings. He said the Swedish method was being given close study. The President warned that the prosperity which vast outlays for rearmament appeared to have brought to European nations was unsound. When the munitions plants close down, he predicted, the nations of Europe will find themselves weaker in an economic sense than ever before. No nation, he argued, could spend its way back to prosperity by laying out vast sums in unproductive goods like weapons of war.

All federal spending agencies received instructions to launch the big spending push July 1, Mr. Roosevelt said. Funds will pour out through the Works Progress administration, the Civilian Conservation corps and the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

France to Execute Spies

DEATH on the guillotine will hereafter be the fate of persons convicted of peacetime spying in France. The government issued this decree, according to officials, because of the increase of espionage in France. In the Strasbourg area alone—near the German frontier—there were 150 convictions on espionage charges in 1937. This year such convictions have averaged nearly four a week.

Forms of espionage for which the death penalty may be imposed include entering into a contract with a foreign power with the intent of weakening the national defense, taking up arms in a foreign army against France, and supplying information to a foreign power concerning inventions, manufacturing processes, studies, industrial methods, maps, documents or military plans which might be used against France in time of war.

Italy Checks Franco

VIRGINIO GAYDA, noted editor and spokesman for the Fascist regime in Italy, declared that Italy had advised Franco, leader of the Spanish insurgents, to use "moderation" in his efforts to prevent British and other foreign ships from bringing supplies to government Spain. Gayda said, however, that Italy approved the bombing of vessels carrying contraband, but disclaimed any Italian responsibility therefor.

Representations by the earl of Perth, British ambassador to Rome, had opened the way to an agreement to end the bombings. Mussolini was reported as ready to act only to spare Prime Minister Chamberlain from embarrassment.

The Miracle of Milk

Noted Food Authority Explains Why It Is the Cheapest and Most Nearly Perfect Food

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York City.

OF ALL the foods known and used by man, milk is supreme. It is a miracle of perfection—a veritable elixir of life.

Milk has powers possessed by no other food. It builds sturdy bodies for infants; strong bones and sound teeth for growing children; helps to maintain vitality in adults; and to delay the onset of old age.

It contains a greater assortment of nutritive materials than any other single food. It is the foundation of every balanced diet. Considering the services it performs for mankind—from infancy to old age—it is the cheapest food we have.

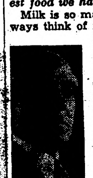
Milk is so many-sided that I always think of it as the Benjamin Franklin of foods. It is a vast treasure chest of nutrients — the most complex product of nature's chemistry. It contains nearly every chemical element of the body itself, in proportions adapted for quick and easy assimilation.



Milk fulfills six essential requirements of a perfect diet.

First: It supplies carbohydrate and fat for heat and energy.

Second: It furnishes protein that is suitable for building new tissues and repairing the millions of cells that are worn out daily.

Third: It yields minerals which build bones and teeth and regulate the subtle internal processes of the body.

Fourth: It contains every known vitamin in some degree and is abundantly supplied with the vitamins that are necessary to growth, to the smooth running of the body machine, and to the prevention of many types of infection.

Fifth: It contains water, to act as a solvent, a carrier and regulator.

Sixth: It is easily digestible.

This brief summary helps to explain the unique place of milk in nutrition. Think of it! In one food, we find protein of the highest type; carbohydrate and fat; all the vitamins; every one of the minerals demanded by the human body; water; and an easy digestibility that readily changes these ingredients into vigorous life.

The Biggest Food Bargain

We occasionally hear the charge that milk is too high in price—that it is a luxury to afford enough of this master food to supply a quart daily for every child—at least a pint for each adult. That is ridiculous! The cost of milk is much cheaper than the cost of illness. And milk is not a luxury, but an indispensable necessity.

I contend that no homemaker can afford not to buy milk in adequate amounts—that if she desires health, efficiency and longevity for her family, she must provide a sufficient amount of milk before she purchases any other food.

Humankind needs milk as the flowers in the garden and the grains in the field need the blessing of rain.

Deprived of milk, children develop a multitude of ills. They become thin and weak; their resistance is low; they fall easy victims to the germs of disease; there is small hope of their reaching normal manhood and womanhood.

Nor is milk only a food for children. It is likewise essential for adults who desire to live longer, happier, and healthier lives—to fortify their bodies against the assaults of disease—to retain or regain mental and bodily vigor. It is indeed a Fountain of Youth!

Milk for Pep and Power

A quart of milk daily supplies from two-thirds to three-fourths of the total calories required by a year-old child. For a five-year old, it provides about half the day's fuel requirements, and for a ten-year old, one-third. Even a moderately active man could obtain one-fourth of his energy requirements from a quart of this precious fluid. It is also interesting to note that five-eighths cup of milk is equivalent in energy value to one and one-third eggs, or two and one-fourth ounces of lean beef.

A quart of milk yields more than an ounce of pure protein of the highest quality. Moreover, nutrition authorities hold that under normal conditions, it is the most completely digested and absorbed of all food proteins.

Milk for Minerals

As a source of calcium, milk is indispensable. Without milk, it is practically impossible for the body to obtain enough of this captain of the minerals for normal skeletal development.

It has been estimated that when the calcium requirement is met through the use of milk, the need for phosphorus will also be adequately provided.

Though milk is not as good a source of iron as of calcium and phosphorus, the iron is present and in a form that can be easily utilized by the body.

Milk for Vitamins

Milk is so rich in vitamins A and G, that the addition of a quart of milk daily to a good mixed diet practically guarantees against a deficiency of either of these precious substances which promote growth, help build resistance to disease, prolong the prime of life, and help to ward off old age. It also furnishes a considerable amount of vitamin B, which promotes appetite, aids digestion and helps to prevent a nervous disorder.

Milk contains a relatively small amount of vitamin D, but this can be remedied in both bottled and evaporated milk by irradiation, or the addition of a vitamin D concentrate. It is less dependable as a source of vitamin C than any other vitamin, as the amount it naturally contains varies with the diet of the cow and is reduced by pasteurization or evaporation. This deficiency is easily made good, however, by adding to the diet fresh fruits and fruit juices and raw leafy vegetables.

In Praise of Milk Producers

As milk is man's finest food, the men who are occupied with its production are engaged in the world's most important pursuit. They labor to provide the nation with a pure, safe, clean supply of the food that makes life worthwhile for children and helps to prolong life for adults.

Let no one say that milk is expensive. Rather let every homemaker come to realize that this magnificent food would be CHEAP AT ANY PRICE!

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THERE is a modern air about the colorful roughly woven table mat and the chair cover and cushion shown here. Does it surprise you to learn that they cost next to nothing? There is a trick in it. The fabric is actually burlap sacking with dyed strips of old silk stockings drawn through. Bright colored yarns may be substituted for the stocking strips or combined with them if desired. Either plaids or stripes may be worked out, and the best results will be obtained with a simple color scheme such as the one suggested here.

Dye the stockings before cutting. Cut the strips ¾-inch wide and about an inch longer than the space they are to fill. Taper one end of the strip so that it will pull through the burlap easily. If long strips are needed, cut around and around the stocking spirally instead of lengthwise. Now, draw out one thread of the burlap; then tie one end of the next thread to the tapered end of the stocking strip as at A. Pull the other end of this thread as at B to draw the strip through.

NOTE: If you wish to use these weekly articles for reference paste them in a scrapbook, as they are not included in either Sewing Book No. 1 or 2. Book 2 illustrates 90 embroidery stitches with numerous applications; doll clothes and gift items. Order by number, enclosing 25 cents for each book desired. If you order both books, leaflet on making crazy quilts, with 36 stitches illustrated, will be included free. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

AN IMPORTANT HOME INDUSTRY

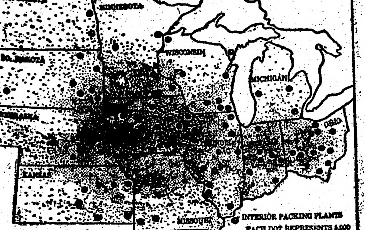
An important home industry in the form of interior packing plants and concentration point markets now absorbs a large volume of the Corn Belt hogs.

While packing plants have existed in the interior ever since the migration of corn and hogs into the Corn Belt states, their development into important meat packing centers did not begin until after the establishment of railroad transportation, refrigeration and the invention of the refrigerator car. These modern facilities for the first time made possible the slaughtering of livestock close to the point of production and the distribution of fresh and other perishable meats to distant consuming centers—in fact to all parts of the civilized world. This was a boon to the entire livestock industry as a whole, since live animals as well as meat are perishable.

HOGS ON FARMS AND INTERIOR PACKING PLANTS
Twelve Corn Belt States



Interior packing plants have established themselves close to their source of supply of raw material—livestock. The graph above shows the density of hog population (Hogs on Farms, Census, April 1, 1930) and the location of interior packing plants in the Corn Belt States. Concentration point markets that have followed packing plants into the interior are not shown, nor are the fifteen or more central markets located in this area at converging railroad lines in the larger cities. A host of markets, nearby or more distant, available by truck or rail transportation, now await the choice of the producer who has livestock to sell.

A second great impetus to this development of interior meat packing came during the last decade with the development of hard-surfaced roads and truck transportation of livestock. This new and additional form of transportation has made the interior packing plant and concentration point markets more readily available to a much larger number of producers than formerly, and, consequently, a larger volume of livestock has been sold in recent years to these nearby markets.

Under the present marketing setup which these and other economic changes have brought about, the producer now has a wider choice of markets than ever before. Now he can sell and deliver less than a carload, or less than a truckload, or even just one animal to any one of several packing plants and concentration points available, or consign to a central market. More than ever before producers are now in a position to decide what method of selling livestock and what type of market they prefer.

Wenzel-Willard Visit Mud Lake

Charged Attidude Apparent Says McMillan and Eastby After Interview

Herman Wenzel, State Conservation Commissioner and his Chief Engineer, E. V. Willard, together with George E. Tonkin, District Director of the U. S. Biological Survey and District Engineer Taylor visited the Mud Lake and Thief Lake Projects Tuesday together with A. C. McMillan, Ole Eastby and John Kast.

The subject receiving attention was the matter of adequate outlet for waters that nominally drain through what is now Mud Lake and Thief Lake; the projects Farmers maintain have impeded outlets that they have paid for through ditch taxes.

Both McMillan and Eastby report that Mr. Wenzel and Mr. Willard have changed their attidude considerably and appear to be willing to do their best to attempt to meet some of the objections of the people of the area.

The attitude of the Engineer for the Biological survey was that of an obstinate and contrary official, they said, and on several occasions Wenzel and Willard clashed sharply with him during the tour of the area. Wenzel and Willard threatened to go over the head of Mr. Taylor in order to obtain the opening of drainage courses for the purpose of alleviating flood problems.

The visit of Mr. Wenzel and Mr. Willard, as well as the other officials was unexpected. A telegram received by Mr. McMillan Monday asked him to meet them at Thief River Falls Tuesday morning.

While no definite conclusion was reached during the day officials of the Farmers Protective organization were pleased with the apparent change in the atitude of Mr. Wenzel and Mr. Willard. If their change is genuine, which they seem inclined to believe, it is a great victory for eastern Marshall County.

That public officials should seek to work with and attempt to solve problems somewhat on the basis of plans worked out in conjunction people of the area effecied, has always been the contention of this publication and it is gratifying to have public officials take an attitude of working with the people of a community in the solution of their problems.

Mr. Wenzel and Mr. Willard were of the opinion that a drainage Channel should be opened in the natural water course known as Little River, or commonly known as "Lost River." That is in Moylan township en the south side of Mud Lake.

With this the Engineer of the Biological Survey did not agree and Mr. Eastby and Mr. McMillan was amused at the obtsinacy of the Federal Engineer that the water should be taken northward in place of Northwestward in the natural water course. It was on this that the State and Federal officials disagreed most sharply.

The Conservation Commissioner and his Chief Engineer also discussed the matter of using WPA labor for cleaning out ditches in the area and they urged that eastern Marshall County should have the County Board of Commissioners submit such a project.

People of the area have been very much upset about the failure of public officials to come to their rescue in providing outlet for flood waters since the ditches they had paid for have been rendered useless by placing of dikes and dams in these drainage systems. It is to be hoped that the State Conservation Department will not let another opportunity slide by to obtain the good grace and support of this section as well as the people outside of the area who sympathize with the farmers of eastern Marshall County.

Mr. McMillan, Mr. Kast and Mr. Eastby were in Warren and Crookston Wednesday to arrange for a WPA project.

Sommers Heads Welfare Board

The Marshall County Welfare Board held its annual meeting July 7, 1938, at the Welfare Office in the Court House in Warren. A budget for the coming year was adopted and other plans were made.

The Board election was as follows: Chairman, A. W. Sommers, Radium; Vice Chairman, E. H. Loff, Oslo; and Secretary, Zoa K. Avery, Stephen. Other members are Arthur Anderson of Newfolden and Otto J. Johnson of Grygla. Mrs. Avery is newly appointed to the board, [succeeding Mrs. Ellen Smith of Alvarado.]

Staff members were elected at the meeting. Members of the office staff of the Board are: Executive Secretary, Paul T. Steen; Child Welfare Worker, Cecilia Finlayson; Visitor, Evelyn Bierbaum; Chief Clerk, Florence Poolman; and Stenographer, Ruth Boardson.

The financial report showed that the net deficiency in the Welfare Fund is about $2,500. The Welfare Fund is a combination of the old Poor Fund and Old Age Assistance Fund. These two funds a year ago showed a total deficit of about $21,000. This deficit is now almost wiped out.

About $132,000 was paid to Old Age Assistance recipients in the twelve months ending June 30, 1938. Another $8,750 was paid to mothers of dependent children in ten months up to July 1, 1938. For the past year $17,500 was paid in direct relief and $10,165 was spent on administration. Other expenditures for welfare in the county brought the total for the year up to about $183,000. Administration costs were less than 6 per cent of the total.

Main source of income for the years was from State and Federal reimbursement on Social Security aids and direct relief; these totaled approximately $130,000 which covered about 70 per cent of the total expended. Another $8,400 was received from the State as distressed county aid. Local taxes accounted for the balance of about $56,500.

The budget adopted made provisions for continuing the work on approximately the same scale as in the past.

The Board will hold its next meeting on July 25th. Thereafter it will continue to meet twice a month, on the first and third Monday of each month.

Gatzke Pioneer Passed Away

Hovered on Lifes Borderline for Days; Bedridden for Nearly Five Years

Christ August Engelstad, pioneer merchant of Gatzke, passed away at the residence of hi sson and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Engelstad, at 11:20 p. m. Tuesday July 19th after an illness of about six years, having been bedridden since October 193[illegible] with arthritis.

Deceased was born at Modom-Me-Drammen, Ostlund, Norway August 28th, 1863 and was at the time of his death 74 years, 1[illegible] months and 22 days old. His eight children were at his bedside when the end came. Mrs. Engelstad passed away September 16th, 1936.

The end had been expected for some time and Thursday the family was summoned and they remained until the end. At times it appeared that the end would come at any minute then he would rally again. Shortly after noon Tuesday he lapsed into a Coma at 4:00 o'clock the pulse-beat was so weak it could not be felt and his arms and legs became cold. Then at 7:00 he rallied again and the pulse could be felt and his arms and legs began to warm up. He would rally somewhat and then sink back again and finally slept away as the big divide was reached.

Mr. Engelstad came to Fertile Minnesota from Norway with his parents when he was six years old and on May 27th, 1888 he was joined in wedlock to Emma Bollie. To this union eight children were born: Albert, Great Northern Conductor of Grand Forks; Edward, who farms two an done-half miles east of Gatzke; Clifford who operates the store at Gatzke and Arnold who has charge of the home farm; Clara (Mrs. Oscar Orvold) of Grand Forks; Ida (Mrs. Ed. Snodgrass) of Brainerd; Mabel (Mrs. Floyd Tucker of Grand Forks and Esther (Mrs. Arthur Shipley) also of Grand Forks.

There are also seven grandchildren; Mrs. George Mlinar and Dalwon, daughter and son of Mr. and Mrs. Orvald; Mrs. Don McCalvy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Snodgrass; Patricia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Shipley; Kathryn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Tucker; Yvonne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Engelstad and Marilyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Engelstad. There are alsotwo great grandchildren; Donna,( daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Mlinar and Gary, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don McCalvy.

Mr. and Mrs. Engelstad came to Rollis township in 1903 and settled on what became Gatzke one and one-half miles east at one mile north of the present location of Gatzke. There they started a store and a postoffice was established there. Then came the establishment of the Co-operative Creamery on its present location and the store and postoffice was moved to the present site in 1907.

As a pioneer Merchant, Mr. Engelstad. There are also two great grand chant and a good friend. Many of those who are now farmers in middle age remember that as mere boys they many times went to him to loan a dollar for special occasions when the funds were not available at home. He was a friend of old and young alike.

He was the friend of youth and when they grew to be young men and young women he was still their friend. He was an intregal part of the community and knew the problems of individuals and the community as well.

On the community and on the hearts of individuals is etched the history of Christ August Engelstad. His work is done, and he had carved deep inscriptions on the community that shall live on in the history of the community and shall continue to bear witness for him. And now that his life is stilled and returned to its maker it is not improbable that many will see and understand things that they could not see and understand while he was still among them. They will note the true worth of his work. And as he left his work he was tired but happy; ready to undertake his journey.

He was a charter member of Landstad Lutheran Church and served the community as Postmaster and Assessor for a number of years. During the years he freighted from Thief River Falls across the Ringbo swamp he encountered the real hardships of the pioneer merchant.

This is the humble tribute of this publication to the work and memory of a stalwart Pioneer as we offer condolences to relatives and friends and to the community he served.

Historical Society Picnic

Clifford Bouvette of Hallock to be Main Speaker at Annual Picnic

Menzel's Grove three miles east of Argyle has been definitely settled upon as the scenic spot at which the annual joint picnic of the Marshall County Historical Society and the Old Settlers Association of Marshall and Kittson counties will be held on Sunday, July 31st. The Menzel site was a prominent place for gatherings of this kind years ago, but lost its favor when the Old Mill Picnic Grounds, because of more central location, attracted such events. It was thought the Menzel grounds, having been abandoned so long, could not be put in condition for such a large gathering, but after committeemen had made a thorough inspection it was found that they can again be made the ideal picnic site they were in the past with ample accommodation for the thousands who gather for the annual joint event.

Each year the Society selects a different location with an historical background as the site for the picnic. It has previously been held at the Old Mill Picnic Ground, the Red River Landing, Thief Lake, and Riverside Farm Picnic Grounds at Stephen. Menzel's Grove has been selected this year because of its past prominence when years ago the Marshall County Federation of Farm Bureaus, then flourishing, held forth there in great numbers at such gatherings.

The Menzel grounds, located on Middle River, studded with magnificent high spreading oaks, provide ideal sunshaded spots for picnickers who come provisioned for noon-day gatherings. Facing the woo grounds is a large open space available for close-in parking of cars. The grounds are easily accessible over roads coming in from both the north and south sides of the river, which will be posted with signs directing visitors to the grounds. Work is now under way clearing out underbrush and putting the grounds in the best of condition for picnic.

The program this year will feature the Erickson triplets of Argyle, who will make their first public appearance at the picnic. The three babies, Darlene Joy, Derril Linn and Donna Rae, will be one year old July 29th, and they will appear with three birthday cakes with one burning candle each at a birthday party in their honor.

A twins parade will also feature the program. The committee is now securing registration of twins thruout the county for participation in the parade. Should there be any with whom contact has not been made, they are asked to send in their names for registration to H. F. Hedquist, chairman of the committee.

The program will begin at 1:30 p. m., the Argyle High School Band playing in concert from 1:30 while the crowds are gathering.

Judge B. B. Brett, president of the Marshall County Historical Society will preside as chairman. The gathering will stand in silent prayer for the old settlers who have passed on. The invocation will be given by Rev. P. Alfred Peterson of Alvarado.

S. D. Lincoln, president of the Old Settlers' Association, will call the roll of the old settlers who came to the county as settlers earlier than 1885.

Musical numbers will include a violin solo by Douglas Brosseau, selection by the Argyle Girl's Chorus directed by Mrs. Elaine Craik.

Clifford W. Bouvette of Hallock will deliver the main address. Mr. Bouvette has a wide reputation as a fluent speaker who knows intimately the early history and settlement of the Red River Valley, his grandfather having come by oxcart from St. Cloud over the Pembina Trail to Pembina in 1869 and acted as agent for the U. S. Government in supplying provisions for the soldiers at Fort Pembina. He is also familiar with the early life of Charles Cavelier, North Dakota's first permanent resident, who came to Pembina in 1851 and was customs official and postmaster there for many years.

Following Mr. Bouvette's address, the gathering will join in community singing.

An amplifying system will be installed to carry the program to all parts of the ground.

Stands on the grounds will be well provisioned to serve lunches and refreshments.

The small fee of 25 cents will be charged for each car entering the grounds to provide funds with which to pay expenses.

Annual School Meeting Held

The annual school meeting of District No. 35 was held here on Tuesday evening. Only twenty-one of the local residents came out to take part in the election of officers and to hear the annual reports read. The reports revealed that the district is now in better financial condition than it has been for years. The cash balance on hand at the closing of the books for June 30, 1938, showed that the treasury had $3,353.47. Since that time a check for $2,100 has come in from the County Auditor, leaving the district with some over five thousand dollars for the start of the coming year.

H. O. Hanson and Gilbert Sanoden were reelected as members of the school board at the election.

The Annual report of the district will be published next week

Poison Hoppers-Bait Is Free

Marshall County farmers may secure grasshopper bait free of charge at Argyle. All that the farmer needs to do is to go to the old Robertson lumber yard at Argyle to get the bait bringing his own containers. The bait is mixed dry for convenience in hauling and storing. Before spreading, sufficient water should be added to spread well.

A WPA project has been set up at Argyle where the bait is properly mixed and available at any time. Cost of the bait is being borne by Federal and State insect control funds. The work is under the supervision of the Count Agent's office.

It is important that the grasshoppers be poisoned while small and in restricted areas. After they start to migrate they are much more difficult to control. Destsoying them now will cut down egg-laying in the fall and infestation next year. Flax, seedings of grasses, alfalfa and sweet clover, and other late crops need protection from attack by hoppers. Poison them now. Bait is free.

Mrs. Jesse Sorum and family, Mrs. J. Hagberg and Roy spent Sunday at Fertile.

157 Lose Drivers Licenses

Judges in May showed no sympathy for intoxicated and dangerous drivers and revoked 157 drivers licenses, records of the drivers license unit of the Minnesota Highway department for that month disclosed.

For the same month 57 licenses were suspended. At the same time the drivers license unit returned 45 suspended licenses to drivers who filed proof of financial responsibility.

The 157 revocations are in contrast to 114 for the same month a year ago and stand as record for May. Drunken driving accounted for 151 of the revocations, failure to stop and disclose identity after an accident was responsible for four, manslaughter for one, personal injury for one and stolen cars for two.

Hennepin county led with 32 revocations, Ramsey was second with 28 and St. Louis third with 25. Forty-two counties had no revocations.

Suspensions dropped from 79 in May 1937 and 100 in May 1936 to 57, indicating that the courts are tending to order revocations than suspensions.

Up to June 1 this year, 550 licenses have been revoked and 4,322 have been taken away since the unit was created by the legislature in 1934. Suspensions for the life of the bureau total 2,939. Of the 4,322 revocations, 4,168 were ordered for intoxication.

Friends, neighbors and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Larson, prominet farmers southeast of Holt, gathered at the Larson home Sunday afternoon to celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary. A social afternoon was spent, a delicious lunch served, and a cash purse presented to the honored couple.

Guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Moe, Gunda and Henry Moe and Annie Brye from Grafton; Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Dahl and children of Argyle; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Olson and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Heinze and son Frank of Thief River Falls.

Frosting a Cake for Judges to Sample

A professional cake baker, frosting one of the hundreds of cakes which were made up in the Experimental Kitchen Laboratory, maintained by C. Houston Goudiss in New York City, in the course of selecting the winners in his recent Cake Recipe Contest.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

NATURALLY, I am accustomed to seeing exhibits of delicious and interesting foods in the Experimental Kitchen Laboratory that I maintain in New York City. But in all the years of its existence, it has never been a busier nor a more inviting place than during the last few weeks when the home economists on my staff have been busily testing and judging the many fine cake recipes submitted by readers of this paper in our recent Cake Recipe Contest.

Imagine, if you can, a big cheerful and colorful kitchen filled with long tables upon which row after row of handsome cakes were arranged—proudly testifying to the skill of the homemakers who cherish the recipes from which they were made.

Every Type of Cake Entered.

A whole tableful of white cakes, with and without icing. Chocolate and cocoa cakes of every possible type. All manner of cakes, fragrant and delicious — spice, ice cream, honey, caramel, maple syrup, nut, date, pineapple, orange, lemon, butterscotch, jam, banana, raisin, oatmeal, cocoanut and marble cakes. Cakes baked in long sheets, square cakes, round cakes, layer cakes. Old-fashioned cakes from grandmothers' recipe books. Very modern and up-to-date cakes. And even one that was said to have been a favorite with General Robert E. Lee. I've never seen anything to compare with the collection, even at the biggest State Fair!

Do you wonder that the home economists on my staff required several weeks to pick the winners? For with such a wealth of exceptional cakes from which to choose, selecting those for top honors, was indeed difficult.

The cake bakers were trained for their work. They followed the recipes precisely. They measured accurately. They checked oven temperatures.

The scoring system was highly scientific. And we can say with conviction that no matter how close the race, the winners definitely outpointed even their closest rivals.

First Prize Winner.

The first prize of $25.00 went to Mrs. D. F. Kelly, 1004 Charles St., Whitewater, Wis.

Second Prize Winners.

The five second prizes were awarded to Mrs. H. Harshbargen of 2427 Fifth Ave., Altoona, Pa.; R. A. Williams, 12075 Rosemary Ave., Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. C. A. Burns, Box 788, Oakland, Miss.; Miss Sadie Cunningham, Avonmore, Pa.; and Mrs. Laura Meyer, 107 Pleasant St., Plymouth, Wis.

Third Prize Winners.

Mrs. T. H. Fjone, Flaxville, Mont.; Mrs. Lester Ralston, 127 South Judd St., Sioux City, Iowa; Mrs. Harry A. Kramer, 16 Marin Road, Manor, Calif.; Mrs. F. D. McDonald, Route 1, Amherst, Texas; Vera Tygar, Commodore, Pa.; Mrs. George Ahlborn, R. D. No. 1, Mt. Pleasant, Pa.; Mrs. B. A. Robinson, Box 578, Emmett, Idaho; Jean Guthrie, 4712 Campbell St., Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. Walter Richter, Bonduel, Wis.; Mrs. P. C. Blakely, Alden, Mich.

Honorable Mention.

Emogene Williams, Damon, Texas; Mrs. Simon Moen, Norma, N. D.; Mrs. Dick Collins, Masonville, Iowa; Mrs. B. F. Herman, Box 1118, Crosby, Miss.; Mrs. Paul Lorenz, P. O. Box 225, Strathmore, Calif.; Mrs. S. S. Arentz, Simpson, Nev.; Mrs. Vida Hilger, Box 257, Rockland, Mich.; Mrs. Grace H. Peterson, Box 335, Amherst, Wis.; Mrs. Cecil Skinner, Bedford, Wyo.; Mrs. Joe Furnace, 317 West Twentieth St., South Sioux City, Neb.

My thanks and my compliments to every homemaker who submitted a recipe. I only regret that everyone who submitted a recipe could not win a prize.

HOW to SEW

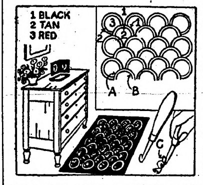
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

GREAT-GRANDMOTHER made her own designs for quilts and hooked rugs and many of her most interesting patterns were developed by drawing around pieces of china. The antique rug shown here may be copied either in rags or rug yarn. Great-Grandmother used rags, and her best rugs were always made of woolen materials torn in strips about ¾-inch wide or narrower.

The foundation of the rug is burlap. The design is drawn on the burlap with a very soft pencil or crayon by tracing part way around a medium sized plate as at A and then a saucer as at B. Allowance should be made for a hem and the plain border. The three colors indicated in the diagram are repeated throughout this rug.



Some hook rug makers stretch the burlap foundation tightly over a wooden frame while they work. Others think they do just as well without a frame. Rug hooks of the general type shown here are for sale in department stores. The strip of material, or yarn, is held under the burlap with the left hand and the loops pulled through to the right side with the hook as shown at C.

NOTE: If you wish to use these weekly articles for reference paste them in a scrapbook, as they are not included in either Sewing Book No. 1 or 2. Book 1, "Sewing for the Home Decorator," covers curtains, slipcovers, dressing tables; 48 pages of fascinating directions. Book 2 illustrates 90 embroidery stitches with numerous applications; doll clothes and gift items. Order by number, enclosing 25 cents for each book desired. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. ### President Boosts Favorites in Kentucky, Oklahoma and Elsewhere in His Trip to the West Coast

President on Tour

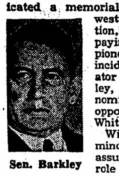
MARIETTA, Ohio, was the first stop in President Roosevelt's transcontinental tour. There he dedicated a memorial to "the start westward of the nation," in his address paying tribute to the pioneers and, rather incidentally, to Senator Robert J. Bulkley, who seeks renomination and is opposed by George White.



Sen. Barkley

With this off his mind, the President assumed his other role of head of the Democratic party and jumped into the primary campaign with both feet. His avowed purpose was to further the election of members of congress, especially senators, whom he terms liberals. Beyond this he was undertaking to maintain his control of the party up to and through the presidential campaign of 1940.

Crossing from Ohio into Kentucky, where Senator Barkley, staunch New Deal supporter, is engaged in a hot fight with Gov. A. B. Chandler for his senate seat, Mr. Roosevelt found it advisable not to utterly squelch the ambition of "Happy" as the governor is known. In a speech at the Latonia race track in Covington he said he had no doubt Chandler would make a good senator, but added: "But I think he would be the first to acknowledge that as a very junior member of the senate, it would take him many, many years to match the national knowledge, the experience, and the acknowledged leadership in the affairs of your nation of that son of Kentucky, of whom the whole nation is proud, Alben Barkley."

At Bowling Green and at Louisville Mr. Roosevelt made platform speeches in which he urged the renomination of Barkley.

The special train raced through Tennessee in the night without a stop and this was taken as inferential disapproval of Senator George Berry, whose marble claims caused the TVA so much trouble.

Oklahoma City came next, and there Mr. Roosevelt told an enormous crowd what a help Senator Elmer Thomas had been to him and how much the senator had done for the state. His commendation of Thomas was called lukewarm, however, and much of his speech was devoted to criticizing the senator's rivals, Representative Gomer Smith and Gov. E. W. Marland. Smith had the support of the Townsendites and many conservatives. Marland has at times been too conservative to please the White House.

McAlester and Wister heard the President from the back platform, and then at Booneville, Ark., he found time to speak kind words about Senator Hattie Caraway, who seeks another term.

The Chief Executive spent the week-end resting at the ranch of his son Elliot 17 miles from Fort Worth, Texas. Then his special rolled northward to Amarillo, where he stopped long enough to make an auto trip about the city. Next day he arrived in Pueblo, Colo., on his way to San Francisco, San Diego and the cruiser Houston which was to carry him through the Panama canal.

During a brief stop at Wichita Falls, Texas, the President announced that he was appointing Gov. James V. Allred to a vacancy in the federal court for the southern district of Texas. This was a complete surprise to Senators Tom Connally and Morris Sheppard.

TVA Inquiry Opens

INVESTIGATION of the activities of the TVA by a congressional joint committee was opened in Knoxville, Tenn., with Chairman Vic Donahey presiding. After an executive session the investigators started on an inspection tour of the projects involved. Public hearings in Knoxville were next on the program, and Donahey said these would continue "until we run out of money."

It was indicated that former Chairman A. E. Morgan would be the first witness called. He was granted permission to go into TVA files to prepare his testimony.

Shortly before the inquiry began, Dr. Morgan filed a mandamus suit in a Knoxville court asking that he be reinstated as member and chairman of the TVA and be paid back salary. He never has recognized the President's right to remove him from the chairmanship.

Hughes Flies the Atlantic

HOWARD HUGHES, wealthy young sportsman and aviator, with four companions made successfully the first non-stop flight from New York to Paris since Lindbergh's epochal feat in 1927. His time was 16 hours and 38 minutes, less than half the time made by Lindbergh.

Howard Hughes

The big plane, named "New York World's Fair 1939," appeared over Le Bourget field long before it was expected but Ambassador Bullitt and a big crowd were waiting to greet the daring aviators. As the twin-motored machine rolled to a stop, Bullitt ran forward, opened the door and shouted: "Congratulations; did you have a good trip?"

Hughes and his fellow adventurers, Ed Lund, Harry Connor, T. L. Thurlow and Richard Stoddart, weary and cramped, climbed out of the cockpit and were eagerly taken in hand by the enthusiastic French.

After resting and refueling their plane, the fliers took off on the second leg of their projected flight around the world, reaching Moscow in less than eight hours. Their hope was to beat the record made in 1933 by Wiley Post.

Hughes' big plane, specially rebuilt and equipped with a multitude of gadgets, carried a gross weight of 25,000 pounds. It had three radios and was in communication with the ground practically all the time. The only worry the fliers had was the danger of running out of fuel before Paris was reached.

Justice Cardozo Dies

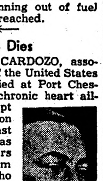
BENJAMIN N. CARDOZO, associate justice of the United States Supreme court, died at Port Chester, N. Y., of a chronic heart ailment that had kept him from work on the bench since last December. He was sixty-eight years old. Descended from Spanish Jews who came to America in 1750, he was born in New York city and educated at Columbia university. He was appointed to the Supreme court by President Hoover in 1932 and lined up with the liberal minority. His scholarship and hard work won the highest respect. Chief Justice Hughes, informed of Cardozo's death in Italy said: "It is an irreparable loss to the court and the nation. He was a jurist of the highest rank and noble spirit."



Sen. Wagner

Probably President Roosevelt will not appoint Cardozo's successor before fall, for the court is in recess until October. But speculation as to his choice began immediately. The name most frequently heard in the discussions in Washington was that of Sen. Robert Wagner of New York, one of the President's chief lieutenants in the field of social legislation. Other New Yorkers mentioned are Ferdinand Pecora and Samuel Rosenman, state Supreme court justices, and Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson. The Far West is not now represented on the court.

Huge Wheat Crop

IN ITS first general crop estimate of the year the department of agriculture predicted the second largest wheat crop in American history. The forecast was for 967,412,000 bushels. A sharp slash in acreage to be planted to wheat must be called for by the Agricultural Adjustment administration as a result. Acreage cuts, plus wheat loans, are now automatic and mandatory under the new farm act.

The department predicted a corn crop of 2,482,102,000 bushels, an oats production of 1,093,829,000 bushels, a barley crop of 239,375,000 bushels, and a rye crop of 51,327,000 bushels. Tobacco production was forecast at 1,496,000,000 pounds and rice production at 53,330,000 bushels.

Japan Warns of Bombings

REPRESENTATIVES of the United States and other foreign powers at Shanghai were handed notes by the Japanese urging them to evacuate their citizens from half a dozen Yangtze valley cities listed as probable targets for further widespread bombings.

Two previous notes urged that all foreign vessels and foreigners along the Yangtze river in the path of the Japanese advance on Hankow be removed.

The United States gunboat Monocacy and the British gunboat Cockchafer were reported to have moved three miles up the Yangtze from Kiukiang as Japanese warships shelled Chinese defenses of the city.

Disorders in Palestine

PALESTINE was in turmoil over a recrudescence of the anti-Jewish riots, and the police and British troops were having a hard time suppressing the bloody-minded Arabs. Fights, bombings and fires resulted in numerous deaths. Near Mount Tabor a patrol of British soldiers and Jewish constables was ambushed and suffered heavy casualties.

Chaco Arbitration

BOLIVIA ad Paraguay have finally agreed to let their dispute over the Chaco territory be settled by arbitration.

Spruille Braden, young American business man, is given most of the credit for this settlement of the long and bloody quarrel, and it is said in Washington that he will be rewarded by appointment as minister to Colombia.

'Purge' Is Hard Hit

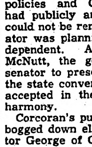
TWO long distance messages came from Manila, from Paul V. McNutt, governor general of the Philippines and reputed boss of the Democrats of Indiana. Thereupon the New Dealers of the Hoosier state decided they could not win in November unless they renominated Frederick Van Nuys for the senate. That gentleman had been marked for elimination by Tommy Corcoran and his fellow managers of the proposed "purge" of those who had opposed any major New Deal policies and Governor Townsend had publicly announced Van Nuys could not be renominated. The senator was planning to run as an independent. After hearing from McNutt, the governor invited the senator to present his candidacy to the state convention, and Van Nuys accepted in the interests of party harmony.



Senator Van Nuys

Corcoran's purge appears to have bogged down elsewhere, too. Senator George of Georgia and Senator E. D. Smith of South Carolina seem likely to win renomination. In New York city Tammany decided to support Congressman John J. O'Connor, who led the fight against the reorganization bill, and several other New York members of the lower house whom Corcoran had listed for defeat.

Problem of the South

RE-ESTABLISHING a balanced economic system in the southern states is considered by President Roosevelt the No. 1 problem of the nation and he says it must and can be done. He appealed to 25 southern leaders, assembled in Washington at his request, to draft plans for the economic restoration of their section of the country. Lewis Mellett, director of the National Emergency council, presided over the conference and read Mr. Roosevelt's letter.

Though he did not comment on the effect that the new wages and hours law may have on southern industry, he did say that one of the great problems in the South is that of labor and employment. He spoke also of problems "growing out of the new industrial era and, again, of absentee ownership of the new industries."

"It is my conviction," the President wrote to Mellett, "that the South presents right now the nation's number one economic problem—the nation's problem, not merely the South's. For we have an economic unbalance in the nation as a whole, due to this very condition of the South.

"The purpose of your conference is to produce a restatement of the economic conditions of the South and their relation to the rest of the country that we may do something about it."

The Miracle of Milk

Noted Food Authority Explains Why It Is the Cheapest and Most Nearly Perfect Food

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City.

OF ALL the foods known and used by man, milk is supreme. It is a miracle of perfection—a veritable elixir of life.

Milk has powers possessed by no other food. It builds sturdy bodies for infants; strong bones and sound teeth for growing children; helps to maintain vitality in adults; and to delay the onset of old age.

It contains a greater assortment of nutritive materials than any other single food. It is the foundation of every balanced diet. Considering the services it performs for mankind—from infancy to old age—it is the cheapest food we have.

Milk is so many-sided that I always think of it as the Benjamin Franklin of foods. It is a vast treasure chest of nutrients — the most complex product of nature's chemistry. It contains nearly every chemical element of the body itself, in proportions adapted for quick and easy assimilation.

Milk fulfills six essential requirements of a perfect diet.

First: It supplies carbohydrate and fat for heat and energy.

Second: It furnishes protein that is suitable for building new tissues and repairing the millions of cells that are worn out daily.

Third: It yields minerals which build bones and teeth and regulate the subtle internal processes of the body.

Fourth: It contains every known vitamin in some degree and is abundantly supplied with the vitamins that are necessary to growth, to the smooth running of the body machine, and to the prevention of many types of infection.

Fifth: It contains water, to act as a solvent, a carrier and regulator.

Sixth: It is easily digestible.

This brief summary helps to explain the unique place of milk in nutrition. Think of it! In one food, we find protein of the highest type; carbohydrate and fat; all the vitamins; every one of the minerals demanded by the human body; water; and an easy digestibility that readily changes these ingredients into vigorous life.

The Biggest Food Bargain

We occasionally hear the charge that milk is too high in price—that it is a luxury to afford enough of this master food to supply a quart daily for every child—at least a pint for each adult. That is ridiculous! The cost of milk is much cheaper than the cost of illness. And milk is not a luxury, but an indispensable necessity.

I contend that no homemaker can afford not to buy milk in adequate amounts—that if she desires health, efficiency and longevity for her family, she must provide a sufficient amount of milk before she purchases any other food.

Humankind needs milk as the flowers in the garden and the grains in the field need the blessing of rain.

Deprived of milk, children develop a multitude of ills. They become thin and weak; their resistance is low; they fall easy victims to the germs of disease; there is small hope of their reaching normal manhood and womanhood.

Nor is milk only a food for children. It is likewise essential for adults who desire to live longer, happier, and healthier lives—to fortify their bodies against the assaults of disease—to retain or regain mental and bodily vigor. It is indeed a Fountain of Youth!

Milk for Pep and Power

A quart of milk daily supplies from two-thirds to three-fourths of the total calories required by a year-old child. For a five-year old, it provides about half the day's fuel requirements, and for a ten-year old, one-third. Even a moderately active man could obtain one-fourth of his energy requirements from a quart of this precious fluid. It is also interesting to note that five-eighths cup of milk is equivalent in energy value to one and one-third eggs, or two and one-fourth ounces of lean beef.

A quart of milk yields more than an ounce of pure protein of the highest quality. Moreover, nutrition authorities hold that under normal conditions, it is the most completely digested and absorbed of all food proteins.

Milk for Minerals

As a source of calcium, milk is indispensable. Without milk, it is practically impossible for the body to obtain enough of this captain of the minerals for normal skeletal development.

It has been estimated that when the calcium requirement is met through the use of milk, the need for phosphorus will also be adequately provided.

Though milk is not as good a source of iron as of calcium and phosphorus, the iron is present and in a form that can be easily utilized by the body.

Milk for Vitamins

Milk is so rich in vitamins A and G, that the addition of a quart of milk daily to a good mixed diet practically guarantees against a deficiency of either of these precious substances which promote growth, help build resistance to disease, prolong the prime of life, and help to ward off old age. It also furnishes a considerable amount of vitamin B, which promotes appetite, aids digestion and helps to prevent a nervous disorder.

Milk contains a relatively small amount of vitamin D, but this can be remedied in both bottled and evaporated milk by irradiation, or the addition of a vitamin D concentrate. It is less dependable as a source of vitamin C than any other vitamin, as the amount it naturally contains varies with the diet of the cow and is reduced by pasteurization or evaporation. This deficiency is easily made good, however, by adding to the diet fresh fruits and fruit juices and raw leafy vegetables.

In Praise of Milk Producers

As milk is man's finest food, the men who are occupied with its production are engaged in the world's most important pursuit. They labor to provide the nation with a pure, safe, clean supply of the food that makes life worthwhile for children and helps to prolong life for adults.

Let no one say that milk is expensive. Rather let every homemaker come to realize that this magnificent food would be CHEAP AT ANY PRICE!

HOW to SEW

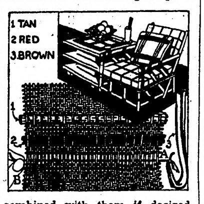
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THERE is a modern air about the colorful roughly woven table mat and the chair cover and cushion shown here. Does it surprise you to learn that they cost next to nothing? There is a trick in it. The fabric is actually burlap sacking with dyed strips of old silk stockings drawn through. Bright colored yarns may be substituted for the stocking strips or combined with them if desired. Either plaids or stripes may be worked out, and the best results will be obtained with a simple color scheme such as the one suggested here.



Dye the stockings before cutting. Cut the strips ¾-inch wide and about an inch longer than the space they are to fill. Taper one end of the strip so that it will pull through the burlap easily. If long strips are needed, cut around and around the stocking spirally instead of lengthwise. Now, draw out one thread of the burlap; then tie one end of the next thread to the tapered end of the stocking strip as at A. Pull the other end of this thread as at B to draw the strip through.

NOTE: If you wish to use these weekly articles for reference paste them in a scrapbook, as they are not included in either Sewing Book No. 1 or 2. Book 1, "Sewing for the Home Decorator," covers curtains, slipcovers, dressing tables; 48 pages of fascinating directions. Book 2 illustrates 90 embroidery stitches with numerous applications; doll clothes and gift items. Order by number, enclosing 25 cents for each book desired. If you order both books, leaflet on making crazy quilts, with 36 stitches illustrated, will be included free. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

The term pocket miner doesn't mean the same in New York as it does in the West. Out where men are men and rocks are hard, the pocket miner is a legitimate citizen who digs gold out of pockets in the earth. In New York, the pocket miner is one who digs bills out of pockets of night club frequenters. He doesn't do it with deft fingers because police deal roughly with pickpockets, and there is always the chance of getting caught. He does it by trickery. The patron who has enjoyed a wet, wild night receives callers at his hotel room or office the next morning. They inform him that the night before, he wasn't himself. Seeing that he was a good fellow, the club had settled for a small amount and he had told them to call the next morning and collect the balance. If the victim shows signs of getting tough, they tell him that he'll either settle or there'll be unfavorable publicity. Most of the victims, in the throes of a hangover, have settled. Thus the racketeers flourished.

Recently two waiters and a clerk called on a local gentleman. He didn't remember much about the night before but when asked for two hundred dollars, he became suspicious. He didn't argue about the matter, however. He merely told his callers to come back the next day—presumably when he would feel better—and there would be a settlement. The trio accepted the invitation. The business man was as good as his word—he met the demand in full. There was just one catch—he had taken the precaution of having a couple of detectives stowed away on the premises in a place where they could both see and hear. So the waiters and the clerk were taken with their loot right on them and at the moment are roosting in the hoosegow. Other pocket miners are laying off because when a victim squawks and gets away with it, the game becomes too hot to handle.

Ordinarily a peace-loving citizen, there have been numerous times when the desire has possessed me to drive a tank or some other indestructible car along the highways of New York and bang into road hogs and those motorists who hurl insults when accidents, of their own inviting, are missed seemingly by a miracle. Hence an incident on Williamsburg bridge has a peculiar appeal. Two gentlemen in a car were not only driving too fast but carelessly. A passing motorist advised them as to their shortcomings an the two informed him what he was and where he could go. The other motorist speeded up and beat them to the end of the bridge. There they found a traffic officer acting as a reception committee. The quiet man they had insulted happened to be Lewis J. Valentine, who as police commissioner, is boss of all the cops.

As you know already, local merchant tailor designers hold that the well-dressed man must possess at least 19 suits and overcoats, the list being: Six business suits, a riding suit, an informal walking suit, a cutaway suit, a dinner suit, a host jacket, a full dress suit, a dress evening topcoat, a plain blue topcoat, a blue heavyweight topcoat, a guard's coat, a yachting suit and a sport suit equipped with several pairs of trousers. Well, counting in the two white linen suits, one acquired in Trinidad and the other in Barbadoes and both several years old, as well as a two-season-old tropical worsted, I'm only 14 shy of the quota.

Under the energetic direction of Park Commissioner Moses practically the entire Hudson river front, from Seventy-second street to the upper end of the island, has been transformed, or is being transformed. In the course of time, it will be one long parkway, accessible to all who care to visit it, and that means hundreds of thousands. The Hudson river panorama at any season is one worthy of attention. Still it does look queer with many of the old landmarks missing.

Shields, local county game warden stationed at Middle River was accidently shot and seriously wounded on Saturday near Gatzke: Mr. Shields had gone to Gatzke with Allen Brattland, game warden from Ada, Minn., and three men from Thief River Falls, to shoot a bear that was destroying bee; hives. According to reports, Mr. Brattland shot into a small grove of brush to drive the bear out and the bullet hit Mr. Shields in the eye and lodged near his brain.

Lookout For Army Worms

Farmers in Marshall County should be on the lookout for outbreaks of the army worms. Counties to the south are experiencing rather severe infestations of this pest. It is rather easy to control if caught before migration begins.

Habits peculiar to the insect are its feeding early in the morning and late in the evening, being practically out of sight during most of the day. The true army worm has black markings on the back. When the worms hatch, they are about three-fourths inch long and about one-eighth inch in thickness. This worm feeds for a period of three weeks reaching the size of an ordinary lead pencil in thickness and about one and one-half to two inches long. The true army worm feeds first on plants belonging to the grass families. Its preferred food plants are the grasses and cereal crops as well as corn. After the worms have cleaned up whatever grasses are immediately available to them, they may attack broad leaved crops such as alfalfa and sweet clover. Farmers should watch for these worms early in the day and in late afternoon. They will be seen feeding on plants at that time. During the rest of the day they may hide under thrash on the ground or under the leaves of the plants or at the base of stems of the plants

The variegated cutworm has about the same feeding habits and life history as the true army worm except that it will attack broad leaved plants as readily as the grass plants. Control measured will be the same as for army worm.

Control of the army worm consists in isolating them from fields that we wish to protect. This is done by means of furrows and poison bait. A furrow should be plowed throwing the furrow away from the crop protected. This leaves the steep side facing the worms. The furrow should be 6 to 8 inches deep.

They will have difficulty in over coming this barrier. Then on lighter soils it is well to make a dust mulch on the furrow that has been turned over toward the damaged or infested land. Bait should then be broadcast for about a twenty foot strip on the edges of the infested field. In case of severe outbreaks, the bait should probably be scattered through the entire field. It might be well also to scatter a little bait in the margins of the fields to be protected.

Poison bait is being supplied by state agencies and farmers are requested to report any outbreaks of the insect to the county agents office, whereupon poison bait will be supplied them. The important thing in the control of the army worm as in the grasshopper control is to catch the outbreak in its early stages. In that way the insect is easier to control and there is less danger of similar outbreak occuring the following year.

Safetygrams
BY
FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

During these vacation days every driver of an automobile has an added responsibility - to watch out for those youngsters on the streets.

Children listen to our warnings and instructions to be careful when crossing streets, but, as we all know, they forget very rapidly, and when they are engaged in a spirited game of tag our words of caution are completely erased from our minds. That is why we motorists must learn to anticipate seeing a boy or girl dash suddenly accross the street without a sideward glance.

We often become impatient and angry with youngsters for these thoughtless acts, but remember, their's is a carefree life. We cannot expect them to keep serious thoughts in mind constantly.

Lets give the kids a break and be just a little more alert when we sit behind the wheel of our automobile. That is one way we can make life safer for our children.

The result of the work was very fine, both congregations going beyond expectation with considerable interest being shown in the work of the church. Rev Fjelstad was accompanied by Rev. ALL COUNTIES FEEL TAX REDUCTION

The state real estate tax was drastically reduced in every county in Minnesota for 1937 (taxes payable in 1938) with the state tax commission.

In no county has the reduction of the state tax been less than 21 per cent. The average reduction for the entire state is 24.1 per cent. In dollars, this means a savings to state property tax payers of $3,588,644.

The property tax reduction—won by Governor Benson and the liberals in the Legislature last year—will likely be even greater next year, as the 10 mill levy won by the liberals remains in effect at least until July 1, 1939. The 10-mill levy for state purposes is the lowest for the past eight years.

Flies Atlantic in Second-Hand 'Crate'

Douglas P. Corrigan, young American aviator who flew the Atlantic ocean in a second-hand, nine-year-old single-motor monoplane which he bought for $900. Previously making a non-stop transcontinental flight from California to New York, Corrigan took off from Floyd Bennett field and landed at Baldonnel, Ireland, 28 hours and 13 minutes later. Refused government permission for the flight, he left the field saying Los Angeles was his destination. On landing he said he had made a mistake in his direction.

HELPS HIS PUTTS

There is nothing orthodox about Leo Diegel's style of golf play as witness his "standing-sitting" putting style, demonstrated at the recent Professional Golf association's meet at Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa. Diegel says his stance is the "most accurate method in the world. It isn't pretty to look at, I'll admit, but it's sound."

INSULL PASSES

Memories of the titanic days when he was the utility king of America were recalled in the recent death of Samuel Insull in Paris. The famous Chicagoan passed away at the age of seventy-eight. The utility company empire he erected in his heyday crashed after the 1929 stock market panic, causing the loss of billions to investors. Insull, who came to America as a poor young man, rose rapidly to success. He was secretary to Thomas A. Edison for a number of years before he entered business in Chicago.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Grandmother's Prize Quilt.

IT WAS a great day on an upstate New York farm more than a half century ago. The biggest pumpkins, the finest apples and the sleekest live stock were being loaded to take to the Fair. Grandmother announced that she was taking her silk crazy patchwork quilt. The family disapproved. The quilt glowed with the richest taffetas and satins of "best" dresses of those they knew and loved.

All that winter the red ribbons and blue ribbons, won by prize pumpkins and apples and farm animals adorned the mantel shelf. But Grandmother, placidly stitching away in her rocking chair, had tucked away in the pocket of her voluminous skirt, the only cash prize that anyone brought home from the Fair. Her crazy patch quilt is still a thing of beauty and a center of interest. It is perfectly at home in a modern living room today. Here is a corner of it and the leaflet offered herewith tells you how to make this kind of quilt and gives detailed instructions for dozens of stitches and combinations of stitches to be used for embroidering crazy patchwork.

NOTE: If you wish to use these weekly articles for reference paste them in a scrapbook, as they are not included in either Sewing Book No. 1 or 2. Book 1, Sewing for the Home Decorator, covers curtains, slipcovers, dressing tables; Book 2 illustrates 90 embroidery stitches with numerous applications; doll clothes and gift items. Order by number, enclosing 25 cents for each book desired. If you order both books, leaflet on making crazy quilts will be included free. For leaflet only send 5 cents in stamps to cover cost and mailing. Address: Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

C.I.O. Proposes a Purge

MORE than 40 members of congress are marked for C. I. O. opposition in the fall elections by a blacklist formulated by John L. Lewis and given out by E. L. Oliver, executive vice president of Labor's Non-Partisan league, the political agency of the Committee for Industrial Organization. Oliver said the opposition to those named was based chiefly on their stand on the wage-hour bill. He indicated it merely was a coincidence that almost without exception those marked for defeat also fought Mr. Roosevelt's government reorganization and Supreme court packing bills.

John L. Lewis

Ten of the fourteen members of the house rules committee, which blocked consideration of the wage-hour measure for many months, were named on the blacklist. Chairman John J. O'Connor was not included but Oliver said he was not in favor with the league.

Among the Democratic rules committee members marked for opposition were Rep. E. E. Cox of Georgia, opponent of administration policies in the house; Rep. Howard W. Smith of Virginia, against whom James Roosevelt and Thomas G. (Tommy the Cork) Corcoran have put up a young radical, William E. Dodd Jr.; and Rep. Lawrence Lewis of Colorado, chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee.

The other Democratic members marked for the purge were Representatives William J. Driver of Arkansas; J. Bayard Clark of North Carolina and Martin Dies of Texas.

All four Republican committee members were on the blacklist. They are Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts; Carl E. Mapes of Michigan; J. Will Taylor of Tennessee; and Donald H. McLean of New Jersey.

Included in the Lewis blacklist are Senators Tydings of Maryland, Adams of Colorado and Lonergan of Connecticut.

Among the Democratic representatives marked for opposition are Hatton W. Sumners of Texas, A. P. Lamneck of Ohio, Leo Kocialkowski of Illinois, R. L. Doughton of North Carolina, H. B. Steagall of Alabama, C. F. Lea of California, Fred Cummings of Colorado, C. I. White of Idaho, R. L. De Rouen of Louisiana, John Rankin and Will Whittington of Mississippi, H. B. Coffee of Nebraska, Sam McReynolds of Tennessee, J. I. Mansfield, Fritz Lanahan and M. H. West of Texas, S. O. Bland of Virginia and Joe Smith of West Virginia.

'Sneak' Flight Over Ocean

DOUGLAS P. CORRIGAN, a young airplane motor expert from California, couldn't get permission from the air commerce bureau to fly across the Atlantic, so he started off secretly from Floyd Bennett field, New York, and landed at Baldonnel, Ireland, 28 hours and 13 minutes later.

The remarkable feature of the flight was that it was made in a rickety old single-motored Curtiss Robin plane that was not equipped with navigation instruments, radio or the ordinary safety devices. Corrigan did not even carry a parachute.

Having neither flight permit, landing papers nor passport, Corrigan laughingly declared in Dublin that he had intended to fly back to California but set his magnetic compass wrong and flew in the opposite direction. His was the sixth west-east solo flight across the Atlantic. In the opposite direction only Mollison and Beryl Markham have been successful.

Veteran flyers said Corrigan's feat was accomplished against odds of 100 to 1. He himself told the people in Dublin "it was just dumb luck that I got here."

American Minister John Cudahy took care of the aviator at the legation. It was decided that the adventurer should return to this side by boat.

British Monarchs in Paris

KING GEORGE VI and Queen Elizabeth of England went to Paris for a state visit of four days and this was regarded as a vitally important event politically. Apparently it was undertaken to let the dictator countries know that Great Britain and France would continue to stand firmly as allies.

Britain's foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax; the French premier, Edouard Daladier, and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet held political talks to discuss the world situation during the visit.

Every precaution to insure the safety of the visiting monarchs was taken by the French, fully 100,000 police, reserve officers and soldiers being mobilized to look after them.

Wheat Allotment

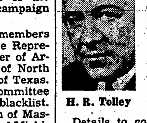
H. R. TOLLEY, AAA administrator, announced a national wheat allotment for fall and spring planting of not more than 55,000,000 acres — the minimum allowable under the act.



H. R. Tolley

The action, which came as the result of the 967,000,000-bushel yield forecast for this year on a seeded acreage of 80,000,000, came in the form of an order signed by M. L. Wilson, acting secretary of agriculture.

Details to cover the state allotments on this 30 per cent reduction basis are expected to result in protests in winter wheat areas where the seeding will get under way this fall, despite the minimum loan of 59 to 60 cents a bushel announced by the AAA in hope that a sizable part of the 1938 crop will be kept on the farms.

"The acreage allotment provided for in the agricultural adjustment act of 1938 puts into effect one more phase of the general AAA wheat program," Tolley said. "Both this acreage allotment and the wheat loan are a part of the ever-normal granary program. Loans in years of surplus help farmers hold over their surplus for years of shortage. Acreage allotments keep the surplus within bounds and help maintain prices and income of farmers.

"This acreage allotment contemplates maintaining adequate supplies in this country for domestic consumption, for our usual share of the world export trade, and for adequate reserves equal to 30 per cent of a normal year's domestic consumption and exports."

The order placed the total available supply for the current marketing year at 1,147,000,000 bushels, and the "normal supply" level, as provided for in the farm act, at 866,000,000.

Queen Marie Dies

DOWAGER QUEEN MARIE of Rumania, who had been ill for a year, died at her summer residence at Bucharest, mourned by the entire nation. King Carol, her son, was at her bedside as she passed away. Marie was an English princess, granddaughter of Victoria, when she married Ferdinand, who ascended the Rumanian throne in 1914. She attained international prominence by her activities and led Rumania to enter the World war on the side of the allies. In 1926 Queen Marie made a spectacular five-weeks' tour of the United States.

Insull Dies in Paris

SAMUEL INSULL, one-time chief of an American public utilities empire valued at many millions of dollars, fell dead in the subway in Paris, France. Mrs. Insull, the former Gladys Wallis of the stage, was there with him and she took the body to London for burial.

Insull came to the United States from England when twenty years of age. After working for a time with Thomas A. Edison he went to Chicago and began building up his great financial structure. In 1932 his personal fortune was estimated at $100,000,000 and he owned or controlled various big electric and gas companies. Then the depression came and Insull engaged in a struggle with eastern capitalists who sought possession of his properties. The great crash ensued in which the Insulls and thousands of others lost enormous sums. Insull fled to Europe and was indicted on mail fraud charges. He was arrested at Istanbul, Turkey and brought back for trial but was acquitted.

Despite his financial mistakes and misfortunes, Insull was admittedly one of the ablest organizers of public utilities the world has known. Much of the financing of the corporations in his control was accomplished through holding companies and investors for many years profited handsomely by his success. He was a patron of the arts and deeply interested in agriculture.

Wage-Hour Chief

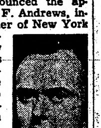
WHILE in California President Roosevelt announced the appointment of Elmer F. Andrews, industrial commissioner of New York state, to be administrator of the new wage-hour law. This selection was a disappointment to the southerners, who had hoped a resident of their region would be named.



E.F.Andrews

Andrews, who is forty-eight years old, lives in Flushing with his wife and three children. Graduated from Rensselaer Polytechnic institute in 1915 as a civil engineer, he built railroads in Cuba and factories in New York, worked for compensation-rating groups, planned civic improvements for the Queensborough Chamber of Commerce, and piloted army planes during the World war. As industrial commissioner, he was largely responsible for New York's "Little Wagner Act," the state minimum wage law for women, extension of unemployment insurance and workmen's compensation. He opposed wage differentials in the federal wage bill, although this feature was enacted into law.

Primaries to Be Probed

SENATOR SHEPPARD'S senate campaign committee voted unanimously to investigate charges of misuse of federal and state funds in the Democratic primaries in Kentucky and Pennsylvania. The committee also disclosed that it has been conducting an inquiry into similar charges in Tennessee.

The social security board also has ordered an investigation in Kentucky into charges by Senator Barkley that state social security agents are playing politics with pension checks.

Hughes' Great Flight

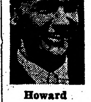
HOWARD HUGHES and his crew of four completed their remarkable flight around the world when they landed at Floyd Bennett airport, New York, 3 days, 19 hours and 17 minutes after starting from that place. They had covered 14,824 miles and made six stops for refueling — at Paris, Moscow, Omsk, Yakutsk, Fairbanks and Minneapolis.



Howard Hughes

They cut more than three days off the record made by Wiley Post in 1933, but Hughes said after landing that he still considered Post's solo flight was the most remarkable job of flying ever done.

On the hop across the Atlantic the time made by Lindbergh was nearly halved.

With Hughes, wealthy sportsman and aviator who financed and organized the flight, were Harry Connor and Thomas Thurlow, navigators; Richard Stoddart, radio operator, and Ed Lund, flight engineer.

Hughes himself was at the controls all the time, but said the robot pilot did all the flying except the takeoffs and landings. Much credit also was given the automatic navigator loaned by the army air corps.

Japan Cancels Olympics

JAPAN evidently thinks the war in China is not near its end. The Tokyo government has cancelled the Olympic games of 1940, dropping all plans to be the host of the world's athletes.

In Tokyo it was said the government's action was due to the cost of financing the games and to military leaders' opposition to a growth of nationalism among the Japanese people.

It was expected the international committee would meet soon to determine the next move. London and Helsingfors, Finland, were mentioned as possible sites for the 1940 games

Cheese--Prince of Proteins

Noted Food Authority Tells Why You Should Eat More of the Food That Is So Rich in Protective Elements.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th St., New York City.

FOR many years, men with an inventive turn of mind have dreamed of creating a product that would concentrate all the important food elements in a small tablet or capsule. They have been inspired by a desire to simplify meal preparation without sacrificing nutritive values.

No one has ever succeeded in making a synthetic food that would both satisfy hunger and properly nourish the body. But all the while, the researchers have overlooked the magnificent possibilities of cheese, one of the most concentrated, nourishing, satisfying and versatile of foods.

Cheese—The Body Builder

Cheese is the most concentrated source of protein known. Moreover, the protein is of such high type that if it were the only body-building food in the diet, given in sufficient quantities, it would be adequate not only to maintain life, but to support normal growth.

One-half pound of American Cheddar cheese will supply all the protein required by an adult for an entire day.

Cheese—The Energy Food

In addition to its rich store of protein, cheese is also a fine source of energy.

A cube of Cheddar cheese one-and-one-eighth inches square provides 100 calories or the equivalent in energy value of the lean meat of one lamb chop or one medium-sized potato. One-half pound of Cheddar cheese furnishes 1,000 calories, about half the daily requirement of an adult leading a sedentary life.

Cheese for Mineral Salts

Because milk is rich in minerals, it follows that cheese, which is made from milk, contains these precious substances in highly concentrated form. It is an excellent source of calcium, the mineral which is responsible for building strong bones and sound teeth, and for keeping the heart beating normally. A one-and-one-fourth inch cube of American Cheddar cheese contains as much calcium as an 8-ounce glass of milk.

The individual who does not care for milk as a beverage can easily obtain the necessary calcium from cheese. But it is practically impossible to get adequate amounts of this mineral without either milk or cheese.

In rennet cheese, phosphorus, as well as calcium, is present in the same proportions as in milk, but is much more highly concentrated. As in milk, these minerals are in a form that is most nearly perfect for easy assimilation. Rennet-curd cheese is always high in sulphur and fairly high in iron. Furthermore, the iron is in the most readily assimilated form.

Cheese and Vitamins

Cheese is a splendid source of vitamin A, which promotes growth and increases resistance to disease. It is especially important for eye health and is necessary to prevent the affliction known as night blindness. The amount of vitamin A varies with the type of cheese, but both American Cheddar and Parmesan cheese are extremely rich in this substance, and cream cheese is an outstanding source. Vitamins B and G are also found in whole milk cheese.

With this wealth of food values, one would expect to find cheese appearing on the menu in some form every day. But though the annual production of cheese in the United States exceeds 700,000,000 pounds, it should be much greater. The annual per capita consumption is only 5½ pounds—a woefully small figure when we consider the wide benefits that would result from its greater use.

The failure of American homemakers to use cheese in the amounts that they should is, I believe, due to three factors: first, a lack of knowledge concerning its splendid food values; second, a belief in the old superstition that cheese is not easy to digest; and third, failure to take advantage of the many ways in which it can be served.

Digestibility of Cheese

The foregoing outline of its many food values should give a new conception of its place in the diet. As to its digestibility, studies by the United States Department of Agriculture have entirely disproved the fallacy that it is not completely digestible.

It was found that on an average about 95 per cent of the protein and over 95 per cent of the fat of cheese were digested and absorbed. The various kinds of cheese tested were found to compare favorably in digestibility with the food of an average mixed diet. It was also demonstrated experimentally "that there was practically no difference between cheese and meat with respect to ease of digestion, at least in such quantities as are commonly eaten."

There was also a notion that because it is so high in food value, cheese should only be eaten in small quantities. But scientific tests have proven that cheese may be eaten by normal individuals in large quantities, as the principal source of protein, with entirely beneficial effects upon health.

Place of Cheese in the Diet

There is a case on record of a young man who lived for two years on a daily diet consisting of one-half pound of cheese, a one-pound loaf of whole wheat bread and two pounds of fruit. While this limited diet might prove monotonous to some people, it is possible to utilize cheese as the easiest method of providing important food value, varying the diet, and simplifying meal preparation. For there are more than 200 distinctive varieties of cheese listed by the department of agriculture, ranging from the smooth, delicately flavored cream cheese, which may be given to very young children, to the sharp tangy cheese which is especially popular with men. Fortunately, almost every type can be purchased in packaged form, in sizes that are convenient for large and small families, making it possible to enjoy a wide variety.

Cheese can be used as a main dish; in salads or sandwiches; as a sauce for vegetables; as a dessert. It is desirable at the same time to serve bulky foods, such as fruits and vegetables. Cheese may also be combined advantageously with carbohydrate foods. This is because the balanced diet requires more carbohydrates than protein. And cheese is essentially a protein food, interchangeable with meats and fish.

Bright Prints For Your Home Frocks

ONE is for young figures, one for mature. Both of these dresses are smart and new in fashion, and both are pretty enough to wear when company comes, as well as for working round the house. Each has a convenient pocket. These designs are gay print, with ricrac to match.

If You Wear Misses' Sizes.

Make yourself the charming, full-skirted dirndl-type frock with shirring at the waistline, on the shoulders, and on the nice big pocket. Everything about it is very young and attractive—especially the snug basque top, square neckline and tie belt. In a gay print, with ricrac to match, this will be one of your most flattering cottons.

If You Wear Women's Sizes.

Then you'll want the slenderizing dress, built on classic shirtwaist lines, with a plain, slim-hipped skirt. Fullness beneath smooth shoulder pieces gives it correct fit over the bust. Notice there is a slight blouse at the waistline, for freedom of action. That narrow roll collar, finishing the V-neck, is becoming to full faces. This, too, will be pretty in any tubfast cotton that you like, trimmed with ricrac.

The Patterns.

1567 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 4½ yards of 35-inch material; 9 yards of ricrac to trim; 1⅔ yards ribbon for tie belt.

1529 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 4⅛ yards of 35-inch material; 2¼ yards of ricrac to trim.

Communication

Viking, Minnesota
July 25, 1938

Dear Editor:

I have received letters from Governor Benson, and all the endorsed candidates for State Office, all voicing their thanks and appreciation for what they term the splendid vote they got in Marshall County in the primary election, and asking me to convey or transmit their appreciation for the vote they got to the precinct captains and as I have nearly 60 captains to bring this greeting to I have to ask the press to act as a medium and bring my message to our loyal helpers who do not ask for any personal favor but gladly give of their time and service for our cause. I want to join Governor Benson and the other boys in thanking our precinct Captains as it is largely through their unselfish efforts we were able to thwart Hjalmer Petersons and Harold Stassen's plot to defeat Governor Benson, and I say to you boys, I am proud to have worked with such a splendid lot of loyal workers, and I want to thank you and the voters for for the splendid result of our primary election.

Very truly yours,
G. A. Sustad

141 Drivers Lose License

In June 141 drivers' licenses were revoked in Minnesota, according to the monthly report to the drivers license unit of the Minnesota Highway department.

For the same period, 61 license were suspended. Thirty-one licenses were returned to those whose suspension period ended and who filed proof of financial responsibility.

Twenty-nine of the revocations were ordered in Hennepin county 25 in St. Louis and 17 in Ramsey.

Intoxication accounted for 136 of the revocations. The age bracket from 21 to 30 accounted for 51 of the revocations and on that basis apparently is the most dangerous driving age. Only three women drivers lost their licenses during the month in comparison to 138 men.

Regina Nohre of Spring Grove Mr. and Mrs. Harold Nohre, Mr. and Mrs O. H. Nohre visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nohre Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Art Krogen and daughters of International Falls visited friends here Sunday. They were dinner guests at the Jesse Sorum home.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Garfve and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Ole Larson and family, Mrs. S. H. Nohre and Agnes Conklin and son were Sunday visitors at the Henry Nohre home.

Patrol Nabs Auto Leggers

Special inspectors and the Highway patrol of the Minnesota Highway department are obtaining real results in their chase after out-of-state, unlicensed car dealers who thought they might find "easy pickings" in Minnesota.

To date 57 of these car bootleggers have been apprehended by Highway department employees, 497 motor vehicles impounded and 14 operators have been convicted and sentenced. But according to M. J. Murray, chief of patrol, a number of these shady operators are still plying their illegal trade in the state.

Several dodges have been tried by the foreign car vendors since the patrol took out after them. The latest, according to Chief Murray, is to make a connection with some junk yard and to obtain Minnessto plates which they use until they sell the vehicles traveling under them and then they transfer the plates to a new batch of cars coming into the state.

Chief Murray said he is out to kill illegal commerce in second hand cars and will continue with undercover men until he has the "racket" licked in Minnesota.

Lost $400 In Hold Up

Sam Kytola, manager of the Coop Oil Company of Middle River was stopped and robbed on the highway near Steiner on Saturday afternoon about three o'clock. Mr. Kytola had made a trip to the Red Lake County Bank at Red Lake Falls where he does his banking and was on his way home when the robbery took place. According to his report of the stick-up, two men pulled up alongside of his car and forced him so close to the ditch that he had to stop. As soon as he stopped one of the men ordered him to hand over his money. This he refused to do and the robber proceeded to cut his hand with some sharp instrument. As he struggled with the first man the second one stepped out and pointed a gun at him. When he saw he was licked, Mr. Kytola handed over his money, some over $400.00 in all.

After taking his money the robbers took the keys for his new car and left in a hurry. Mr. Kytola got so excited he did not get their license number but he got a good description of the two men. He notified the Sheriffs office at Warren at once. Deputy Sheriff Marshall Kays came out to investigate the matter.

Find Bodies of Three Youths Lost In Lake of Woods

Treacherous Lake of the Woods Friday gave up the bodies of three St. Paul youths who attempted to cross its stormy waters in a frail canoe as authorities pieced together grim details of the tragedy.

Sorrowful parents of the trio, Robert Anderson, 20, Otto Geving, 21, and John Effinger, 20, were to claim the bodies Friday night at Neumiller's resort a half mile from where the wild waves strewed the bodies ashore over a mile stretch.

The bodies, decomposed since the sail-rigged craft capsized somewhere out on the big traverse of the lake 12 days ago, had not been identified, late Friday.

Coroner D. R. Borrows of Lake of the Woods county said identification would have to be made by the fragments of clothing remaining on the youths.

Game Warden Art Emme of Warroad, cruising the shoreline along in a dorry powered with an outboard motor, discovered the first body shortly after noon. He notified the coroner and Sheriff J. R. Morris. The other two were located upon arrival of the authorities.

Signs of a teriffic struggle to escape the vengeful lake were seen by the coroner.

"They were probably miles out on the lake when a wave bowled over the canoe," Burrows said. "Then it is probable they clung to its sides, for hours, perhaps, until they couldn't any more."

Pockets in the clothing were empty, and two of the bodies wore only one shoe, indicating the trio used every means to lighten their task.

He said the bodies were lodged in the rock and sand of the irregular shore. The first was about a mile from the last. All showed the evidence of prolonged exposure to water and the elements. None was recognizable.

The trio left St. Paul July 3 on a vacation trip into the Lake of the Woods area. When the drownings occurred, they were traveling from the northwest angle 20 miles across the lake toward Warroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Doran and son Elmer of Plummer visited at the K. T. Knutson home Friday.

Albert Fredrickson, R. Eldvick and Violet Furan visited at the A. Bennes home Sunday.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Hoffman of Michigan Will Test Freedom of the Press . . . Texas Democrats Nominate a Yankee

David E. Lilienthal, TVA director, at left, trying to explain to the congressional investigating committee the methods by which TVA "yardstick" rates for power were established. Next to him is J. A. Kurg, chief power planning engineer; and at extreme right is Dr. A. E. Morgan, the deposed head of the authority.

CLARE E. HOFFMAN, Republican congressman from Michigan, has challenged the National Labor Relations board in the matter of constitutional guaranties of freedom of speech and of the press. He sent to the board a letter recalling that the body recently declared the circulation of a house speech by Hoffman constituted an unfair labor practice under the Wagner act. In the speech Hoffman declared that known communists were active in the Committee for Industrial Organization and denounced C. I. O sitdown strikes as communistic methods.

"This speech," Hoffman's letter said, "was republished, with illustrations, by the Constitutional Educational league of New Haven, Conn.

"I am now offering, and intend to continue to offer, to furnish to any and all interested persons, including employees, employers, or others, copies of this address for circulation at the actual cost of printing, and to recommend that employees might well read this address before joining the C. I. O."

Commenting on the letter, Representative Hoffman said that the board's ruling would preclude the distribution of newspapers containing news items or editorials critical of any organization or of activities of the labor board.

The American Federation of Labor charged in its official organ, the American Federationist, that maladministration of the Wagner act is threatening American democracy. The publication printed an editorial bluntly accusing the National Labor Relations board of promoting the rival Committee for Industrial Organization "which seeks to set up a dual labor movement despite all the social and economic waste which dualism involves.

"Every agency of the government that gives status to the C. I. O gives the same recognition," it continued. "Surely this is not freedom for workers to choose their own unions and representatives for collective bargaining, but union development under government patronage."

Texas Picks a Yankee

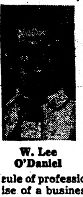
TEXAS Democrats in their primary selected a Yankee to be the next governor of the state. W. Lee O'Daniel, born in Ohio and raised on a Kansas farm, received a clear majority over 11 other candidates for the nomination which is equivalent to election.



W. Lee O'Daniel

O'Daniel is a flour jobber. He campaigned with a hillbilly band and a platform that included the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule, ridicule of professional politicians, promise of a business administration and more liberal pensions for the aged.

More important nationally was the fact that Rep. Maury Maverick, leader of a considerable bloc in congress, was defeated for renomination by Paul Kilday, a San Antonio attorney. Maverick is an enthusiastic New Dealer. Kilday says he will not be a rubber stamp.

Two other administration backers were defeated for renomination. They were Representatives W. D. MacFarlane and Morgan Sanders.

Third Term Boost

GOV. FRANK MURPHY of Michigan told Democratic leaders of the state that Michigan must keep its mind open on the possibility of a third term for President Roosevelt. Said he: "The welfare of the nation and continued success of the New Deal depends on President Roosevelt running for a third term, then we must be prepared for that."

Murphy's statement is only another indication that the third term movement is growing rapidly. Various groups have petitioned the President to run again in 1940, and Republican National Chairman Hamilton says WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins launched a third term boom the other day when he asserted that 90 per cent of those receiving relief would vote for Mr. Roosevelt again.

Of course Mr. Roosevelt says nothing about all this, but political observers seem to agree that if the 1940 convention does not appear ready to get together on a candidate who would and could carry on the New Deal, the President might well consider it necessary for him to accept another nomination. Breaking a precedent wouldn't worry him.

To Expand Business Loans

CHAIRMAN JESSE JONES of the Reconstruction Finance corporation announced a new policy for forcing the expansion of business loans, by which competitor banks will be pitted against each other. When a loan applicant approved by the RFC is turned down by his local bank an RFC agent will contact the bank and try to persuade it to participate in the loan. If it refuses the RFC agent then will contact a competitor bank.

Jesse Jones

In its most optimistic monthly business survey of the year, the federal reserve board said industrial production is on the increase and available data indicate that in July the index will show a considerable rise.

The business summary particularly pointed out healthy business signs, noting that activitity in many industries was on the increase contraseasonally.

Hull Prods Cardenas

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL, out of patience with Mexico, sent to President Cardenas a sharp note protesting Mexico's failure to pay for American owned farm lands that the Mexican government has seized. Mr. Hull asked that the matter be submitted to arbitration. The secretary has in this the full approval of President Roosevelt, for the administration feels that Cardenas is endangering the "Good Neighbor" relations between the two countries.

Sen. Key Pittman of the senate foreign relations committee also backs up Mr. Hull, asserting that if Mexico refuses to arbitrate she will be subject to economic penalties.

"Mexico," he said, "then would forfeit all the financial and other voluntary aid we have given her through our spirit of friendship and desire for peace, prosperity, and upbuilding of that country."

Spanish Rebels Gain

SPANISH insurgents started a drive in Estramadura region in the southwest as a feint to prevent reinforcement of the loyalist eastern front, and found the loyalist defenses were astonishingly weak. So they went ahead in a whirlwind attack that gave them possession of 23 important towns and villages.

The Barcelona loyalist government announced acceptance of the international plan to purge Spain of its foreign forces. Insurgent General Franco was expected to follow suit shortly and accept the plan framed by Great Britain and sponsored by the 26-nation nonintervention committee.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Interprets the Modern Conception of Meat

Nationally Known Food Authority Explains Why It Rates As a Top-Notch Food.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York City

AMERICANS spend from one-fourth to one-third of their total food budget for meat. In order to discover whether this expenditure is justified, let us examine the nutritive value of meat, and consider its contribution to the diet.

Almost everybody likes the flavor of meat, from the man who considers that no meal is complete without it, to the child who instinctively eats the meat on his plate before he touches the other foods. The desire for meat is one of the strongest human appetites.

For centuries, man accepted this craving for meat as an indication that it was essential to his well being. But with the advance in civilization, there was an increase in many diseases, and for a period of years, meat was blamed as being a contributing cause to kidney trouble, rheumatism, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries and gout.

In recent years, there has been a careful investigation of the possible association between meat and disease. In the light of our newer knowledge, the old notions have been discarded. And in many cases, meat now has a place in the treatment of the diseases that it was once believed to cause!

Composition of Meat

Meat is a protein food of the highest type. It is useful both for repairing the millions of cells that are worn out daily and for building the new tissues that are necessary for growth in childhood. The proportion of protein varies with the kind of meat, and the cut. In beef, lamb and veal, it comprises between 14 and 26 per cent of the edible portion.

The other constituents of meat are fats, water, minerals, extractives, enzymes and pigments.

The amount of fat present is an important factor in determining the fuel value of meat. And the more fat it contains, the less protein will be found in a given unit of weight. The different cuts of pork contain less protein than corresponding cuts of beef and lamb, with the exception of lean ham, lean pork chops and tenderloin.

Meat as a Blood Builder

Both glandular and muscle meats are rich in the blood-building mineral, iron, and meat also contains copper. The glandular organs, particularly liver, have great value in the prevention and treatment of anemia. Pernicious anemia baffled physicians for many years until, in 1926, two noted American scientists discovered that liver contains a principle which stimulates red blood cell formation. This discovery has been ranked with the discovery of insulin as one of the greatest in our times.

Meat also contains a high percentage of phosphorus. It is poor in calcium, however, and this necessary substance must be obtained in adequate amounts from milk, cheese and green leafy vegetables.

The Vitamins of Meat

Lean muscle meats cannot be considered as an important source of any vitamin except G. This vitamin is necessary for the prevention of pellagra, and also helps to prolong the vigorous middle years and to ward off old age. Beef, pork and lamb muscle contain approximately the same amounts of vitamin G, but liver has been found to contain approximately 10 times as much as muscle tissue.

Some vitamin A is found in fat meats, but liver is also much richer in this vitamin than muscle tissue. Vitamin B is present in lean meat, especially lean pork, which has a considerably higher content than lamb, mutton or beef.

Value of Meat Extractives

Meat contains small amounts of extractives. It is partly because one misses their savory flavor that a meal without meat often fails to tempt or satisfy the appetite.

The extractives indirectly aid in the digestion of meat proteins because they stimulate the flow of the digestive juices. Experiments have demonstrated that meat induces a flow of gastric juice in direct proportion to the amount consumed.

This calling forth of great physiological activity of the stomach is one reason why meat is said to be the most satisfying of all foods, and to "stick to the ribs" longest.

Digestibility of Meat

In considering the nutritive worth of any food it is necessary not only to analyze its contributions to the diet, but to determine how well its nutrients are utilized by the body. Meat has a high food value because its protein is digested rapidly and thoroughly. Tests show that 97 to 98 per cent of meat protein is digested and absorbed. The length of time meat remains in the stomach will depend upon various factors, such as the amount of fat present, the method of cooking and the degree of mastication. But there is no marked difference in the thoroughness with which the different kinds of meat are digested.

Since it is so completely digested, however, meat supplies little bulk, and it is therefore essential that an abundance of leafy vegetables and fruits should be eaten at the same time.

There has been considerable discussion regarding the place of meat in the child's diet.

There are the same good reasons for using meat in the diet of the child as in the diet of the grown-up. Moreover, the child's protein requirement is greater than that of the adult, in proportion to his body weight.

At the beginning of the second year, many authorities advise that small servings of tender and finely minced beef, chicken, lamb or liver may be given about three times a week. As the child becomes older, he may have meat more often and as his ability to chew increases, he may be given larger pieces.

Some Fallacies Regarding Meat

Many people believe that veal is less completely digested than other meats. But it has been demonstrated that even very young veal digests as rapidly and as completely as beef. It has also been held that red meats are less digestible and, therefore, less desirable than white meats. There is no evidence to support this point of view.

Someone with a gift for concise expression once remarked: "No meat—no man!" His point was well taken. For considering its delicious flavor, essential food values, and ease of preparation, it is easy to agree that THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR MEAT.

SIX GUNS and CARPET TACKS

A Gallos County Story

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

MOST times, here in Gallos county, a six gun's a-got just a leetle the best of the argument, but there was one time when the difference between two gun toters was a box of carpet tacks.

See that tree a-standin' out there, there at the bend in the road. Well, that's where they finally lynched Butch Manton.

Folks just heared that some of Butch's friends was a-plannin' to ride in to town and take him out o' jail. And Butch a-bein' a cow thief like he was, they just up and taken him out and strung him to that there tree. And Butch'd been livin' right, like as not, if it wasn't for them carpet tacks.

It was right here in the Happy Hour where things was a-beginnin'. Butch was at the bar when Johnnie Rucker comes in and was a leetle slow when he said somethin' 'bout Butch stealin' 50 head of steers from Johnnie, but Johnnie did nick Butch's right foot as the lead from Butch's gun went a-tearin' through his own heart.

Course, Butch'd shot Johnnie without givin' him a chance, but Butch still had that gun in his hand when he backs out of the Happy Hour.

'Fore long after the shootin, Sheriff Tom rides into town and hears bout the shootin'. It kinda hits him hard on account of Johnnie bein' a pal of his'n, and he don't wait for reason why there ain't been no posse after Butch. He lights out for the Diablo canyon country down close to the border where Butch and his gang has holed up for years.

Butch oughta gone right on to the border, but he don't. He stops by the shack, sends them riders of his'n on with them steers he stole from Johnnie and waits back to see if he can't do somethin' 'bout that foot of his'n.

He's a doin' a leetle doctorin' of his own when Tom rides up. Tom ain't never been a fool 'fore, but a-thinkin' 'bout Johnnie musta got him off, 'cause Butch gits the drop on him and takes Tom's gun but Tom does manage to kick a table over and put out a candle, the only light that's in the room.

No sir, Butch don't get away from Tom and Tom lives to bring Butch Manton right to the jail from which he was taken and hung on that tree at the bend of the road, down yonder.

You see, Tom, he's been out a-tackin' up signs when Johnnie was shot. Well he'd just brung them tacks long with him, and them tacks is how he catched Butch.

He just spread them on the floor quiet-like while he was movin' around there in the dark and a-fore long Butch steps on one with his foot that ain't got no boot on.

Butch's kinda surprised and lets out a hoop and Tom just grabs in the direction of that hoop.

New York, July 6. — Twenty-five trucks, each carrying nearly 15 tons of Uncle Sam's silver, started today one of the biggest hauling jobs ever undertaken - the removal of $1,290,000,000 worth of bar silver to the government's new storage vault at West Point, 50 miles away.

Soon after dawn, the trucks left the United States assay office here with a convoy of 50 gaurdsmen carrying rifles.

One coast gaurdsman sat by each driver. another in the back of each truck guarding the load-so bulky it made danger of robbery negligible. The trucks were closed but not armored.

They crept along at about 12 miles an hour.

It is a lot easier to back into trouble than to back out of it. Backing dangers are a source of worry to truck drivers who do not have helpers. Statistics prove that there is good cause for worry.

Whenever possible, backing up should be avoided. For example, where you can park parallel instead of at an angle, do so.

If you must back, know the way is clear for you to do so. Always back slowly.

Issued Weekly From The Home Of The Biggest Co-operative Creamery In Marshall County

H. O. Hanson, Publisher; Mrs. Mabel Hanson, Editor & Bus. Mgr. Holt, Marshall County, Minnesota, Friday, Aug. 12, 1938. Volume 28, Number 15.

Baudette Gets Fish Hatchery

The new cooperative fish hatchery on Lake of the Woods will be located on Winterroad river, four miles northwest of Baudette, and work will start on the building within a month, according to Conservation Commissioner Herman C. Wenzel.

The new hatchery will have a capacity of 200,000,000 pike fry, and operating expenses will be shared equally by the Lake of the Woods, Commercial Fishermen's Association and the Division of Game and Fish, with the output divided evenly between border lakes where commercial fishing is done, and inland lakes.

The location on Winterroad river was decided upon after extensive surveys and research indicated that it was the best location on the Lake of the Woods. Water supply is, of course, the primary consideration, and this, together with the proximity of the location to the lakes being stocked, makes it ideal for that purpose.

The plant will be ready for operation next spring, and will be a valuable addition to the fish propagation facilities of Minnesota which this year has distributed approximately one billion fish in its lakes and streams.

Won Trip To Washington

Helen Haugen from the Thief Lake School taught by Ferne Peterson of Holt was awarded a free trip to Washington on her drawing illustrating the Northwest Territory. She competed with first and second grade pupils in both city and rural schools She left Sunday to join the three other pupils in the higher divisions who were sent from Minnesota. Congratulations to Miss Peterson and her pupil.

C. O. Saastad left Wednesday for Thief River Falls to visit a few days with his son Harold and family and daughter Mrs. Maruska and family.

Ditch Meeting Was Held

The farmers of eastern Marshall county held a mass meeting at Grygla on Friday evening to discuss matters as to where they were to put in the new proposed ditches they have been promised to relieve the flood situation. A committee of two men from each township in the east end of the county will be chosen to lay the plans for the new work.

A. C. McMillan, Gatzke, was chosen chairman of the committee and this committee will also have charge of signing up men for the project which will be sponsored by the county and federal government. It was brought out at the meeting that all which remains to be done now before the work could be started was, to have two hundred men signed up for the WPA. The government requires that so many men be alloted to the job before they put in their federal dredges to do the ditching.

This project will call for two ditches to drain the east end of the county, will extend only to the Beltrami county line. Beltrami county will have to take action in the matter of floods for themselves as Marshall county did.

Look Out For Army Worms

Most of the army worms have now entered the pupa or resting stage, according to observations of E. P. Gibson of the emergency staff of the State Department of Agriculture, who was designated to make a thorough survey of the army worm situation in Kittson and Marshall counties. The pupae look like bright brown capsules three-quarters of an inch long, and are found just beneath the surface of the soil in fields or fence rows where the worms have fed and grown to maturity. From these will emerge brownish gray night-flying moths, each female of which will lay 500 or more eggs to hatch into the September brood of worms.

The rapidity with which these pests multiply makes them very destructive to grain and grass crops. Poison bait has been spread wherever outbreaks have been observed, and this poison bait has been very effective. Farmers, county agents, the WPA, the State Highway department, and the State Department of Agriculture have all co-operated in combatting the army worm menace which might easily develop into a plague as serious as that of the grasshoppers if not checked. No time has been lost as soon as infestations have been reported and losses have been kept at a minimum, although individual fields in some instances have been damaged from 10 to 100 percent overnight. Extreme alertness is necessary, and even slight infestations should be reported immediately to the county agent's office where free poison bait is available.

Some fields are being found daily where the worms are still at work in millet, corn, flax and and other late grain, and again in September any crops still green are apt to be attacked.

So far the damage from army worms has been quite in spots. But that is the way in which grasshoppers started, and the importance of remedial measures cannot be over-estimated.

Where the army worms have now entered the pupa stage, springtoothing or discing the land will unearth thousonds of the pupas and expose them to the birds and the weather. Clean cultivation at all times is effective.

Chas. Ommodt, Commissioner of Agriculture states that extreme watchfulness cannot be too greatly emphasized. Walter Johnson of the Department of Agriculture who has supervised the army worm control work in the several northwest counties states there are three broods each year: Spring, July and in September. Farmers should report to the county agent when they find any worms or pupa.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Anderson and family and Elmer Johnson of Minneapolis spent the week end visiting at the Andrew Tobiason home. Muriel Anderson who has spent some time in this community returned home with them.

45 Day Duck Season

A 45 day season on waterfowl is announced by Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the United States Biological Survey. This is welcome news to Minnesota sportsmen who have consistently purchased a greater number of federal duck stamps than hunters in any other state. Last year, Minnesota hunters bought 14 percent of all the stamps sold.

Under the new regulations, just announced, the daily bag limit will be ten birds, with a possession limit of two daily bags, or 20. Allowance is made for hunters who make the mistake of shooting some of the protected birds - - canvasback, ruddy, redhead, and buffalohead-and three of these birds in the aggregate may be held in the daily bag.

The season for the northern zone, including Minnesota, will be from October 1 to November 14. Hours will be the same as formerly, from 7 a. m until 4 p. m.

In every respect, except that of hours, this is the season recommended in Jannary by Conservation Commissioner Herman C. Wenzel as a part of his general conservation program.

The program was adopted by the Midwest Conference of Game and Fish Officials held at Omaha June 7, 8, and 9. There the recommendation was made by the Minnesota delegation.

At the International Conference of Conservation Officials held at Ashville, North Carolina, on June 28 and 29, Director Harry E. Speaker of the division of game and fish, and Commissioner Wenzel carried the proposal to that body and to Dr. Gabrielson.

"Whether or not the 45-day season is a direct result of our activities", says Mr. Wenzel, "we do feel that we are fully justified in having made the proposal and supporting it to a conclusion. Primarily, the longer season is based upon extensive surveys which show that waterfowl have made a marked comeback, and with improved nesting conditions, the longer season, in the opinion of experts, will not hinder the increase in waterfowl."

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Larson and family visited relatives at Mentor and Crookston Sunday.

New State Park Proves Popular

Canadian and North Dakota visitors predominate among the four to five thousand people who enjoy Two Rivers State Park at Bronson every Sunday, according to Harold W. Lathrop, director of state parks.

Two Rivers State Park is a new development and covers an area of 711 acres including the new Lake Floyd Olson where a reservoir of 325 acres has been created by a dam in the river as a water conservation project, Before the construction of this dam, residents of Bronson were virtually without water.

Work on the dam and the development of the park is being carried on by the Works Progress Administration with a company of homeless men encamped there.

Development in the park area has already provided a bathing beach and work is progressing on a bath house and parking lots, as well as landscaping. Picnic facilities and toilet accommodations have been provided. A water tower in the park will be so built that it may be used as an observation tower commanding a view of the surrounding countryside. Planes call for extensive tree planting as there are but few tree in the area at present.

The popularity of the new park, which was established by the 1937 legislature, indicates that it will be one of the most used in the Minnesota park system, providing wholesome recreation for thousands of Minnesota citizens as well as an attraction to residents of neighboring states and provinces in Canada.

In this project, three of the divisions of the department of conservation have cooperated with the federal government. The division of waters lent its facilities for the construction of the dam, the division of parks is interested in the area development, while the division of game and fish has stocked the lake.

* * * *

State parks are not a place where bored and boring people are entertained, but a haven of refuge where average citizens may enjoy nature and healthful recreation, as well as learn more about his native state.

Notice To Students

The local school has received a limited allotment for Student Aid. This allotment is to be divided among needy high school pupils, who will work for assigned number of hours. Any high school pupils who are interested are asked to contact Mr. Karvonen as soon as possible so applications can be accepted before school starts.

Joe and Roy Moline spent a few days in St. Cloud this week.

Poison Grasshoppers Now

Farmers are again urged to spread grasshopper bait on all fields, grass land and roadsides or wherever grasshoppers are found.

Unless this is done we can look for a large crop of grasshoppers in 1939 as was experienced in 1932-33. The adults are now laying eggs and unless bait is spread to kill the grasshoppers a large hatch can be expected next year.

The Federal and State government is furnishing bait free; a mixing station has been set up at Argyle where any person or township can obtain Free all of the bait needed.

Farmers should also be on the lookout for any damages to late crops and bait should by all means be spread to prevent damage.

Achievement Day At Argyle

The public is cordially invited to attend the State Fair Achievement Day for Marshall County, 4-H clubs which will be held August 12 at Argyle in the City Hall beginning at 9:00 a. m. Eight of the county's quota of twelve State Fair trips will be awarded at the close of the day's contests.

Club members enrolled in dairy calf, purebred ewe lamb, purebred gilt and poultry projects will exhibit their animals at Harstad's livery barn. All other exhibits will be in the City Hall. Girls will demonstrate bread baking, cake baking, and several other projects during the day. Clothing and canning exhibits will be on display. There will be demonstrations on the care, laundering and selection of clothing in the afternoon.

The Aryle Commercial Club is offering prizes to the demonstrators in Home Economics. They are also assisting with other arrangements.

Beulah Bennes is spending this week at home with her parents Mr. and Mrs. A. Bennes. She is having a vacation from her duties at the Model Beauty Shop at Thief River Falls.

Shall U. S. Pay Your Doctor? Professional Opinion Divided

by Edward W. Pickard

A. M. A.'S PRESIDENT IRVING ABELL, EDITOR MORRIS FISHBEIN

Domestic

Modern medicine's biggest problem is the middle class, too prosperous for relief, too poor to pay its doctor bills. Although 80 per cent of the nation favors government care for those who cannot pay, the potent American Medical association has constantly frowned on U. S. subsidy.

In Chicago, A. M. A.'s headquarters, 30 physicians have been expelled since 1920 for operating low-cost clinics and advertising their services. Throughout America, depression-ridden medics have twiddled their thumbs while the nation suffered from poor health. What makes the situation more desperate is that acute illness is much more prevalent in the low income brackets than among those who can pay.

Last November a self-appointed committee of 430 doctors revolted against A. M. A.'s high ethical standards and took the stump favoring socialized medicine. Their proposals, all previously rejected by A. M. A., included local, state and federal subsidy for public health work, hospitalization, research and education.

For six months an interested public has been forming opinions. Two weeks ago President Roosevelt's national health conference met at Washington under able Josephine Roche, former head of U. S. health activities as assistant secretary of the treasury. Though they listened attentively to the Roche program for an $850,000,000-a-year medical program, delegates soon broke into two camps.

From Mayo clinic's Dr. Hugh Cabot, leader of the revolting group, came a charge that the practice of medicine is "medieval" in parts of the U. S. Lashed back A. M. A.'s General Manager Olin West: "I don't know whether the medical profession is any more proud of Cabot than he is of the medical profession." Added fiery Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of A. M. A.'s Journal: "Medical care is not the most important problem before the people of the United States . . . medical and dental care must always be subservient to the need for food, fuel, clothing, shelter and a job."

Last week A. M. A. found itself in an uncomfortable position. In Washington, Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold announced that A. M. A. will be prosecuted as a monopoly under the federal anti-trust laws, accused of violating the law by boycotting low-cost clinics.

Specific grounds for the suit involved the Group Health association of the District of Columbia, organized last year by 2,500 government employees. Trust Buster Arnold charged A. M. A. and the Medical Society of the District of Columbia had attempted to prevent the Group Health association from operating by cold-shouldering doctors. Group Health association physicians, he said, had been (1) excluded from Washington hospitals, (2) threatened with expulsion from the association and (3) made unwelcome at consultations with other doctors.

As A. M. A. prepared its counter-attack, Thurman Arnold predicted the suit would have "far-reaching consequences on one of our most pressing problems."

Aviation

In Portland, Ore., one day last week, Major Howard C. French of the U. S. air reserve corps posed for his picture being "dragged" into a plane bound for San Francisco. The pretense was that Major French feared flying.

Next day he headed west over the Pacific in Pan-American's Hawaiian Clipper bound for Manila. Some 2,500 miles later the ship landed in Honolulu and took off for Midway island, 1,380 miles away. Next stop was Wake island and next came Guam. When the 26-ton Clipper took off for Manila, Major French must have thought his fears were in vain.

But a few hours later the Clipper's radio went dead. After half a day of anxious waiting, Pan-American admitted the ship must be down at sea. Out from Manila went the army transport Meigs and by dawn next day heavy warships were plowing the sea to reach the plane's last reported positions.

Finally, in a spot where the water stood 5,000 fathoms deep, the Meigs struck a significant oil slick that indicated the Hawaiian Clipper had plummeted into the sea. Aboard had been six passengers, nine crew members. Major French's fears had not been in vain.

●Capt. Hans Bertram of the German air service became the first person to circumnavigate the world by commercial plane last week when he landed in Berlin after a three-weeks' absence. Unnoticed on his eastward trip until he reached Manhattan, Bertram crossed the Atlantic as third pilot on Germany's catapult plane Nordwind.

Foreign

Already weary of hostilities in China, Japan wondered last week if she had a second war to fight. In isolated Manchukuo where 75-year-old Russo-Chinese boundary markers have long since been lost, Soviet and Jap troops were making much ado over a disputed hill near the village of Changkufeng. First hostilities occurred July 11, but not until last week did the conflict blossom into full-fledged warfare.

Three clashes were reported in three days. As might be expected, both Moscow and Tokyo claimed victory and Moscow sent a "vigorous protest" which Japan rejected. In the next skirmish Manchukuan detachments occupied Russian territory two and a half miles deep west of Lake Khassan, while Soviet troops fled leaving 50 dead.

Next day Moscow answered with airplanes, bombing railways near Changkufeng. Tokyo claimed five ships were downed and Russia did its best to minimize the incidents. To some, it looked like war.

Sports

Although Jerome Hanna Dean had cost the Chicago Cubs $37,000 each time they used him this year, Owner Phillip K. Wrigley thought last week his investment was at least establishing some sort of record. Purchased from the St. Louis Cardinals for $185,000, Dizzy Dean had pitched only five games but had won them all. Most important, however, was his mark of only 1.02 earned runs per nine-inning game. Considering that Boston's Jim Turner led the National league last year with 2.38 runs against him per game, and Lefty Gomez paced the American league with 2.33, Dizzy Dean's record appeared spectacular indeed.

JEROME HANNA DEAN

"It was just one of those days."

Chicago was just complimenting itself on this feat when Dizzy Dean took the mound against Philadelphia. First inning saw the bases loaded with a single, double and a walk. Third inning saw a harmless single. Fourth inning saw Chuck Klein's over-the-fence homer. Fifth inning saw two doubles before Dizzy went to the shower. With Larry French finishing for the Cubs, Philadelphia won 5-4.

"It was just one of those days," said Dean.

Politics

During Pennsylvania's recent fiery primary campaign, charges were made that Gov. George H. Earle's forces had extorted money from state contractors and employees and "sold" legislation. When a Dauphin county grand jury was called to investigate the charges, Governor Earle sprang to action, summoned his rubber-stamp legislature and ground out four bills to block the quiz. One of them appointed a special legislative committee which would supersede the grand jury and conduct its own investigation.

Two days later the Dauphin county court blocked this ambitious plan by impounding all evidence in the case and prohibiting the grand jury's witnesses from appearing before the legislative committee.

Labor

Last week the national labor relations board sent conciliators to Newton, Iowa, where a well-behaved washing machine strike has occupied 1,500 Maytag employees since May 9. As federal peacemakers prepared to call a parley between company officials and C. I. O. representatives, Iowa's Gov. Nels G. Kraschel got on his high horse. To Maj. Gen. Mathew Tinley, in charge of national guardsmen at Newton, the governor sent word that the labor board must not convene. Informed of the ultimatum, Trial Examiner Madison Hill reported to Washington and decided not to fight the Iowa national guard single-handed. Lawyers agreed Governor Kraschell's troopers are supreme so long as the martial law goes unchallenged. What he wants, said the governor, is a settlement of differences between Maytag and C. I. O without the labor board's meddling.

People

Politely spurning cash, Count Kurt Haugwitz-Reventlow signed formal separation papers in London with his wife, the former Barbara Hutton. To Count Kurt goes control over Lance, the couple's two-year-old child, who will be raised as a "Danish gentleman." Next day Countess Barbara was reported pining once more for the American citizenship she renounced last year.

●Married a little more than one year, England's Duke of Windsor and his wife, the former Wallis Warfield, only a few weeks ago found a home in Austria's ancient Mittersill estate. Last week as workmen were busy renovating the Twelfth-century castle for September 1 occupancy, fire of undetermined origin burned it to the ground. Notified at their temporary chateau on the Riviera, England's former king and his wife were expected to start house-hunting once more this week.

●Celebrating his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary in Detroit, automobile magnate Henry Ford spoke for the press. Fordisms: (1) "The trouble . . . is that we think the future is tomorrow. If it doesn't come tomorrow, we are not interested." (2) "There is nothing ahead for this country but prosperity." (3) "Business is all mixed up with utterly false elements." Meanwhile in Washington the national labor relations board found the Ford Motor company guilty of Wagner act violation by "spying and discrimination" at its Buffalo, N. Y., plant.

●Douglas Corrigan, who left New York flying to California and ended up "by mistake" in Ireland, took a boat for home and announced he was afraid of being seasick. In Washington, U. S. department of commerce officials radioed the homing aviator news of his penalty for an unauthorized transatlantic flight. The penalty: A six-day suspension of Corrigan's commercial pilot certificate, conveniently arranged while he is on shipboard.

●At Indianapolis, John Pierpont Morgan III had his appendix removed after being rushed from a nearby farm where he had been pitching hay incognito. Notified of "Jack Morgan's" real identity, neighboring farmers said the twenty-one-year-old youth "seemed to be a willing hand, but a little green."

Miscellany

●At Dayton, Ohio, seventy-one-year-old Jeanette Reber Taylor sought her birth registration to apply for old age pension. Clerks thumbed back through musty registration volumes, found Jeanette Taylor was No. 1 registrant in No. 1 volume.

●Guilty of squandering his wife's money, guilty of murdering two women at Elmont, N. Y., last January, John Reo confessed his crimes to his sweetheart, Mrs. Florence Termond. Last week his wife, Mamie, visited John Reo at Sing Sing where he awaits death August 15. Upshot was Mamie's letter to New York's Gov. Herbert Lehman: "If there could be a way . . . I would gladly die in his place. Could it be made possible?"

●Southampton, England, turned out last week to welcome two luxury liners arriving the same day. Germany's sleek Bremen ran aground entering the harbor, finally got off with the aid of tugs. A few minutes later the Queen Mary, caught by wind and tide, almost split a long wooden jetty.

●At Denver, thousands of bees came from nowhere to settle on the swank Brown Palace hotel, covering one side up to the seventh story. After a four-hour battle by employees produced only swollen noses, somebody called Mrs. Sarah Jackson, Denver bee catcher. Systematically locating three queen bees, Mrs. Jackson soon had the entire swarm safely packed away.

The Cereal Grains

Well Known Food Authority Describes Their Place in the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City.

TO ME, there is no more inspiring sight in the world than a field of nodding golden grain. It not only pleases the eye with its grace and profound beauty, but it attests to Nature's bounty. For down through the ages, grains have sustained and comforted man.

In every quarter of the globe, foods made from grain constitute the largest single item in the food supply. This is as it should be, for no other foodstuff affords such a rich store of fuel value at such little cost. It has been estimated that during one day's labor, an American farmer, growing wheat by up-to-date American methods, can produce enough protein and calories to sustain a man for a year.

A Source of Power and Pep

Every nation depends upon some form of cereal to furnish motive power for the body machinery — to provide necessary energy to keep body and brain functioning efficiently. In the Western world, wheat is supreme. But in Oriental countries, rice takes the lead and it is the chief article of food for half of the world's people. Rye, oats, barley, maize and buckwheat are likewise important crops.

Energy Values Compared

All uncooked cereal foods show great similarity in their chemical composition and therefore have very nearly the same energy value—that is about 1,650 calories per pound. The weight of a 100-calorie portion is about an ounce. But there is a wide variation in bulk, depending upon the degree to which the cereal has been refined. For example, three tablespoons of patent wheat flour weigh one ounce; one and one-fourth cups of a puffed wheat cereal likewise weigh one ounce. After cooking, there is a big variation in weight, as well as measure, owing to the varying amounts of water absorbed. Thus a cup of cooked oatmeal mush supplies the same number of calories as three tablespoons of a pebbly dry cereal with a nut-like taste.

The Cereal Proteins

From 8 to 12 per cent of the calories in cereal foods are obtained from protein and two noted investigators have estimated that grain products contribute 38 per cent of the total calories and 37 per cent of the protein in the typical American dietary.

Laboratory experiments indicate that the proteins of wheat, oats, maize, rye and barley are about equally efficient in promoting and supporting growth. None of them compares with an equivalent weight of the complete proteins of milk, eggs or meat, but when combined with small amounts of milk, the cereal proteins become highly efficient.

Iron and Copper

The mineral elements of grains are concentrated largely in the outer layers and in the germ. For this reason, there is considerable difference in the yield of minerals from whole grain and highly refined cereal foods.

The mineral content of bran is from 10 to 20 times greater than that of patent flour, and whole wheat contains from three to five times as much iron, calcium and phosphorus. Bran, oatmeal and whole grain cereals are a good source of copper as well as iron.

Rich in Vitamin B

The different cereal grains are quite similar in their vitamin values, but as the vitamins are very unevenly distributed throughout the kernel, there is a wide variation in vitamin content between the whole grain and refined cereal foods.

All seeds, including whole grains, are relatively poor in vitamin A. They are entirely lacking in vitamins C and D and contain only small amounts of vitamin G.

Both the germ and bran, however, are excellent sources of vitamin B—which promotes appetite, aids digestion and helps to prevent a nervous disorder. The importance of the germ as a food has been more fully appreciated since it was discovered that it is at least five times as rich in vitamin B as the whole grain or bran. There are several cereals on the market containing added wheat germ and this precious substance may also be obtained in concentrated form.

Laxative Value of Cereals

The whole grain cereals contain an abundance of bulk or cellulose and are therefore a valuable aid in promoting normal elimination. Individuals differ in their requirement for foods having a laxative effect, and in some cases one must be guided by personal experience. But inasmuch as the whole grain products furnish the body with larger amounts of minerals and vitamins B and G, a good general rule is to consume at least half of one's bread and other cereal foods in the whole grain form.

Digestibility of Grains

The whole grain products are less completely digested than those which are more highly refined, but as they contain larger amounts of protein, it is estimated that the amount of protein digested and absorbed from an equal weight of entire wheat or patent flours is practically the same. Thus when the two types of flours are considered as sources of protein and energy alone, they are regarded by nutritionists as substantially equivalent and interchangeable.

Many Forms of Cereal Foods

From infancy to old age, the cereal foods should, and usually do constitute the mainstay of the diet. Fortunately, there is such a wide variety from which to choose that there is little likelihood of monotony. Furthermore, because of their bland flavor, one does not readily tire of cereal foods.

In addition to the wide variety of breads, rolls, muffins, biscuits and griddle cakes that can be made from refined and whole grain flours, there are an astonishing number of cooked and uncooked cereals from which to choose. When served with milk, bread or cereals make an ideal and economical food combination.

Macaroni for a Main Dish

Besides serving as the main feature at breakfast and for the child's supper, cereal foods are useful as the chief attraction at dinner or supper when served in the form of macaroni, spaghetti or egg noodles. They are a fine source of energy and also furnish about 12 per cent protein. When combined with cheese, which adds protein, minerals and vitamins, they constitute a balanced main dish.

Cereal products of all kinds deserve a ranking place among FOODS THAT KEEP US FIT.

Questions Answered

Miss R. M.—There is no evidence to indicate any relation between thunderstorms and the souring of milk. Thunderstorms are more likely to occur during the summer when temperatures are high. Hot weather also induces bacterial growth in milk. The only connection between the two is that conditions favoring one also favor the other.

Mrs. J. McK.—Though the food value of meat extracts is low, they have a tempting flavor, due to the presence of the savory extractives which stimulate appetite. Their content of potash salts causes a quickened and stronger heart beat. In fact, it has been said that their effect is more like a stimulant than a food. That is why they are often used as a restorative for invalids.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

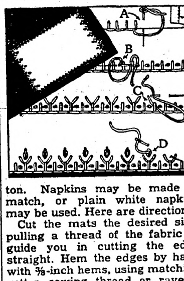
WE SAY luncheon mats yet, more and more, mats are being used three times a day. This change from the traditional table cloth saves time and laundry.

A set of sheerest organdie is used with dainty china. The mat shown here is the other extreme. It is made of soft blue denim and is embroidered in heavy white cotton. Napkins may be made to match, or plain white napkins may be used. Here are directions:



Cut the mats the desired size, pulling a thread of the fabric to guide you in cutting the edge straight. Hem the edges by hand with ⅜-inch hems, using matching cotton sewing thread or raveled threads of the fabric if they are strong enough. Now, blanket stitch over the hems with the embroidery thread as shown here at A. Next, make tiny chain stitches between the blanket stitches as at B. This completes the embroidery for the long sides of the mats. The short ends are embroidered more elaborately. Make a V stitch at the top of every other blanket stitch as shown at C. Chain stitches are then made as at D.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' latest book gives complete directions for many novelties, gifts and things for yourself and the children. It also fully illustrates 90 embroidery stitches with interesting variations. You will use these again and again for reference. Ask for Book 2, enclosing 25 cents. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago.

He Left Everything

A merchant, being told he had only a few days to live, called his lawyer, and said: "Make my will so my overdraft at the bank goes to my wife—she can explain it. My equity in my car to my son—he will have to go to work to keep up the payments. Give my good will to the supply houses—they took some awful chances on me and are entitled to something. My equipment you can give to the junkman—he has had his eye on it for several years. I want six of my creditors for pallbearers—they carried me so long they might as well finish the job."—Hoard's Dairyman.

A Play Outfit; a Basic Dress

DO YOU need something new to dawdle in or to dress up in? Here are two new designs, one for play and one for afternoon, that are so smart you really should have both. It costs so little, in time and trouble, to make them for yourself, with these simple designs that even beginners can follow with no difficulty.

Play Suit and Sports Frock.

This new design gives you both! The play suit has beautifully cut shorts and a nice bodice top with the sunniest kind of sunback. The frock is created merely by fastening that straight skirt around you, and the bolero goes with both! Notice how cleverly the ricrac braid is used to simulate a square yoke in the front. The smartest thing for this design is linen in a dusty pastel shade; calico, percale and pique are good, too.

Dress With Bodice Detailing.

Here's a design that brings a breath of fall smartness in the bosom detailing that you'll see in expensive models this coming season. Also in the Victorian sleeves, high at the shoulders and fitted to the arm below. The straight panel in the back, the gathers at the waistline in front, give you a lovely figure-line. Although it's so distinguished looking and subtly detailed, this dress is easy to make. Just six steps in the detailed sew chart. Make it now of silk crepe, linen or georgette. Later in sheer wool, satin or velvet.

The Patterns.

1557 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 5⅝ yards of 35-inch material. 10 yards of ricrac braid to trim.

1482 is designed for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 34 requires 4⅝ yards of 39-inch material with long sleeves; 4¼ yards of 39-inch material for short sleeves.

Success in Sewing.

Success in sewing, like in any other field, depends upon how you approach the task in hand. To help you turn out clothes professional looking in every detail, we have a book which plainly sets forth the simple rules of home dressmaking. The beginner will find every step in making a dress clearly outlined and illustrated within its covers. For the experienced sewer there are many helpful hints and suggestions for sewing short cuts. At the semi-annual meeting of the County Board of Commissioners, the tax levy for Marshall county was reduced by seven thousand dollars under last year according to figures released this week by County Auditor Levi G. Johnson.

Working out in detail, the Board set the total levy at $163,000, last years's figure being set at $170,000. Estimates of money needed for the coming year for various funds are:

| | |
|---|---|
| General Revenue | $ 56,000 |
| Road and Bridge | 38,000 |
| Welfare | 55,000 |
| Tuberculosis Sanitorium | 12,000 |
| Bonds and Interest | 12,000 |
| Grand Total | $163,000 |

For the interest of the readers of the Star, we present last year's levy

| | |
|---|---|
| General Revenue | $ 50,000 |
| Roa dand Bridge | 40,000 |
| Welfare | 66,000 |
| Tuberculosis Sanitorium | 8,000 |
| Bond and interest | 9,000 |
| Grand Total | $170,000 |

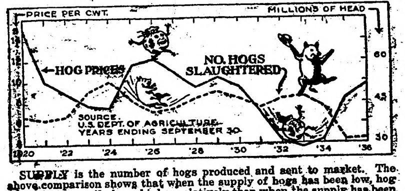
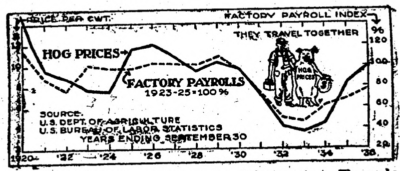
Factors Which Influence Hog Prices Causing Market "Ups" and "Downs"



SUPPLY is the number of hogs produced and sent to market. The above comparison shows that when the supply of hogs has been low, hog prices have usually been higher relatively than when the supply has been large. However, as the following graph shows, this is only one factor causing hog prices to fluctuate.

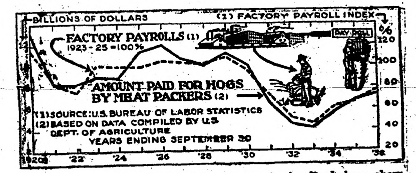


DEMAND for pork by consumers is also vitally important. The yearly comparison of factory payrolls shown above is a measure of changes in the income of all consumers and hence can be used as a measure of demand for hogs. A live hog cannot be worth any more than the amount consumers are able and willing to pay for the pork and lard the hog contains.

The comparisons in the two upper graphs show that when consumer purchasing power has remained steady, hog prices have been influenced mostly upward by decreases and downward by increases in the number of hogs produced and slaughtered, as in the years 1922-29.

They also show that when hog supplies have remained about steady, hog prices have been raised by increased purchasing power and lowered by decreased purchasing power of consumers, an example of which is shown in the years 1932-34 inclusive.

But sometimes the supply of hogs and the purchasing power of consumers fluctuate at the same time. Both of these fluctuations may be in a direction that is either favorable or unfavorable to a higher price level, or one may be in a favorable and the other in an unfavorable direction. In any event, it is the combined effect of these fluctuations that determines the price of hogs.



THE COMBINED EFFECT of these factors is visualized above, showing the amount of money paid for hogs by meat packers (hog prices multiplied by the number of pounds of hogs coming to market) and the index of consumers' income, factory payrolls.

Once the hogs have been produced the supply factor is fixed and the price is dependent upon consumer income.

First New Grain Hauled Here

Anton Rodahl was the first farmer in this territory to start out with a threshing outfiit in 1938. He commenced threshing early last week when he threshed some feed for Wm. Mehrkens and Edgar Horien. The first farmer to bring in the new grain to the local elevator according to Mr. Ness, was Sidney Engstrom, who farms northeast of town. Mr. Engstrom who also operates his own threshing outfit, brought in a load of nice Rye on Saturday.

The next farmers in line to bring in new grain was Dan Dowacter of Excel. He also has his own threshing rig and came in with the first new wheat for 1938 on Saturday afternoon. Several rigs are beginning to move about throughout the farm community as the grains are ready to be threshed. According to reports the crops are fair to good and the farmers are hoping that the market will take a little spurt so that they can be repaid a little more for their farming efforts this year.

Market Breaks Record

The largest week-end grain receipts in the history of the Minneapolis grain market were recorded Monday when a total of 4,409 cars reached the terminal. The previous record was the Tuesday following Labor day in 1928, with receipts of 3,600 cars reports of the chamber of commerce sampling bureau show receipts of 1,500 cars late Saturday and 2,909 cars Sunday and early Monday. Of the 2,909 cars 1,710 were wheat. A week ago 3,699 cars were received.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden and family, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson and daughter Dorothy and Julius Borchert attended the picnic at Lake Floyd Olson near Bronson Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Bennes and daughter Beulah visited relatives at Fertile Thursday.

Supervised NYA Project

Geo. Karvonen, Supt. of the local school has been busy this summer taking care of a National Youth Administration project here. This project has been in the form of improving the skating rink at the local school ground and also the work of leveling out the high hump on the school ground.

Mr. Karvonen has had several boys at the job and most of the work has been done by hand. The heavy dirt moving has been done with a tractor. The ground will be completed before school opens in September. This NYA project has given a few boys an opportunity to earn a few dollars this summer with working only so many hours per month. Mr. Karvonen has donated his time to the work and he should be thanked for his efforts in helping these young boys and for the fine job they have done on the local school ground and skating rink.

Former Gatzke Farmer Died

Funeral services were held at Randen on Monday afternoon for Olaf A. Lindgren, pioneer of that community. Mr. Lindgren who wass 49 years old, passed away suddenly last week at the the home of his mother, Mrs. Anna Lindgren at Hibbing. They moved from their homestead at Randeen to the Iron Range in 1923.

Miss Caroline Aspelin from here and Mrs. E. L. Rolland and Mrs. O. Erickson from Thief River Falls attended the funeral services at Randen.

It appeared that Mr. Lindgren's death came from shock. His aged mother had fallen into the basement of their home and was seriously hurt and after Olaf had gotten help from the neighhors and a doctor for his mother he collapsed and passed away. His aged mother does not yet know that her son is dead and buried. She received a skull fracture in the fall in the basement.

Farmer-Labor Picnic Aug. 28

Plans are rapidly going forward for the five county Farmer-Labor picnic which will be held at the Middle River State Park, commonly called the Old Mill Site, on Sunday, August 28th. The five Counties sponsoring the picnic are Marshall, Pennington, Roseau, Polk and Kittson.

John J. Kinzer, candidate for Lieutenant Governor and State Treasurer C. A. Halvorson have been billed as the main speakers of the day. Other speakers on the day's program include Representative Emil Morberg, Marshall County, George Hagen, Representative from Polk County besides other leaders in the 9th district. The program will get underway at one o'clock sharp.

The loud speaking facilities of the Warren Radio Service have been secured so that the large crowds that are expected to enmass on that day will be able to hear the entire program.

Both of the headline speakers, Kinzer and Halvorson, are farmers and have a thorough understanding of the farm problems. They will have an interesting message for all. Both Morberg and Hagen are recognized as influential speakers together with other Ninth District Farmer-Labor speakers will make up an interesting orating program.

Refreshments will be served on the grounds. Special singing besides a sports program have been arranged.

Eric Freeberg, candidate for State Senator on the F-L program from the 67th legislative district will preside over the program for the day.

A cordial invitation to attend is extended; come and get acquainted with your neighbor, you might like him.

To Dedicate Pelan Battleground

The site of the Battleground, famed in Indian history and song where the Sioux and the Chippewa struggled nearly one hundred years ago, will receive belated recognition on Sunday, August 21st, when the Greenbush Community Band dedicates its Pelan Battleground Park. This park, located on the Sand Ridge, six miles west of Greenbush, has been developed through the efforts of this band and the farmers of Dewey and Lind townships in Roseau County.

The famous battle was fought between ninety and a hundred years ago, and three mounds, now somewhat obliterated by operations of farming, still mark the site where local historians aver that earthworks were put up. The struggle lasted for two days and was one of the fiercest encounters in the history of the two tribes. It ended with the Sioux fleeing from the field and leaving their dead. The late great Chief Oshwash, of the Lake of the Wooks band of Chippewa, won his war feather as a yodng man at this battle, and incidentally lost part of his scalp there, too, in the melee.

Preparations have been made by the Greenbush Community Band to have the Chippewa at the Park to celebrate their ancient victory. Missy-Ay-Ge Schick great grandson of Chief Oshwash, and the present chief of the Chippewa, will be present and will address the gathering.

Much other real Indian ceremony will be performed. War dances, and songs, Pipe of Peace and burving of the tomahawk.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Larson and family visited the Albert Anderson home west of St. Hilaire Sunday.

Watch Off-Flavor Milk

If the milk from your cows becomes off-flavor because they eat weeds, the remedy lies in providing feed other than that in the pasture, advises W. B. Combs, member of the University Faam dairy staff.

Experiments at University Farm indicate that cows may not eat enough weeds to flavor mild if other palatable feed is availble. In working with well-fed cows, it was necessary to starve them to the weeds, says Combs. When pepper grass flavor appears in milk or cream, the cow has likely consumed as much as 80 pounds of the weed daily, University dairymen believe, for it was difficult to obtain more than a mild off-flavor in milk or cream by feeding 60 pounds of pepper grass. This would indicate that when pepper grass flavor occurs in milk, the animals are receiving little more feed than the weed itself.

When cows eat such weeds as French weeds, wild onion and pepper grass, the milk they produce becomes almost worthless, emphasizes Combs. This not only leads to a loss for individual dairyman, but to industry as a whole, since in products from weed-flavored milk and cream, the off-flavors are intensified.

Combs reports that if pasture is supplemented by a grain ration and some hay or silage, cows are less likely to eat enough weeds to flavor the milk.

Four Given Bus Driver Jobs

The local school board of District No. 35 opened bids on Monday evenisg for bus drivers on the four routes for the coming school year. Eight bids were received on the four routes and were as follows: Route No. 1, L. Sagstuen, $28; Nils Ness, $25 and Oscar Reierson, $25. Route No. 2, Wm. Fluke $40 and Leo Horien $34. Route No. 3, Edgar Horien $36. Route No. 4 L. Sagstuen and Nils Ness each with a bid of $15. All these figures were the price set per month for the driving.

Leo Horien being the low bidder on route 2 was awarded a contract for bus driver. Edgar Horien the only bidder on route 3 rceived that job. As there were tie bids on route 1 and 4 the board gave the contracts to those who had the jobs last year. These routes were awarded to Mr. Reierson and Mr. Sagstuen, Mr. Reierson taking route 1 and Mr. Sagstuen route 4.

While they were in session the board also ordered a carload of coal for the coming year as they could get a liberal discount per ton delivery made in August.

Many Have Operations

Several people from here motored to Roseau on Tuesday to have operations and other medical care administered by Dr. Berge of that city. Those who had operations were Helen Sorum who had a major operation, Betty Swan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Swan, who had her tonsils taken out and Delores Engen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Harry Engen who had an extra toe removed from each of her feet.

Miss Orlene Hagglund, who has been employed as cashier at the Palm Garden cafe in Thief River Falls has resigned her position there and is spending the week at her home here. She will return to Thief River Falls in a short time to be employed at other work.

A. L. Carlson of Argyle transacted business here Wednesday.

Meaning Of Flag Signals

"What do motions of that flagman mean?"

This is the question many a motorist has asked himself as he watched the antics of flagmen at points where highway construction is being done. And the motorist is hardly to blame because to date there has been no uniform method of flagging. To correct this the Minnesota Highway department has issued a code for flagmen and is conducting schools on uniform flagging throughout the state.

Hereafter a flagman will be stationed no closer than 200 feet from men at work or traffic hazards. He will stand off the traffic lane and his flag will be attached to a long pole and the flag itself will be weighted so that it hangs perpendicular. The flag will not be waved but will be held in a horizontal position. The flag means "stop" when it is extended across the lane of traffic. The flagman will face the traffic and hold the flag in his right hand. If the flagman wants traffic to proceed slowly without stopping he will dip the flag before the traffic comes to a complete halt and will motion cars through with his left hand. All flagmen have been instructed to call out information such as "blasting ahead,", "fresh oil", "men working in roadway" and the like as motorists pass. Only men who qualify physically will be given flag jobs because of the danger entailed and the necessity for quick muscular action.

Ferebee played the four 18-hole courses at Olympia Fields twice, averaging under 91 per round. The bet that resulted in the one-man golf marathon was made with Ferebee's partner, another Chicago broker, who was joint owner of the plantation.

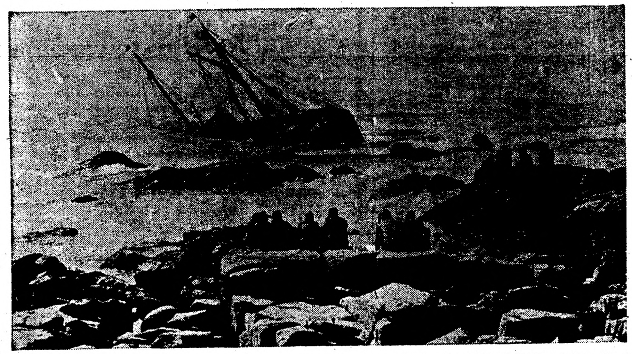
Gloucester Fishing Craft Aground on Rocks



Ripped by jagged rocks where she ran aground off Gloucester, Mass., the 100-foot fishing seiner, Uncle Sam, was pronounced a total loss by coast guardsmen after being abandoned by her captain and crew. Nearly 50,000 pounds of fresh mackerel was dumped into the sea to lighten the boat in an effort to save it.

AT EVENING TIME

By Madeline A. Chaffee

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

The "Briny Toyshop" was closed for the day. Its tiny show window still displayed an enticing array of delightful playthings, but the latch was hard down on the door, and its little lady proprietress had retired to her favorite low rocker by a rear window facing the sea.

The most persistent youth in the small sea-faring village rattled the door, but in vain. Miss Matilda Bell did not even hear.

There seemed more than ordinary magic in the glowing spell cast by the sun at this close of day. The old-fashioned garden sloping to the rocky shore seemed a fairy place. The sea was many-hued, dusky, wondrous, and its melody came pleasantly to Miss Matilda. There were dreams in Miss Matilda's eyes as she watched; not the happy, hopeful dreams of youth, but the deeper, sadder dreams of one who has lived long.

Miss Matilda was so much a part of her surroundings that she had ceased to notice them in detail. Her mind had flown back nearly 50 years, to the time when she had not the faintest thought of ever being a little, elderly, sweet-faced lady sitting by herself in the twilight.

To the time when she was a young, adventurous girl pledging her troth to a dashing young naval officer. Even now her eyes grew dim as the memories came drifting in on the breeze. Dream-pictures blotted out the garden, the rocks, the sea itself, and Miss Matilda felt herself in the arms of her young lover, so tender, so dear—

And he had sailed away, full of hope and happy anticipations of the day when he should return to make her his wife. Miss Matilda's eyes blurred. That day had never come. There had been a fire aboard the ship—and the young officer, who belonged heart and soul to Matilda Bell, had given his life for another.

Years had taken away that first tragic grief, but Miss Matilda had loved too deeply to forget. How she wished she had been with him! Sometimes he seemed to speak to her in the voice of the sea, and she would say that she was coming—some day soon, very soon—coming to be with him.

On the rocks below Miss Matilda's cottage two figures were silhouetted against the dull red sky.

"But, dear girl"—the man's voice was tender, serious—"you don't know what the life is. I do—and I wouldn't condemn any woman to it, least of all—you. It will be a torture without you—but it wouldn't be fair to take you."

The girl's straight, sweet gaze held his steadily.

"But, Tom, don't you see I want to go? It may be years before you come back. Our marriage-that-is-to-be is going to be true partnership, Tommy boy, and it must begin by my going to South America with you now. I can face anything—with you!"

The two silhouettes suddenly converged into one as Tom said huskily:

"Bless you, sweetheart, you're coming with me. We'll play the game of life squarely—together."

And up in the little dusky window above the garden, with the sea still crooning a low love song, Miss Matilda had come into her own.

Two Pretty Frocks, Both Easy to Make

IF YOU'RE one of those women who so often say "Dear me, I wish I could sew!", then by all means try your hand on these smart designs, and like many, many others, just as inexperienced as you are, you'll find that you can sew, and enjoy it! Our patterns include detailed sew charts that show you just what to do, step by step.

The Woman's Dress.

Here we have a diagram design, which means you can finish it successfully in a few hours. And you'll find it one of the most becoming and comfortable you ever wore around the house. The short sleeves are slashed, which makes them easier to work in, and prettier to look at. Sleeves, neckline and pointed closing are trimmed with ricrac. Make this dress of gingham, seersucker, percale or calico.

The Little Girl's Dress.

This dress will make your small daughter look even more adorable, with its high, snug waist, square neck, puff sleeves and full skirt. You'll probably want to make her half a dozen dresses just like this! And she'll certainly beg for a little sweetheart apron. For the dress, choose dimity, dotted Swiss, gingham or percale. For the apron, organdy, dimity or lawn.

No. 1559 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4¾ yards of 35-inch material; 2½ yards of ricrac to trim as pictured.

No. 1468 is designed for sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Size 4 requires 1⅞ yards of 35-inch material for the dress; ⅞ yard for the apron. Six yards of ribbon or braid to trim dress; 1 yard for belt. Two and one-half yards of ruffling to trim apron.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Failure of Democratic Purge Gives Republicans New Fear

Politics

If Franklin Roosevelt ever planned to "purge" his Democratic party of undesirables, he now knows the purge has failed. On the presidential black list may have been Iowa's Gillette, Nevada's McCarran, Colorado's Adams, and Missouri's Clark. By last week these New Deal haters were either renominated or assured of winning their state primaries at the expense of administration favorites.

News of purge failure has recently sent the most dour conservative into ecstasies. For once, it appears, Franklin Roosevelt's domination over the party is at ebb tide. But last week a few foes began thinking instead of effervescing:

Is purge failure helping untangle badly twisted United States political lines? Decidedly the contrary. Is purge failure eliminating Franklin Roosevelt as a third termer? Probably not.

Originally the purge idea sought to transform the Democrat party into an instrument of coherent liberalism, implying formation of an equally coherent conservative party on the other side. But when congress convenes next winter the United States will see instead a hodgepodge of multi-colored political thought from which little but bickering can be expected.

Deeply tanned from his 20-day fishing trip to tropical Pacific waters, Franklin Roosevelt was back in his 48 states last week, still mum about third term rumors that have kept newsmen busy since he left. Of all rumors, most thought-provoking was that purge failure robs the President of party control, robs him also of the right to name a successor in 1940. Not willing to be robbed, enthusiastic New Dealer Roosevelt would rather run himself than pass the mantle to a less ardent New Dealer.

Kentucky

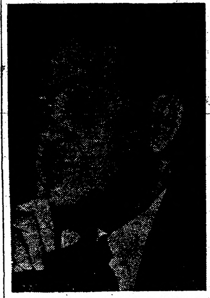
Blue Grass politics was red hot as Kentucky prepared to choose a Democratic senator. At Jackson, Former Sheriff Lee Combs and his brother attended a rally for their own faction, then walked brazenly into a rally of opposition forces. When the smoke cleared, Lee Combs was shot dead. A few minutes later his father organized kinfolk to search for William Combs, who was no relative but the alleged slayer.



KENTUCKY'S ALBEN BARKLEY
It was surely a fine day.

Said Police Chief A. S. Sizmore: "I'm a Republican so I'm not on either side. They were all het up from politicin'."

Two days later Kentucky went to the polls. At Versailles, Gov. A. B. "Happy" Chandler muttered, "Down the hatch" as he chivalrously voted for his opponent, Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley. At Paducah, Alben Barkley deposited his ballot, glanced at the skies and predicted a record vote.

By midnight it appeared that Happy Chandler should have voted for himself. "Dear Alben," with presidential blessing, was renominated and political theorists tried to figure out what it meant.

Foreign

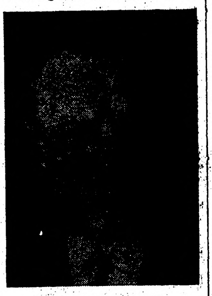
Since 1931, when Japan marched into Manchuria, Tokyo and Moscow have been "on the brink of war." Last week they appeared to be fighting two wars: In one, at the isolated Russian-Manchukuan-Korean frontier nobody knew who was winning. In the other, being waged in the Moscow office of Soviet Foreign Maxim Litvinoff, it appeared that Russia had the upper hand.

Amidst a barrage of incidents, communiques and curt notes, Asia's two powers were attempting to settle ownership of a shell-pocked hill near the village of Changkufeng.

Russia-Jap hostilities in this sector date back to 1931 when Japan marched into Manchuria and looked longingly at land patrolled by Russia's autonomous Siberian army. But not until mid-July this year did the five-year "secret war" break into the open. Since then both powers have attacked and counter attacked for days on end, moving troops, artillery and planes to little Changkufeng.

Already tired of one war (see below), Japan was anxious to avoid another. Finally Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu at Moscow received word to open peace negotiations. Last week it appeared proud, stubborn Japan would have to eat crow if she wanted peace with prouder, more stubborn Russia. Muttering that "the time has come to terminate these endless incidents," Foreign Minister Litvinoff matched Tokyo's proposals with an even better set:



MAXIM LITVINOFF
"The time has come . . ."

(1) Immediate cessation of hostilities, with mutual withdrawal behind a fixed line.

(2) That line to be determined by the Russ-China treaty of June 26, 1886.

(3) Appointment of a bilateral commission, two Russians, one Manchukuan, one Jap, to negotiate for redemarcation of the line on basis of the 1886 treaty.

While Japan boasted after two weeks that 1,500 Russ soldiers had been killed and wounded against 180 on her own side, two tattered Soviet deserters walked into her Siberian camp to air their grievances against Moscow.

They deserted because their fathers, well-to-do Kulak farmers, had been heavily taxed, heavily oppressed in the Soviet drive for collective agriculture. "Our slogan is defend the fatherland of liberty," one said, "but how can we soldiers defend such a system when the cows, horses and even their barns are taken away."

To Japan it looked like Russia's poor Siberian administration was her ally.

● Last week weary Japanese troops were still more than 100 miles down the flooded Yangtze river from their goal, Nanking, long since deserted by the Chinese government. While defending troops claimed the invaders had been repelled in battle after battle, crafty Japs were evidently resorting to brains instead of brawn to capture another part of China.

In the past Manchuria and Peking governments were undermined by palm-rubbing Tokyo agents and disgruntled Chinese officials. Result in each case has been a puppet state, completely divorced from China. Last week at peaceful Canton, only a few miles from Britain's Hongkong, came reports of secret negotiations to sway South China from the central government.

Promising to prevent recurrence of disastrous bombings which left Canton a bloody shambles last month, Jap agents would set up an independent government closely allied to Tokyo.

Meanwhile Japan refused to stop her bombing attacks on Canton. For two successive days last week war planes swooped down with their cargoes of death, finally striking within 400 yards of the foreign settlement where thousands had taken refuge. Next day Canton's Catholic cathedral was struck while hundreds cowered in terror within.

Miscellany

Back to London last week from darkest Africa came Missionary John Harris with a strange tale. His story: In Bechuanaland lives Ramonolwana Senan, believed to be 140 years old yet still in good health and boasting all but one tooth. He has a son more than 100 years old, and a daughter 16.

● Twenty thousand bathers at New York's Rockaway beach sought relief from sticky weather last week. In the distance were unimportant rumblings of thunder. Suddenly the air was splintered by a bolt of lightning that zig-zagged 300 feet down the beach, killing three, felling hundreds. Next day investigators wondered if a huge steel bridge, passing almost immediately over the beach, might have drawn the freak bolt.

● When she was first launched, England's proud Queen Mary was also queen of the Atlantic. Then came the French Normandie to set a westward passage record of 3 days, 22 hours, 52 minutes. Last week her powerful engines churned the Queen Mary to a new record, clipping 1 hour, 14 minutes off the Normandie's mark.

● Fondled like the museum piece it is, Douglas (Wrong Way) Corrigan's $900 transatlantic airplane was unloaded in Manhattan last week.

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses the Food Value of Ice Cream

Nationally Known Food Authority Describes Its Place in the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York City.

ONE of the most significant contributions of modern nutritional science was the discovery of the importance of the protective foods—milk, eggs, fresh fruits and vegetables. These foods abound in the minerals and vitamins that help to insure normal growth and health, and safeguard us against the deficiency diseases.

In this group, milk and dairy products made from it assume a commanding position because milk is the best and most practical source of calcium and vitamins A and G. These substances should be consumed in much greater proportions than at present if we are to increase health and efficiency and improve our chances for longevity. The first rule in providing adequate amounts of the protective foods is to allow daily a quart of milk for every child and at least a pint for each adult. This amount of milk need not always be consumed as a beverage, however. It may be used in cooked dishes or eaten in the form of cheese and ice cream.

Composition of Ice Cream

Ice cream is often regarded as a confection, but it deserves to be classed among our most nutritious foods. It is composed of varying proportions of cream, milk, sugar, flavoring and frequently a binder or stabilizer such as gelatin. The composition varies somewhat between the home-made and the commercial product, and the commercial product differs in various states. That is because standards governing the butter fat content differ widely so that the requirement ranges from 8 to 14 per cent. Most large commercial companies produce an ice cream with about 12 per cent fat.

Guard Against Contamination

Some states require the pasteurization of the milk or cream used in manufacturing ice cream; others stipulate that the entire mix must be pasteurized before freezing. These measures are desirable, as ice cream requires the same scrupulous care that should be given to milk and cream.

Because of the possibilities for contamination, several precautions should be observed in buying ice cream. Choose cream manufactured by a reputable concern. Be sure to buy from a dealer who keeps it well frozen, for ice cream that has been melted and frozen again may be dangerous, owing to the opportunity for the multiplication of bacteria while it was melted. See to it, also, that the dealer uses sanitary methods in dispensing.

Home-Made Ice Cream

An easy way to make certain of the purity of the ice cream you serve is to make this delicious dessert at home. Motor-driven freezers are available, as well as those that are manually operated. And the homemaker with an automatic refrigerator finds it easier to make ice cream than to prepare many less interesting and nutritious desserts.

Ice cream powders which simplify the preparation of home-made ice cream, can be obtained unflavored, or in a variety of flavors, including lemon and maple, in addition to the popular vanilla, chocolate and strawberry. The ice cream powders may be used with milk or a combination of milk and cream to produce a healthful dessert suitable for every member of the family. They also may be used for less rich but equally refreshing milk or buttermilk sherbets.

A canned freezing mix is likewise available and is especially nice in a fruit flavor as it contains pieces of the whole fruit.

A Comparison With Milk

If we regard one-sixth of a quart of ice cream as an average serving, and compare it with one cup of milk, we make the interesting discovery that there is a close relation between the two. The ice cream provides about 24 more calories and only a trifle less protein, calcium, phosphorus, iron and vitamin A. There is considerably less vitamin G, but ice cream is nevertheless considered an excellent source of this important vitamin.

A Healthful Food

It then becomes apparent why ice cream is considered as an excellent food, not only for adults but for children and convalescents, and why one outstanding authority urges the liberal use of ice cream as a means of increasing the vitamin A content of the diet.

Plain ice cream may be used interchangeably with simple milk puddings. Rich mixtures, such as those filled with nuts and crystallized fruits, rank with the heartier desserts and should follow a lighter meal.

Ice cream is so rich in nourishment that it should not be consumed indiscriminately between meals, but should always be considered as part of the day's ration. When that is done, one nutrition authority states that its beneficial effects can hardly be overestimated.

Effect on Digestion

One frequently hears the question, "Doesn't the eating of ice cream retard the digestion of other foods consumed at the same time?" The answer is that it does slow up slightly the emptying time of the stomach but this delay is without significance and is more than compensated for by the important nutrients it provides.

Many people believe that it is injurious to follow ice cream with hot coffee. But it has been demonstrated that just the opposite is true. The coffee raises the temperature of the food in the stomach and thus modifies the cooling effect of the ice cream.

Another common question concerns the effect of cake or pie a la mode. Experiments indicate that eating ice cream with cake or pie produces a more satisfactory gastric juice than when either of these foods is eaten alone. One must take into consideration, however, that cake or pie a la mode is a rich combination and plan the remainder of the meal accordingly.

Use More Ice Cream

It has been estimated that five billion pounds of milk are used each year in the production of commercial ice cream, which provides about three gallons of ice cream per capita. The amounts of ice cream made at home will raise this figure somewhat. But the amount consumed may well be further increased, because when properly made from pure ingredients, ice cream deserves to rank with other dairy products among our most wholesome and nourishing foods.

Adams vs. Jackson

In 1828 John Quincy Adams, running for President against Jackson, carried only the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland, all of them seaboard states. Jackson carried all the rest. In 1832 Clay carried only Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland and his own inland state of Kentucky.

Steam makes these wheels go 'round, but it also takes a lot of "traction" to pull a train. A locomotive gets its traction through the weight concentrated on the driving wheels. The weight on the four pair of "drivers" of this fleet Great Northern locomotive exceeds 120 tons. Each wheel is nearly 7 feet high.

Where is the "Water"?

Farmers, like railroads, have troubles. If it isn't one thing, it's generally two or three others.

But, suppose someone comes along and proclaims that the only trouble with farmers is that they are overcapitalized?

After you'd cooled off a bit, you'd probably do some figuring. And the result might look like this:

| ASSETS | |
|---|---|
| Original cost of land, bought at a very reasonable price; present worth of buildings and other improvements, all economically built; and present worth of machinery and equipment | $10,330 |
| Working Capital—feed, seed, other supplies on hand, and money in the Bank | 530 |
| Other Investments—part interest in other land | 4,350 |
| Total Assets | $15,210 |
| LIABILITIES | |
| Mortgaged Indebtedness | 6,730 |
| Net Worth | $8,480 |

Now, suppose that instead of owning this enterprise alone, it is owned by a corporation which has issued $5,000 in capital stock. And instead of withdrawing all of the "profits" in years when there were any, you and the other stockholders had been content with only modest dividends, leaving the remainder for needed improvements and additions. In this manner the net worth of your corporation has grown to $8,480 over a period of years.

Anybody who would say there was "watered stock" in your "capital structure" obviously would be talking nonsense. On the contrary, you would be under-capitalized by $3,480.

And that, on a much larger scale, is the situation of the Great Northern Railway.

Combine 50,000 enterprises such as the one we have been discussing, and you have a pretty good picture of the "capital structure" of the Great Northern Railway Company, which spans the whole territory between the Great Lakes and the Pacific Ocean, and owns a half interest in such important connecting railways as the Burlington System and the Spokane, Portland & Seattle Railway.

The Great Northern is actually under-capitalized by at least $173,892,941.

And these figures are based, not on a self-determined "book value," but on actual valuations determined by the Federal Government.

The "re-investment" of this more than 173 millions for which no stock has been issued, has helped to make your railroad more efficient, more dependable, and safer—to have cars available when you need them and to move your crops promptly to distant markets.

Until recent years, the increased efficiency which this "re-investment" has made possible, has gone a long ways towards offsetting the continually rising costs of labor, taxes, supplies and materials and has avoided the necessity of corresponding increases in your rates.

Farmer-Labor Picnic Aug. 28

Plans have been completed for the five-county Farmer-Labor picnic which will be held at the Middle River State Park, commonly called the Ole Mill Site, west of Newfolden, on Sunday August 28th. The five counties sponsoring the picnic are Marshall, Pennington, Roseau, Kittson and Polk.

John J. Kinzer, candidate for Lieutenant Governor and State Treasurer C. A. Halvorson have been billed as the main speakers of the day. Other speakers on the days program include Representative Emil Morberg, Marshall County; George Hagen, Representative from Polk County and many other leaders in the ninth District.

Refreshments will be sold on the grounds. Special singing and a good sports program have been arranged.

Eric Friberg, Roseau, candidate for State Senator on the F-L programfrom the 67th legislative district, will preside over the program for the day.

Members of the committee in charge of arrangements are: Emil Morberg, Oslo, Elmer Sjostrand of Hallock, Verner Nelson of Roseau, Einar Jenson of Highlanding and Geo Hagen of Crookston.

A cordial invitation is extended; bring your family and spend a day with your neighbors.

Peterson-Gaynor Wedding

News was received here that Mayme Peterson, daughter of Mrs. Gust Peterson, was united in marriage to George Gaynor the marriage taking place at 4 o'clock, August 16 at Angola, Indiana with Rev. Smith of that place reading the ceremony. They left immediately after the ceremony to spend some time at a lake.

Mrs. Gaynor is the youngest daughter of Mrs. Peterson and has been employed in Pontiac the past number of years.

First Milk Bar At State Fair

The first "Milk Bar" in the Northwest will be opened to the public at the Minnesota State Fair, September 3 to 10, it was announced by Raymond A. Lee, secretary of the big Exposition.

Fresh, cold milk and dairy products willbe served exclusively at this novel bar, which will be located in the Dairy building on machinery hill. The new refreshment stand, which is certain to prove popular with thousands of Fair visitors, will be a part of the mammoth Minnesota Dairy Industry exhibit to be sponsored by eleven state and Northwest-wide organizations. The combined display will serve to emphasize the importance of the state's $167,000,000 industry.

Seven new model automobiles will be given away as attendance prizes at this year's Exposition. The cars will be awarded each evening, grandstand show excepting Sunday and include Chevrolets, a Plymouth, a Ford and a Lincoln Zephyr.

The largest turntable this side of New York city will be on display in the exhibit of the International Harvester Company, which is bringing a special exhibit to Minnesota. On this turntable, which measures 40 feet in diameter and is 27½ feet high, will be dairy equipment including cream separators, milk coolers milkers and engines. The entire exhibit has been planned to resemble a mammoth milker pail.

A new and improved combine, featuring 86 changes over the 1937 model, will be exhibited for the first time. The combine, which harvests and threshes under one-man operation, is capable of cutting 20 acres of grain in a single work-day.

Crews of workmen are putting buildings and grounds into condition for the arrival of early exhibits. The finishing touches also are being put to the new Arcade and Commissary buildings to be officially opened this year.

Grygla Fall Festival Sept. 3

Paul Lundgren attorney from Thief River Falls, has been billed as the main speaker at the annual Fall Festival to be held at Grygla on Saturday, September 3rd. The gala celebration is sponsored by the village of Grygla in conjunction with the North Star Farmers Club.

In connection with this event, a 4-H Achievement Day will also be held. At this time the club work will exhibit their individual efforts, others also having been asked to bring their produce, making the festival a sort of miniature fair.

A farmers' market will be provided whereby one farmer may bring in any livestock, machinery or miscellaneous items and swap with his neighbor, each being their own salesman. Grounds for this will be furnished to the farmers free of charge.

The 50 piece High School Band of Thief River Falls will furnish the band music for the day while Roisum's dance band of Grand Forks will play for the dance in the evening at the newly enlarged hall.

A special program of music, singing, declamation, speaking, etc. will be given at the ball following a big parade, which will be held at 1:00 p. m.

A number of other feature attractions have also been planned but final arrangements have not been made in all cases.

A special invitation has been extended by the two organizations to spend the day with the "biggest little town of its size". A good time has been guaranteed by the village and club, who ask the opportunity to show you a town that is still going strong through adverse conditions.

Entertained Relatives

The following gathered at the L. M. Larson home on Sunday in honor of Mr. and Mrs Oscar Moe who returned their home at Duluth: Mr. and Mrs. Manvel Moe of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Hans Langlie and family, Mr. and Mrs Arthur Moe and daughter, Mr. and Mrs Edwin Anderson and children, and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Larson.

Mud Lake Dam Reconstruted

The Mud Lake Dam, which was dug out by the farmers from the east end of the county early last spring, has now been reconstructed. McGarry Bros. had a crew of men fill in the gap in Ditch No. 11 on Monday and Tuesday the dirt fill was completed. They used a large Drag Line dredge and several trucks to do the work. As the dirt was filled in with the trucks a caterpillar tractor was used to travel over it to pack it down. Heavier clay was used for the refill and it appears to be a larger fill than the one that was dug out.

The men from the CCC camp at Thief Lake east of Middle River will put back the rock riprap on the dirt fill. Many would believe that the digging out of the dam had drained the entire Mud Lake but, such was not he case. The lake is still there and full of ducks. This dam was in the main ditch thru the lake and the digging out of the dam only let out the water that came down from the east country thru the main ditch.

Confirmands To Enroll

The Nazareth Confirmation classes will be enrolled for the coming year on Friday, Sept. 2, at 10:30 a. m. These intending to enroll in the first year or junior section should be 12 years of age on or before August 1, 1938. Those who may be transferring into the Senior section must be 13 years of age by that same date. All those who wish to be confirmed in the Lutheran faith are invited and urged to be present at the first meeting.

Given Kitchen Shower

About forty ladies gathered at the H. O. Hanson home Friday evening and gave Mrs. Ben Hagglund a bridal shower.

A program was given during which Misses Gladys and Opal Sanoden sang two songs, Mrs. G. Fricker gave a reading, little Delores Sandberg sang "Cathedral in the Pines" and Lois Hanson sang "I Love You Truly" Lunch was served by Mrs. H. O. Hanson. Mrs. Hagglund received many beautiful gifts.

County Surveyor Taking Levels

Mr. Swanson, Marshall County Engineer, and his crew of men began the taking of levels from the Bridge on Highway 89 over Mud Creek westward. The purpose of the survey is to find out the exact contour of the land.

This is good news for the people of Eastern Marshall County who are pleased with the co-operation of County officials are giving them. Officials of the Eastern Marshall County Protective Association are naturally elated with the co-operation they are receiving and are looking forward to the time that the large WPA ditch cleaning project will begin. They also believe that with the co-operation of County and State officials there is a possibility of obtaining assistance from the construction of over-flow canals to take care of Flood waters.

Rural Electrification Meetings

Chas. Ommodt, Commission of Agriculture Dairy of Food, St. Paul, will visit this end of the state over the week end. Mr. Ommodt will be the main speaker at two meetings to be held on Rural Electrification.

He will speak at a meeting in Alvarado on Friday evening and at Roseau on Saturday evening. Farmers who are interested in rural electrification should attend one of these meetings.

Mrs. W. Holst was injured last week when a cow she was milking became frightened and jumped in such a way as to squeeze Mrs. Holst's chest against a stall and cause her much pain. She was treated at the Bratrud Clinic at Thief River Falls and is now much better.

Mrs. J. O. Melby of Oklee, wife of Representative Melby passed away at St. Lukes hospital at Thief River Falls at 5:30 Tuesday morning. She was 72 years. Funeral services are being conducted today at 2 p. m. from Zion Luth. church in Oklee.

Mrs O. H. Nohre was taken to St. Lukes hospital at Thief River Falls on Monday for treatment.

State Patrol Grabs Murderer

Extra curricular activities of the Highway patrol of the Minnesota Highway department in the last two weeks have included:

Capture of a young confessed murderer of his two parents and brother near the Wisconson, Minnesota state line east of Hinkley.

Assisting in a life and death dash from Truman to Minneapolis in a futile effort to save a four year old Truman boy by bringing to his hospital a young Truman man who previously had been supplying him with the correct type of blood. Immediate death was cheated, but several days later the lad succumbed.

M. J. Murray, chief of the patrol, however, points out that the patrol's duty lies on the high way and is concerned only with regulation of traffic and protection of highways. When patrolmen have been permitted to take part in such acts as above, Chief Murray explained it has only in grave emergencies when public welfare or human lives were at stake.

Finishing Dyke Work Here

The McGarry Bros., of Bain Minn. who have the job of constructing the large dykes around the Mud Lake area are this week finishing up their work here according to their foreman on the job. They have moved about five hundred thousand yards of dirt in this construction work. They are now overhauling some parts of the west dyke near the headquarters camp and pulling in some spoil banks which winds up their work here.

They also completed the main road through the area on east, the highway coming from Goodridge to Grygla. When two new bridges are built in this road thru the lake we will have a new road from Holt to Grygla swinging to the south thru the lake instead of the old route thru the center as before.

Helen ane Harriet Wahlin is visiting friends here this week.

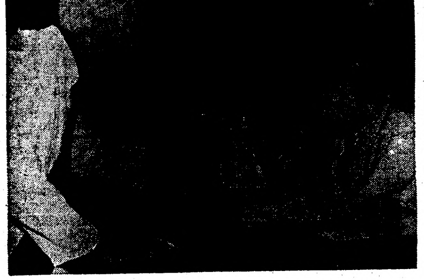
House Un-Americanism Body Probes Hollywood Communism

By Joseph W. LaBine



A. F. OF L.'S JOHN FREY, INVESTIGATOR DIES
They were obliged to discuss John Lewis.

Domestic

Last year Chicago Times Reporter John Metcalfe joined Fritz Kuhn's German-American Bund, traveled 20,000 miles attending Bund meetings, then resigned to write a startling expose for his paper. Direct result was a $25,000 house committee on un-American activities, which met last week under Texas' Martin Dies. After three days of probing, un-Americanism reared its colorful head everywhere from C. I. O. headquarters to glamorous Hollywood.

Ex-Bundsman Metcalfe told how Fritz Kuhn organized 500,000 German-Americans under instructions from Adolf Hitler, how in return Kuhn was given a whip hand over Germany's ambassador to the U. S. He told of Chicago's "Silver Shirts," organized to smash Communism.

Ex-Bundsman Peter Gissibl told how Nazi spies consorted with German-Americans, how the Red Star line "fixed it" so spies could slip back home when they got in trouble. But it was American Federation of Labor's John P. Frey who tossed in the biggest bombshell and caused C. I. O.'s John L. Lewis to snort with rage.

Naziism is one thing, but Metal Tradesman Frey promised to identify "several national C. I. O. officers" as Communists. Would he mention John Lewis? "How could I avoid it!" replied Mr. Frey.

The Frey disclosures had barely started before Committee Investigator Edward Sullivan hurried into Washington from California, anxious to reveal how C. I. O.'s Harry Bridges, America's most famous alien, "attended 'top fraction' meetings of the Communist party and received aid from officials of the U. S. labor department while patriotic citizens were trying to have him deported for his Communistic activities."

Continued Investigator Sullivan: "Witnesses can be produced who can name the day when an official of the immigration service contacted Harry Bridges and called him to his office, where he read . . . a confidential letter of instructions on his future behavior, written by an outstanding official of the labor department."

That Communist Bridges is financed by Hollywood cinema stars was Mr. Sullivan's next charge. Armed with this evidence, supported by Unionist Frey whose accusations John Lewis seemed unwilling to answer, the Dies committee prepared to remain in Washington two more weeks. In New York they will pick up more tasty rumors, then move west across the nation to smell out Communism a la Hollywood.

Foreign

Many years ago Germany's great Bismarck fooled his opponents by telling the truth, knowing they would not believe. Last week, when Adolf Hitler called 500,000 reserves to the colors for war games with a million regular soldiers, all Europe became jittery. But in Berlin there was scoffing; if Germany planned anything but peaceful moves, she would have assembled her giant war machine secretly. Remembering Bismarck, answering too that secret mobilization on such a giant scale would be impossible, Berlin's nervous diplomatic corps sped the news back home to Paris, London and Prague. There, these things happened:

(1) In Prague, England's Lord Runciman has spent a fortnight mediating differences between loyal Czechs and their disgruntled fellow-countrymen, Sudeten Germans. Sudetens want autonomy, eventual annexation by Germany. Was it possible that Germany's mobilization foreshadowed a quick annexation move? As Premier Milan Hodza rejected a Sudeten demand for autonomy, all Czechoslovakia became worried and Lord Runciman wished he were back home.

(2) In Paris, where the government has also been having trouble with Mussolini, French frontiers along Germany and Italy were virtually locked. Next, Interior Minister Albert Sarraut re-enforced his counter-spying service against Germany.

(3) In London, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain forgot his catarrh and returned from Scotland. Since Germany recently closed its fortified zones to all military men, Britain's war office warned its officers to get special certificates to avoid "trouble" during travels in Germany.

Chief dynamite in Germany's maneuvers lay in the possibility of an incident that would topple Europe's delicately balanced peace structure.

● When Japan and Russia signed a truce in their month-old undeclared war on the Manchukuan-Siberian border, only the most optimistic observer could predict lasting peace. As a redemarcation commission prepared last week to settle the boundary dispute, two incidents threatened once more to send Russia's bear charging up bullet-pocked Changkufeng hill. On isolated Saghalien island, half Russian, half Jap, Soviet guards fired on a touring member of the Japanese parliament. Next day Tokyo's troops took advantage of the truce, advanced 100 meters up Changkufeng hill while Russian guns bristled. Since wisdom was the better part of valor, the Japs immediately retreated.

Politics

Dearer than anything else to Franklin Roosevelt is his legislative program, blocked last session not by a Republican minority but by anti-New Deal Democrats. No silent sufferer, Mr. Roosevelt decided long ago that congress needed new blood to replace opponents of his reorganization bill, wage-hour bill and lesser measures. This year's primaries offered an opportunity.

GEORGIA'S GEORGE
He had reason to scowl.

By last week his "purge" program was not a success. But neither had New Dealism suffered many losses in elections thus far. Bound to break the impasse, Mr. Roosevelt decided to stake his political future on his tremendous personal popularity in the South. Fortnight ago at Barnesville, Ga., he bluntly read out of the party Sen. Walter F. George, who sat scowling in the audience (see picture). Last week 60-year-old Senator George took up the "challenge" and set out to beat New Dealer Lawrence Camp in Georgia's primary, September 14.

Stalking next into South Carolina, the President intimated that Senator Ellison D. ("Cotton Ed") Smith would be unwelcome at Washington next winter, intimated also that South Carolinians should send in his place Gov. Olin D. Johnson.

Back in Washington, news of the South's "purge" gave political commentators enough hard tack to chew on until election day. What Franklin Roosevelt wanted was complete domination of congress, insuring passage of his legislative program. Thus would he be able to dictate his 1940 successor, dispelling the third term bugaboo.

People

Last month Anne Lindsay Clark married Son John Roosevelt, who a fortnight ago took an $18-a-week job in the Boston department store of late Democrat Edward Filene. Last week Anne Roosevelt's sister, Sally, who has sung her way to nominal fame in a night club, said she would marry George Xavier McLanahan of New York.

● Wed only two weeks to his telephone operator sweetheart from Gore Bay, Ont., 21-year-old Auto Heir Daniel C. Dodge was honeymooning on Manitoulin island off Lake Huron's Georgian bay. One afternoon as he rummaged around the garage with his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Bryant, a stick of dynamite exploded. Completely shattered was Dodge's left arm, his face torn, his eyes blinded. Rushed off by boat to a distant hospital by his badly injured friends, Dodge suffered excruciating agony. Finally he stood up, swayed, jumped into the water, drowned. Next day Bryant was not expected to live.

Crime

One morning last fall, 18-year-old Paul Dwyer of South Paris, Me., was arrested in North Arlington, N. J. Stuffed in the trunk of his automobile was the corpse of James G. Littlefield, elderly country doctor. Stuffed in the back seat was that of Dr. Littlefield's wife. Paul Dwyer went to prison under life sentence for double murder. Then he changed his story. Said Dwyer:

Francis Carroll, a former deputy sheriff, had improper relations with his daughter, Barbara, Dwyer's sweetheart. When Dr. Littlefield learned of this, Carroll killed him. Later he killed the doctor's wife. Fear of Carroll caused Dwyer to admit both murders.

Last week these horrible accusations were settled. Francis Carroll was convicted, sent to prison for life. It appeared likely that sallow-faced Paul Dwyer would be pardoned, though he might still be charged with guilty knowledge of the slayings. Meanwhile Barbara Carroll received offers to appear in a Boston night club.

Aviation

Transatlantic commercial air supremacy has long since been willed by public consent to U. S. and Great Britain, though until last year neither nation did anything to justify the public's approval. A few weeks ago Nazi Germany sent its Nordwind, Nordstern and Nordmeer catapulting from the Azores to New York and back, placing a new nation in the race for Atlantic air supremacy. Last week Adolf Hitler's birdmen did something still better.

Non-stop from Berlin to New York in 24 hours, 56 minutes, came the 26-passenger Brandenburg. Two days later Brandenburg was again in Berlin, making her return trip in the record time of 19 hours, 55 minutes. No longer a secret is Hitler's ambition to make not London, not Paris, but Berlin the European starting point for transatlantic flights.

● Down from the clouds east of Mexico City plummeted an airliner. First a crash, then flames, and 11 were dead. Down from fog-bound skies into Germany's Black forest came a Czechoslovak liner bound from Prague to Paris. Sixteen died. Down to their deaths off England's coast went six crew members of a royal air force flying boat, bringing to 126 the total fatalities in that service this year. Thus, in 12 hours, in Mexico, England and Germany, 33 lives were snuffed out.

Sports

When Broker J. Smith Ferebee played 144 holes of golf in Chicago last fortnight, it looked like a new marathon fad would start, rivaling marathon dancing, surpassing the toughest flagpole sitter. Last week at St. John, Ind., 23-year-old Charles Grant started playing golf at dawn. By 3 p. m. he had covered 162 holes, by sundown, 225. His worst 18-hole round: the tenth, scoring 81.

Miscellany

From San Francisco's Golden Gate exposition grounds last week came orders that publicity on the 1939 fair must show more fair buildings, fewer fair maidens. Result was a new bit of publicity, something fair officials had not expected. Up and down in front of the administration building paraded "the most beautiful picket line in America." Their placards: "We're out on a limb." "We want a leg-acy."

● Last fortnight Britain's proud Queen Mary made a westward Atlantic passage in 3 days, 21 hours, 48 minutes, clipping better than an hour from the record of her rival, France's Normandie. Last week Queen Mary steamed east from New York, made the crossing in 3 days, 20 hours, 42 minutes, to beat another Normandie record. Said a proud officer: "This is the lion's turn to roar."

● Last June 1 a big malamute dog went hunting with his master off Alaska's frozen Bering strait. Lingering off shore to gobble seal meat, the beast was carried to sea on an ice floe. Last week, more than two months later, the master again went hunting, this time with Father Bernard R. Hubbard, Alaskan missionary. On lonely Point Hope, 250 miles away, the dog bounded up. He had cruised the entire distance on a cake of ice, had thrived on seal meat.

C. Houston Goudiss Explains the Causes of Food Allergy

Well-Known Food Authority Names the Foods That Cause Trouble

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York City.

A NEW phrase has crept into daily usage in recent years, has in fact become so common that comedians use it in jest and draw laughs from their audiences when they mimic, "I'm allergic!" But the words have deep significance for perhaps 30 to 60 per cent of the population who have cause to agree with the old saying that "one man's meat is another man's poison."

SEND FOR THIS
FREE CHART
of
FOODS THAT OFTEN CAUSE TROUBLE

C. Houston Goudiss will gladly send you, FREE, a chart showing which foods have been found most frequently to cause allergic reactions, and also those which are the least likely to cause trouble. Just state your request on a postcard and address it to C. HOUSTON GOUDISS, 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

They are victims of the curious phenomenon known as food allergy and have an abnormal reaction to the proteins in certain foods and other substances. As a result, foods which are beneficial in themselves and which usually have an important place in a normal balanced diet, cause a variety of unpleasant effects.

These may range from hives or a skin rash to a gastric disturbance with spells of nausea. The individual may suffer from migraine headache or an attack of hay fever or asthma; or he may have a tendency to what appears to be bronchial or head colds.

It has been determined that these symptoms in an individual who is allergic are due to intolerance of certain proteins. Even when the offending foods are fruits and vegetables, it is the protein that is responsible. It has been suggested that the sensitization results because at some previous time, an unsplit or undigested protein in some way passed through the membranes lining the digestive tract and entered the blood stream. This acted very much like a foreign substance and sensitized body cells in some way so that whenever the same food is eaten, the disturbing symptoms occur as a sort of defense mechanism.

Heredity a Factor

A tendency to allergy seems to be inherited. But the substances which cause a disturbance differ with each individual, and the type of reaction also differs. For example, a mother may be allergic to milk; her child inheriting the tendency may be allergic to fish. Drinking milk may give the mother an attack of asthma; eating fish may cause the child to break out with hives.

Trouble-Making Foods

It is difficult to generalize regarding the foods that cause trouble, because they vary so widely among individuals who are sensitized, and often one person is sensitive to a number of foods. It has been found that the foods most frequently causing allergic symptoms include wheat, milk, eggs, chocolate, pork, fish and shellfish, tomatoes, cauliflower, cabbage, strawberries and oranges.

Skin rashes are believed to be caused most frequently by hypersensitiveness to milk, cereal or pork. Hives are reported to occur often from eating strawberries, chocolate, fish and tomatoes. Wheat is frequently an offender in migraine headaches. Asthma seems to be common in persons who are sensitive to milk, eggs and butter.

Other Offending Substances

Foods are not always responsible for allergy, and the symptoms may be produced by contact with wool, feathers, dust, pollen, dander from horses or other animals; or even the sting of a bee.

Discovering the Offenders

The ideal procedure for the allergy victim is to find out the offending foods or substances and avoid them. For early recognition of a tendency to allergy may prevent discomfort and trouble.

There are two ways to discover the trouble makers. One is to learn by experience, either by keeping a record of the foods eaten and noting the appearance of symptoms, or by eliminating from the diet, first one and then another of the foods that are suspected of causing difficulty. The other is to let your doctor conduct simple skin tests. Small scratches are made on the arms and legs, and each scratch touched with a solution made of the protein of a food or substance known to cause trouble. If a person is allergic to that substance, the skin around the scratch swells and becomes inflamed. The inflammation disappears after a few hours and causes no pain or inconvenience.

Other Foods Must Be Used

Once the offending food or foods are determined, they should be eliminated either for all time or until the individual becomes desensitized. If the trouble maker is an uncommon food, such as lobster or clams, the allergy presents no great problem, but when children react to necessary foods such as milk, eggs and wheat, the homemaker faces a difficult task.

When milk is the offending food, it must be avoided, not only as a beverage, but in bread, cakes and puddings. Sometimes dried or evaporated milk, goat's milk or soy bean milk may be used instead. When wheat is the trouble maker, the alternatives include cornstarch, rice flour, potato or rye flour; rice and corn cereals; tapioca or barley. When hen's eggs are injurious, duck's eggs can sometimes be used with success, or meat or fish may be substituted.

Sometimes after a period of exclusion, an immunity is built up so that later the foods may be reintroduced gradually into the diet.

Don't Jump to Conclusions

It must be borne in mind that many of the symptoms produced by food sensitivity may also result from other causes. For this reason, it is unwise to decide that one is allergic without due investigation. Nor must the imagination or the current widespread discussion of the subject be allowed to cause adults or children to mask their unwillingness to eat certain foods with the false notion that they are unduly sensitive.

On the other hand, homemakers should be sympathetic with both children and adults who say with good cause, "I can't eat that!" And it would appear that there may even be some compensation in this unpleasant situation. For a group of scientists who have studied the subject announced a few years ago that those who belong to the allergy group appear to have a definite capacity for becoming intellectually superior. Thus, the child who suffers from a skin rash or stuffy nose today, due to food sensitivity, is apt to be full of energy when he reaches manhood and exhibit unusual ability for cultural leadership.

Questions Answered

Mrs. A. F. J.—The caloric value of fresh or canned mushrooms is very slight, as their carbohydrate is in a form that cannot be readily assimilated. They are useful, however, for adding savor and appetite appeal to many dishes.

Mrs. A. M. T.—The notion that onions or lettuce contain opium or some other narcotic drug is wholly without foundation. They are two of our finest vegetables.

HOW to SEW

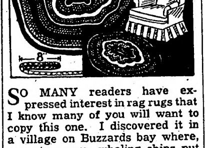
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



MIXED BRAIDING WITH GREEN ORANGE AND BLACK STRIPES
8"

SO MANY readers have expressed interest in rag rugs that I know many of you will want to copy this one. I discovered it in a village on Buzzards bay where, a century ago, whaling ships put out to sea. In the book offered below there is a knitted rag rug found one time on a trip through Ohio. I have not yet done a special book on rag rugs. It does seem that there should be a way to exchange designs from different parts of the country.

The center medallion of the rug shown here is its outstanding feature. The braiding is fine and tight. The braided strips should be sewn together with strong linen thread or about size 8 cotton thread used double. The center round should be 8-inches long as shown. Sew around and around until the center oval is 14-inches long, then make the eight loops shown in the next round—three along each side of the oval and one at each end.

These loops should be 2-inches long. In working around the loops with the next rows, the trick is to "ease" the inside edge of the braided strip in just enough to keep the work perfectly flat, and to give the scalloped effect shown. As you work around, the scallops gradually straighten out and the rug becomes more oval in shape.

NOTE: Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' book SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Forty-eight pages of directions for making slipcovers and curtains; dressing tables, lampshades and many other useful articles for the home. Price 25 cents postpaid. Ask for Book 1, and address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Smart Dresses for Now and Later On

HERE are two perfectly charming fashions that will fill a definite place in your life if you make them up immediately in pretty cotton or cool silk. And they are so perfectly in key with future fashions that you should by all means repeat them later in fall and winter materials. You'll be surprised, when you study the detailed sew chart included in each pattern, how quickly and easily you can finish them. You don't need experience. Even beginners enjoy working with these simple patterns.

Tailored Dress of Pique.

If your daytime wardrobe needs replenishing for the remaining weeks of summer, make this nice tailored dress of pique or gingham, and see how refreshed and comfortable you'll feel. Later on, wear it for fall in challis, jersey, or flat crepe. The short sleeves, easy waistline and action pleats in the skirt make this dress very easy to work in—and the deeply notched collar and patch pockets give it finish enough so that it is appropriate for street wear, too.

Tiny-Waisted Afternoon Dress.

Here's the type of dress that all important fashion sources show for fall! The shaped, rather high square neckline, the short sleeves, puffed at the top, the gathers that give you flattering bust fullness and the very, very small waist—these are all new notes. Just five steps, too, in the sew chart. For immediate wear, make it up in dotted Swiss or voile. Your fall version should be thin wool, crepe de chine or rayon jersey.

The Patterns.

No. 1462 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 4¼ yards of 39-inch material.

No. 1561 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 4½ yards of 39-inch material; 1⅝ yards ribbon for belt.

★ Movie Lure
★ March Comeback
★ Bing's Song

By Virginia Vale

PERHAPS you, the public, hadn't realized it, but you have been staying away from the movies in such stupendous numbers that the motion picture industry is about to spend $1,000,000 to lure you back into the theaters again.

Producers, distributors and theater men will put up the money. And you will get $250,000 of it, my friends. There will be a contest. At present, although the rules have not yet been decided on, it seems likely that this contest will be in the form of a questionnaire based on pictures released between now and October 31.

Booklets containing rules will be issued only at theater box-offices. Each contestant will have to answer 30 questions about 30 different pictures in order to qualify.

Half of that $1,000,000 will be spent on advertising in newspapers and magazines.

Fredric March is going to try, try again—and if he fails this time, no doubt he'll keep on trying—to make a come-back on the stage. Last year he and his wife, Florence Eldridge, backed a play that was produced in New York, you'll recall, and it failed—not because of their performances, but just because it wasn't an awfully good play.

FREDRIC MARCH

If they can find a play that they like, they'll do it again, come autumn. In the meantime, he's storing up more of what it takes to produce plays by working in Hal Roach's "There Goes My Heart," and in another picture when that one is finished.

—*—

It looks as if Myron Selznick had started something that may result in our having better pictures. He has formed a partnership with various prominent actors, writers and directors—as the best theatrical agent in Hollywood he knew all of them—to make pictures, with a share of the pictures' profits taking the place of salary. Ernst Lubitsch Productions, Inc., is the first of these producing units.

Under this arrangement, a picture will have to be good—or else!

The Stroud twins traveled a long and winding road, so far as their career was concerned, before they reached those Sunday evening broadcasts where they share honors with Charlie McCarthy. They began as acrobats with a circus; ran away from home to do it. Then they went into vaudeville, and switched to dancing. They toured this country, then Australia, New Zealand and the South Seas before returning to Broadway, and switched their act again, this time to the sort of thing you hear them doing on the air.

Here's something new under the sun. Practically all of the big publishers of popular music want a certain song, and can't have it. The song is "Hail KMH," the theme-song introduction to those dialogues between Bing Crosby and Ken Carpenter. It was written especially for the broadcasts, and that's that, even if it has become such a hit that the song publishers are itching to get it into general circulation.

The four-motored German monoplane Brandenburg which successfully completed a round trip flight between Berlin and New York city. The plane covered the flight from Berlin to New York in 24 hours and 51 minutes and two days later made the homeward flight from New York to Berlin in 19 hours and 55 minutes. Capt. Alfred Henke, who was assisted by a crew of three, wears a big smile over his remarkable feat. The east to west crossing was the first time in history such a feat has been accomplished. The flyers clipped 5 hours and 50 minutes from the only previous non-stop west to east crossing to Berlin. ### Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Some drivers insist on doing foolish stunts day in and day out although they know better. Some of these stunts are staged during the worst kind of weather.

Last night during a severe thunder storm when driving conditions were bad, rain was falling in torrents, and visibility was poor, driver after driver passed me on curves and hills.

Hurry to get home, worry over open windows and curtains getting wet, and fear that new carpet would get soaked by the rain - - these and other silly reasons are frequently given for the haste and violation of all traffic rules which endangers the drivers' as well as lives of others.

Such drivers are just plain fools. They simply will not, or do not want to learn; therefore, the law should take action and revoke their drivers' licenses until they learn how to drive.

Rides in State Fair Revue

Trick and fancy riding, featured in the Westward Ho! episode of State Fair Revue of 1938, night grandstand show at the Minnesota State Fair, September 3 to 10, is performed by dainty Lavania Williams of Caldwell, Kansas. Sharpshooting and fancy roping will augment the 36 Ainslee dancers and a host of other features in this novel extravaganza.

BENSON EXPOSES NEW REPUBLICAN "LINE"

Governor Benson, in his recent radio reply answering Alf Landon's attack on the New Deal, delivered a most serious indictment of Republican tactics today calculated to embarass President Roosevelt.

"They( meaning the Republicans) are doing more than sabotaging the New Deal," the Governor said. "They are trying to sabotage recovery itself. They do not want recovery under President Roosevelt; they are satisfied t oride back into office on the miseries of the American people."

The Governor pointed out that the new "line" being followed by the Republicans nationally is identical with the line pursued by Republicans in attacking liberal state administrations. This line is posing as liberals themselves, even though this is a mere guise and subterfuge, and atacking true liberal administrations as wasteful and corrupt.

It is a bit strange, to say the least, to hear Landon (and in Minnesota Stassen) talking of adequate relief, social security, collective bargaining, and similar progressive measures put over despite bitter Republican opposition, when it is recalled that just a year or so ago they said these measures were imported from Moscow and branded as communists all those who espoused them.

TO SHOOT DOWN WAR BALLOON AT STATE FAIR

Crashing earthward in flames after an attack by a squadron of fighting planes, this authentic war balloon will headline the Thrill Day program at the Minnesota State Fair, Friday, September 9. Preliminary to the final, breath-taking moment there will be a realistic plane battle in the clouds with the gas-bag defended by anti-aircraft guns on the ground.

Committees Spread Hopper Bait

Many of the township grasshopper control committees are now spreading bait in an effort to control and cut down the amount of egg laying which will be done this fall by the hoppers. A considerable number of mechanical bait spreaders are now in operation. These seem to be quite satisfactory and do the work efficiently and rapidly.

County highways will be spread with bait during the week. The mixing station at Argyle has ample supplies of mixed bait on hand at all times. All that is necessary is the addition of moisture sufficient to make for ease in spreading.

The control campaign should be conducted until frost. The grasshoppers will be laying eggs until that time. Control now will make control next year a simpler problem.

John Offerdahl of Fordville, N. Dak. spent a few days here helping his aged mother, Mrs. Nels Offerdahl make arrangements for an auction sale which she will have on her farm stock and machinery on Sept. 27. Mr. Offerdahl is also a new subscriber to the News.

Sale bills for the auction will be out in about ten days and an ad will also appear in the News on Sept. 16.

Tom Severson has sold his old farm home which he had out by Thief River six miles east of Holt. A farmer west of Thief River Falls bought the house and moved it to his place on Monday. Tom is the last man to move out of the Mud Lake area which has been taken over for a wild fowl game refuge. The only buildings remaining in the area now are the ones on the former Olaf Ness farm and which Chas. Wilson has purchased and will move to his farm in Holt Township. Mr. Severson still has one small building which he will move closer to Holt and use for a home for himself.

15 Win Trip To State Fair

Fifteen Marrhall County 4-H club members will receive trips to the State Fair this coming week for their achievements during the past year of club work. Livestock club members who will be attending the fair are: Duane Horien, Holt-dairy calf. Bob Olson, Newfolden - poultry. Clyde Munger, Warren-pure bred lamb. Harold Rosendahl, Warren-pure bred gilt. Ida Grandstrand and Henry Hoper, from Stephen-presenting a demonstration on "Feeding the Dairy Calf for Show." Marguerite Engen and Ruth Kurz of Warren will present a clothing demonstration dealing with the selection of textiles. Edith Johnson and Doris Hogberg of Argyle will present individual bread baking demonstrations. Vera Grandstrand of Stephen will present Marshall County in the 4-H club style revue.

Selected as the winning boy and girl in the recent county health contests were Bernard Crummy of Argyly and Phyllis Thibodo of Stephen. They will represent Marshall County in the State Fair 4-H club health contest. Marshall countys representatives at the State Fair Farm Boy's Camp will be Lester Ruud of Gatzke and Sanford Tverstol of Argyle. The clothing exhibit prepared by Lola Rosendahl of Warren and the canning exhibit prepared by Jeanette Thibodo of Stephen will also be entered in the State Fair competition.

These club members have earned their trips to the State Fair by their outstanding work in 4-H club this year.

Moved To T. R. Falls

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Hagglund who have made their home here this summer, moved to Thief River Falls on Saturday. They have rented the upstairs rooms of the Herman Heinze home and will live there this winter. Mr. Hagglund who is employed at the Forum has been driving from here to work this summer.

Grygla Fall Festival Sept. 3

Paul Lundgren attorney from Thief River Falls, has been billed as the main speaker at the annual Fall Festival to be held at Grygla on Saturday, September 3rd. The gala celebration is sponsored by the village of Grygla in conjunction with the North Star Farmers Club.

In connection with this event, a 4-H Achievement Day will also be held. At this time the club work will exhibit their individual efforts, others also having been asked to bring their produce, making the festival a sort of miniature fair.

A farmers' market will be provided whereby one farmer may bring in any livestock, machinery or miscellaneous items and swap with his neighbor, each being their own salesman. Grounds for this will be furnished to the farmers free of charge.

The 50 piece High School Band of Thief River Falls will furnish the band music for the day while Roisum's dance band of Grand Forks will play for the dance in the evening at the newly enlarged hall.

A special program of music, singing, declamation, speaking, etc. will be given at the hall following a big parade, which will be held at 1:00 p. m.

A number of other feature attractions have also been planned but final arrangements have not been made in all cases.

A special invitation has been extended by the two organizations to spend the day with the "biggest little town of its size". A good time has been guaranteed by the village and club, who ask the opportunity to show you a town that is still going strong through adverse conditions.

Mens Club Tuesday Evening

Ladies Night at the Men's Club will be featured by presenting a well recommended moving picture, March of Faith. This picture has been well received in all communities where it has been shown. Everyone in the community is invited to see this picture next Tuesday evening Sept. 6, at the Nazareth Lutheran Church.

There will be no charge for this entertainment. We want to see as many as possible there that evening.

Oscar L. Johnson was rushed to the Physicians hospital at Thief River Falls on Sunday to be treated for sleeping sickness. Mr. Johnson was taken ill last week.

50,000 EXHIBITS TO BE FEATURED AT STATE FAIR

Record Displays Assured As Prize List Sets New 15 Year Mark

Bountiful crops, improved markets and a general air of optimism point to the greatest Minnesota State Fair in history from September 3 to 10.

Modern trends in agriculture, industry and the home will be the keynote of the $25,000,000 exposition that will bring together more than 50,000 displays by 6,000 exhibitors.

Competitive interest will reach a new high as the thousands of individual exhibitors vie for $112,595 in cash premiums and prizes—the largest offered by the exposition in more than 15 years.

Many Improvements

An improvement and expansion program that has given the Exposition the finest physical plant in the world, will add several new units to existing facilities for 1938 visitors. New will be the arcade and commissary building which will add to the convenience and comfort of patrons, a double thoroughfare from the Woman's building to the grandstand, miles of new curbs, sidewalks, sewers and electric conduit as well as enlarged parking areas and enhanced landscaping for the entire grounds.

Livestock exhibits will reach an all-time high with 7,200 of the nation's bluebloods competing in a score or more of breeds of cattle, horses, sheep, and swine, for approximately $50,000 in cash prizes and honors equivalent to the world's championships.

Reflection of the current bountiful harvest will be seen in the 35 county booth displays, which are visual evidence of the state's pre-eminence in the agricultural world.

Continuance of that high agricultural standard is assured through the participation of 3,500 boys and girls enrolled in 4-H club work in contests, displays and demonstrations for which the management is offering $19,200. These boys and girls are the winners of a host of district, county and regional championships.

Big Machinery Show

Machinery hill will teem with activity displaying 80 acres of moving-type exhibits stressing the latest developments in farm and labor-saving devices.

Skillful application of the everyday tasks of the housewife—the true feminine art—will be concentrated in the Woman's activities building.

Minnesota's leading position in dairy and butter production will be emphasized in an elaborate working exhibit presented through the co-operation of the dairy industry.

The care and handling of bees and honey, new and improved methods of horticulture, exhibits on the work of State departments, new trends in aircraft, a $1,000,000 fine arts showing, the work of rural school children, and a host of others all will combine to give an accurate cross-section of Minnesota life at the Exposition.

Card of Thanks

I hereby express my heartfelt thanks for the party and cash purse given me last Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Chris A. Saustad.

KISS IS REWARD FOR STATE FAIR TRIP

Here's a kiss for Cinderella! Dick Bonzo, the educated Chimpanzee, indulges in a little simian osculation with Ray Nell. Both are with the Royal American Shows to be featured at the Minnesota State Fair, September 3 to 10. Bonzo, who has an i. q. rating of a four-year-old, is the star of the Monkey Town show while Ray Nell, one of the few feminine impresarios in the show business, is the producer of "The Gay Nineties."

Many Attend F-L Picnic Sun.

A very large crowd attended the five-county Farmer-Labor picnic held at the Middle River State Park known as the Old Mill Site, on Sunday. The main speakers of the day were John J. Kinzer, candidate for Lieutenant Governor; C. A. Halvorson, State Treasurer; George Hagen, Representative from Polk county and Emil Morberg, Representative from Marshall county.

Eric Friberg. Roseau, candidate for State Senator from the 67th Legislative District which also takes in Marshall County, was the chairman of the program. Others who gave short talks were Verner Nelson, publisher of the Marshall County Star and Northern Minnesota Leader and Rev. H. M. Holm of Warren.

The speakers of the day gave the people a very fine outline of the policies and principals of the Farmer-Labor party and the voters went home with some very valuable information which they could not get through the reactionary newspapers of the state.

Mr. Selvig, chief auditor of the state department of Agriculture, St. Paul, spoke at a Rural Electrification meeting at Alvarado on Friday evening and at Roseau Saturday evening. Good crowds attended both meetings. Many farmers from Wanaska were at the meeting as they are interested in getting electricity out to their farms in that area south of Roseau.

It was brought out that to be approved by the Federal Bureau at Washington an electrification project must be 100 miles long and have at least three farmers per mile. Several projects are already going in the southern part of the state.

Four of the boys of the Holt Boy Scout Troop 112 spent this week on a camping trip near the Thief River east of Steiner. They expect this will be their last camping out for the summer school will start next week. Those who were out are Jerome Sorum, Milton Hanson, Harold Gavere and Howard Lorentson.

School Opens Here Sept. 6

Next Tuesday morning through-out the state children and teachers will turn their destination toward a reunion at the school houses of the various communities of the state.

At the local school such will be with the same staff but a few new faces in the primary grades. Miss Johnson will return for her eighth year as primary teacher; Miss Lyseng returns for her second year as intermediate teacher Mr. Kaufert is returning for his second year in the upper grade room; Miss Boethin will enter her second year as high school teacher. It will be Mr. Karvonen's second year as Superintendent and third year in the local school.

Mothers will feel relieved when the children return to school. It is recognized that parent's will have less worry of their family during the school hours. However, teachers everywhere ask for the cooperation of the parent's in carrying out the work in the school. In the past people of this community have been very helpful in every respect. It is hoped that the parents will confer with the teachers more often in respect to how well their children are doing. By no means take too much stock in hear say. Common understanding is helpful to all concerned. The local staff will be glad to discuss any school matters with the parents of the children. Visits to the school are welcomed.

Save Time With Mock Smocking

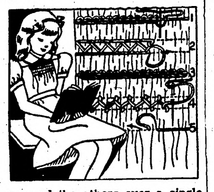
By Ruth Wyeth Spears

IF SMOCKING seems to be time consuming, here is a short cut that saves hours. The first step is to shirr the material by machine. Loosen the tension slightly and stitch in straight rows; then pull up the bobbin thread to gather the material.

You will note in the sketch that some of the simple hand stitches are made over two rows of gathers and the others over a single row. Much of the beauty of mock smocking depends upon the spacing of the rows. The double rows of gathers in the sketch, No. 2 and 4, are ¼-inch apart. The space between these and the single rows should be about ¾-inch.



Another important point is the choice of colors and an interesting variety of stitches. In the arrangement shown here, rows 1, 3 and 5 are made in the darkest color by back-stitching over the gathers as in row 5 and then working loop-stitches through the backstitches as in row 1. Row 2 is a version of plain feather stitching, and row 4 is done in the Cretan stitch. Variations of all of these stitches and dozens of others that will be new to you and your friends are fully illustrated in Book 2 offered herewith.

Are you ready for birthdays; and the next church bazaar? Do you turn time into money with things to sell? Mrs. Spears' Sewing Book 2 has helped thousands of women. It is full of new ideas for things you can make in your spare time. If your home is your hobby you will also want Book 1—Sewing for the Home Decorator. Order by number enclosing 25 cents for each book. If you order both books, a leaflet on crazypatch quilts with 36 authentic stitches will be included free. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St.,

Harvest Crops on Reclaimed Sea Land

Farmers of the new community of Weirengen, reclaimed from the Zuyder Zee in the Netherlands, gather in a rich harvest. The land on which they farm grain crops and fodder was under the sea until a few years ago, when a government-sponsored reclamation project made it available for agriculture.

Because Henry Hofer, a blacksmith at Sharpsburg, Pa., has so much work to do that he starts at 5 a. m. every morning and works sometimes 17 hours a day, neighbors disturbed by the pounding on his anvil complained to the police. But when Henry, who has been a blacksmith for 44 years, learned no one could legally stop him, he continued to start work at 5 a. m.

Becoming, Practical Frocks

THE shops are full of beautiful new fabrics just crying to be made up in smart new fashions—and these patterns make it very easy to do your own sewing. When you do, of course, you can have many more clothes because it's so inexpensive to buy your own, fine quality fabrics—and then your clothes, and your daughter's, too, will have that distinctly made-to-order, well-fitted look that's more flattering and smart than anything else.

For Large Women.

This afternoon dress is carefully designed to look well on large figures. The v-neck, cut in one with the shoulders, makes your face look less full. The short, rippling sleeves minimize the size of your forearm—and they're so pretty and graceful, too. The skirt is smooth over the hips, and the bodice has necessary bust fullness. Here's a dress that will be your favorite, when you make it up in the prettiest silk crepe, georgette or sheer wool that you can find.

For Slim School-Girls.

Your daughter will be delighted with the grown-up, slick look of this basque frock, and yet it's just as simple as a school-girl's dress should be. This is the style that growing girls, too thin for their height, look very well in. The high neckline covers up their collar bones, the puff sleeves and flaring skirt have a filling out effect. This style is pretty in so many fabrics—cotton, wool and silk. Especially linen, gingham, challis, jersey and for dress-up, taffeta.

The Patterns.

1563 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 5½ yards of 39-inch material.

1464 is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. Size 10 requires 2⅞ yards of 39-inch material, plus ⅜ yard contrasting.

Success in Sewing.

Success in sewing, like success in any other field, depends upon how you approach the task in hand. To help you turn out clothes professional looking in every detail, we have a book which plainly sets forth the simple rules of home dressmaking. The beginner will find every step in making a dress clearly outlined and illustrated within its covers. For the experienced sewer there are many helpful hints and suggestions for sewing short cuts. Send 15 cents (in coins) today for your copy of SUCCESS IN SEWING, a book every home dressmaker will find of value.

Cleaning Flour Sieves.—Always wash flour sieves in soda water, never in soapy water, as particles of soap may adhere and give a soapy taste to foods put through the sieve.

Economy Note.—Pieces of ribbon that come on gift boxes may be utilized in making shoulder straps for underwear. Cut them into six or eight-inch strips.

• • •

Clean With Soda.—If there is a constant smell of burning when cooking is going on, examine gas burners. They are probably filled with sediment from "boilovers."

• • •

Left-Over Juice.—Save the juice from canned pineapple and the liquid from maraschino cherries to use when making fruit punch.

Hanging Pictures. — Pictures should be hung about at the level of the eye, but since they also are to be hung in relation to the furniture groups, it is sometimes better to hang one below eye level over a low table or desk, or above eye level over a high chest.

• • •

Save Ironing.—If sheets are hung on the line dripping wet the weight of the water pulls them down and removes most of the wrinkles. They may then be folded neatly without ironing when dry.

• • •

Polish Hardwood Floors.—Do not let hardwood floors get badly worn before having them polished. A little polish on the worn places each week keeps floors always looking well.

Happiness

The happiness of life is made up of minute fractions, the little—too soon-forgotten charities, of a kiss or a smile, a kind look, a heartfelt compliment in the disguise of playful raillery, and the countless infinitesimals of pleasurable thought and genial feeling.
—Coleridge.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Hitler Woos Central Europe With Overtures to Hungary
By Joseph W. LaBine

Foreign

At Nickelsdorf, Austria, an imposing triumphal arch was raised. Vienna's railway station was decorated. At Kiel a 10,000-ton battleship awaited launching. Thus, feeling like a girl with several ardent suitors, Hungary's Regent Nicholas Horthy sped in glory last week from Budapest to Berlin.

Not since Benito Mussolini visited Adolf Hitler last spring had Berlin made such plans. Indeed the same trappings that greeted Il Duce now greeted Admiral Horthy. But Adolf Hitler had more than benign friendship in mind.

HUNGARY'S HORTHY

Hungary lies directly in the path of Germany's "drive to the east" in which she would swallow Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Jugo-Slavia, thereby unifying all central Europe. As Nicholas Horthy closeted himself with Hitler, rumors of proposals began flying. Rumors: (1) Joint proposal by Italy and Germany to incorporate Hungary in the Rome-Berlin axis; (2) proposal that Hungary leave the League of Nations, declaring the Trianon treaty of 1920 void; (3) offer by Italy and Germany for extended Hungarian minority rights in Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Jugo-Slavia; (4) German-Hungarian economic unity.

What made Regent Horthy feel like a sought-after maiden was another offer, this one from foreign ministers of Czechoslovakia, Jugo-Slavia and Rumania, whose Little Entente met at Bled, Jugo-Slavia. Their offers included a nonaggression pact and military equality.

War

In Paris, Premier Edouard Daladier jolted France from its vacation sluggishness to demand abolition of the 40-hour week "in the interests of military and economic defense." In Germany, Adolf Hitler's giant war maneuvers entered their second week. In both Rome and London, eyes focused from distant China to nearby Spain, theaters of 1938's two wars. The war picture:

● Having set Britain's Neville Chamberlain back on his ear by refusing a proposal for evacuating foreign soldiers, Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco opened his drive to end Spain's civil war before a third winter sets in. Aimed at loyalist Barcelona were crack Navarese and Italian troops, while overhead rebel planes rained death. Along the Ebro river front, 5,000 government militiamen were captured. But biggest news of the Spanish war came not from Spain, but from Switzerland.

At Zurich, Premier Juan Negrin arrived for conferences with the duke of Alba, Franco envoy. After three days of hide-and-seek in which neither Negrin nor Alba could be found, observers wondered whether Spain's two emissaries were hiding from each other or had agreed on terms.

● While China's Chiang Kai-Shek led his troops in defense of Hankow last week, Former Premier Wang-Ching-Wei threatened to supplant him as leader of what little government now remains in that battle-pocked country. Tired of war, Japan mobilized 1,000,000 men and looked to Italy for help.

Britain has already refused negotiations with Japan unless her rights in China are safeguarded. But after two months of secret mediation, Italy came out in the open with a plan to establish Wang Ching-Wei as head of a revised Chinese central government. That Germany belonged in this picture was apparent; one of Wang's chief aims would be adherence to the German-Jap-Italian pact against communism.

Labor

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor had two reasons to be happy last week. Smallest reason was that Franklin Roosevelt agreed the Wagner labor act must be amended. Biggest reason was that John Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization was embroiled in several family quarrels.

Several weeks ago, Homer Martin, president of C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers, expelled five vice presidents for alleged communistic leanings. Last week these vice presidents called a convention of U. A. W.'s insurgent bloc in Toledo, asking Boss Lewis to end the fight. Specific requests were (1) appointment of a "dictator" for U. A. W., and (2) an election to let members themselves decide the issue.

Meanwhile, in western Kentucky, President Joseph Ozanic of the Progressive Mine Workers of America gave John Lewis another headache. Four thousand miners, who left C. I. O.'s United Mine Workers three years ago, took out membership in A. F. of L.'s Progressive body.

Final quarrel was that between Francis Gorman, United Textile Workers president, and Sidney Hillman, head of Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. Last week Gorman asked his followers to desert C. I. O. because of "dictatorship and communism."

Canada

Fortnight ago, the economic ties linking Canada and the U. S. were forged tighter at Kingston, Ontario. There, Franklin Roosevelt promised U. S. aid should Canada ever find herself at war. There, too, he spoke bravely for the long-argued St. Lawrence waterway project. Last week, as Franklin Roosevelt settled back at Hyde Park, these bits of Canadian-American news made headlines:

(1) Ontario's Premier Mitchell Hepburn bluntly told Prime Minister MacKenzie King he would oppose the St. Lawrence project until Canada's railroad losses stop.

(2) Observers predicted America's neutrality act would be revised to insert Canada among Western Hemisphere nations excepted from the act's applications.

(3) Washington continued negotiations for an international highway to Alaska, passing through Canadian soil, which would probably be built with $14,000,000 PWA funds.

Domestic

New York rushed to work one morning last week. All subway stations were crowded; at one the crowd was too great. Pulling away from this station a train stopped momentarily to free a woman caught in the door. Behind, unable to stop, rushed a second train piloted by Motorman Salvatore Cota. His train crashed into the rear of the first, telescoping. Then came explosion, darkness, panic. Half-hour later authorities were able to report two dead, 40 injured. As Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia looked on, Motorman Cota had his leg amputated before he could be released from the wreckage.

Politics

"Purge" crept into John Public's vocabulary last week with devastating speed. More than ever before, U. S. voters looked at New York, Maryland and Georgia where reside Franklin Roosevelt's three favorite "purgees," Democratic legislators he wants ousted in next month's primaries because they oppose certain New Deal measures. Last week these senators caused this news:

● In Georgia, Purgee Walter F. George drew support from James W. Arnold, Republican national committeeman who asked G. O. P. partisans to vote for George against his Roosevelt opponent, Lawrence S. Camp. Two days earlier, RFC Attorney Edgar B. Dunlap was asked to resign because he was stumping for George's re-election.

● In Maryland, Purgee Millard E. Tydings thundered into a microphone that his commonwealth "will not permit her star in the flag to be purged from the constellation of the states."

MILLARD E. TYDINGS
The purgee refused to be purged.

● In New York, Purgee John J. O'Connor picked up "the gage which the President has thrown down," promised to fight Franklin Roosevelt's "invitation to a dictatorship." Three days later Franklin Roosevelt and WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins found themselves embarrassed when New York's Worker's Alliance, a WPA union, announced plans to raise a $50,000 war chest to use against Representative O'Connor. Said Harry Hopkins: "I don't like it . . . I don't know what can be done about it."

Crime

At stake in a Manhattan courtroom last week was an Owosso, Mich., boy's chance to be Republican candidate for governor of New York. The boy was District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey. His chance lay in conviction of James J. Hines, Tammany leader, for alleged conspiracy in the flourishing 100 million-dollar-a-year "numbers" racket, once conducted by the late Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer.

Fortnight ago, the trial opened as witness after witness added to the pile of evidence that made New York bookies bet 5 to 1 on Hines' conviction. One-time associate of Flegenheimer, George Weinberg told of attending a meeting where Hines was placed on the payroll at $500 to $1,000 a week as 'fixer.' Julius ("Red") Williams, Negro, repudiated grand jury testimony linking Hines and Weinberg, was promptly slapped back in jail. "Big Joe" Ison, another Harlemite, told how $125 was deducted from his weekly racket salary for "Jimmy Hines' club." But the expose Tom Dewey waited for did not begin until one Alexander Pompez took the stand.

Shortly before the trial opened, Dewey filed a bill of particulars accusing his predecessor, William E. Dodge, and Magistrate Hulon Capshaw of connection with the numbers racket. When Alexander Pompez told last week how Magistrate Capshaw's court had dismissed 12 of his workers who had been caught red-handed, it seemed Dewey's chance had come. But solemn Judge Ferdinand Pecora ruled there was improper foundation for bringing Capshaw's name into the case.

Still in high spirits, Dewey polished up his star witness who was expected to blow the case wide open. The witness: J. Richard ("Dixie") Davis, legal adviser and successor to Schultz, who was indicted with Hines but pleaded guilty and turned state's evidence. He was one of the few persons likely to know where Dutch Schultz got his tremendous political influence.

Aviation

Fliers have long known that safest, fastest air travel is in the stratosphere where "bumpy" weather disappears and storms never occur. Already perfected is mechanism to keep motors and passengers supplied with oxygen in such a rarified atmosphere, but it weighs so much that commercial travel at these heights is not practicable.

Last month, Mayo Foundation's Dr. Richard Lovelace flew non-stop from Minneapolis to Los Angeles in substratosphere, his crew equipped with light-weight masks that permitted free action. Last week, Globe Girdler Howard Hughes pulled even a better stunt.

One evening his round-the-world plane took off from Glendale airport with a crew of four, rose immediately to 25,000 feet. A few hours later he radioed Kansas City airport while passing overhead. Next morning, 10 hours and 34 minutes out of Glendale, his ship landed in New York. Average altitude for the trip: 20,000 feet.

Though not phenomenal, the overnight hop demonstrated what may be expected of substratosphere flights. All four fliers breathed through oxygen masks attached to a single cylinder.

Miscellany

At Pittsburgh, the corpse of Rev. Joseph A. Frey lay in a funeral parlor, surrounded by members of his congregation. For hours on end a weary photographer kept his camera focused on the dead man's face. Reason for this eerie affair was that Reverend Frey told his flock he would "come back," first with a spiritual manifestation, later with a physical one. The photographer's duty: to catch "spiritual emanations." Said he: "It is possible there will be half a dozen faces of the Reverend Frey's dead friends in the picture when it is developed."

● At Monticello, N. Y., Mayor Luis de Hoyos banned shorts as feminine attire except to "old women, mothers and ladies of mature age." His reasoning: "If I know anything about women, it won't ever come to that."

Will Your Child Be Ready For School?

Noted Food Authority Outlines a Correct Diet for the Growing Youngster

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York City.

WHEN school closed last June, most parents looked forward to the long weeks ahead when their children could play in the sunshine, get plenty of rest, and build up a splendid fund of vitality to last them all through the new school year.

Some mothers resolved to do everything possible to prevent a recurrence of last season's disheartening colds. Others planned to look into a blood-building diet that would give Mary or Johnnie more pep and rosier cheeks. Perhaps there were teeth that required attention, or a nose or throat condition to be corrected. Now, within a few weeks, the children will be returning to school, or in some cases beginning their school life. Every mother should ask herself whether she has made the most of the opportunities offered by the vacation period.

Have you put forth a conscientious effort toward making your children 100 per cent fit for school? If not, there is still time! You cannot finish the job in a few weeks, but you can make a good start. And you owe it to your children to begin at once. For whether they enjoy school or find it tedious, whether they make excellent records or lag behind their fellows, depends in large measure upon their physical fitness.

Every child is entitled to good health, safeguarded by high resistance. And in this age of amazing scientific discoveries, every child should enjoy these blessings.

Top health and resistance to disease are the result of an intelligently planned and carefully executed health program. It should include proper diet, adequate sleep and rest, an abundance of sunshine and fresh air, freedom from physical defects, and the avoidance of physical or mental strain, or fatigue.

Diet—the Key to Health

Perhaps the most important factor of all is the carefully balanced diet. When planned to take full advantage of modern nutritional discoveries, it will insure normal growth and health, and build up high resistance that is like a protecting wall to safeguard your children.

With our present knowledge of the power of food, there should not be one ill-nourished child in our land. Yet the spectre of malnutrition rears its ugly head among children of the well-to-do as well as in homes where money is scarce. For, as a rule, it is not lack of money, but lack of knowledge of food values, or faulty eating habits which are responsible for the tragedy of an incorrectly fed child.

Don't Overlook Protective Foods

A child's diet should be built upon a foundation of the protective foods—milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables. Milk takes precedence over all of these because it is an absolute necessity if children are to develop strong, straight bones and sound teeth.

The penalty for breaking this fundamental rule is retarded growth, fragile, crooked bones, decayed teeth and possibly nervousness. How dare any mother inflict such punishment upon her children? A fine amount of calcium, high grade protein, and some of every known vitamin can be furnished so easily by providing children with a quart of milk daily—either as a beverage, or in soups, cream sauces, puddings, cocoa or with cereals.

An Egg Every Day

Eggs rank next to milk in importance, because of their protein, iron and vitamins. A child's diet should normally include one egg daily, or at least three or four weekly.

Green, leafy vegetables must not be neglected, as they supply iron and precious vitamins. Yellow vegetables, such as carrots and sweet potatoes are notable as a source of vitamin A.

Fruits, especially the citrus varieties, are important for their vitamin C, which helps to safeguard the health of teeth and gums. However, tomatoes, or tomato juice may also be used as a source of this vitamin. Bananas are an excellent fruit for children. Dried fruits furnish iron and are high in energy values. Fruits and vegetables in general are likewise an important aid to regular elimination.

As a rule, school children may have lean meat, fish, chicken or liver once a day, and a second protein food, such as cheese or legumes, is usually introduced at another meal.

Energy Foods in Abundance

There must be plenty of energy foods, such as potatoes, rice, macaroni, bread and butter, and cereals, to help prevent the physical fatigue which lowers resistance. At least one starchy food belongs in every meal.

A well-cooked cereal should be provided once daily; in warm weather a ready-to-eat cereal may be used instead. In order to provide an abundance of minerals, and vitamin B, nutritionists place emphasis upon the whole grain varieties.

For desserts, choose rice, tapioca and bread puddings; gelatine, either plain or with fruit; fresh or stewed fruit; milk sherbets or ice cream.

In planning meals for children, it is important at all times to keep the menus simple, and prepare foods so that they are appetizing and easily digestible.

Aids to Good Nutrition

It is important also to bear in mind that the most perfect diet will not provide sound nutrition unless the food is properly digested and assimilated. Adequate sleep and rest, which do away with fatigue, are therefore essential. However perfect the diet, overexertion and undue fatigue, if continued, will soon bring about a state of lowered resistance.

In planning a program of daily living that will make and keep your children fit for school, put food first. But consider also rest, fresh air and sunshine, and regular habits. It would be well, too, to check up on the child's general health before he returns to school, so that he will not be handicapped by some physical defect, such as bad teeth, diseased tonsils, faulty vision or impaired hearing—all of which interfere with the ability to learn.

Never forget for a moment that a child's happiness and success are closely related to his health. All mothers should remember this, for it is no exaggeration to say that THE POWER OF A NATION DEPENDS UPON THE HEALTH OF ITS CHILDREN.

Questions Answered

Mrs. G. B. F. — Weight for weight, fresh spinach has four times as much vitamin A as good butter. When the amount of butter in the diet is curtailed, it is advisable to consume an abundance of green, leafy vegetables and milk. It is also possible to obtain margarine fortified with both vitamins A and D.

Miss A. G. M.—The bleaching agent used in wheat flour is not objectionable and this product makes a perfectly satisfactory food. It is desirable to include in the diet every day some products made from whole grain flours, as they are richer in minerals and vitamins. But that should not be interpreted to mean that white flour should be avoided.

Safetygrams

The Safety Man

Another week-end holiday is before us. Labor Day brings thousands and thousands of vacationists to our vacationlands and adds to the number of cars on the highways.

Recently a newspaper editor published a warning on the front page of his paper prior to one of these week-end holidays. It announced that any automobile driver who intended to violate all the rules of the road during these crowded days, who was going to pass cars on hills, go through stop lights, and drive recklessly, should leave a complete obituary with the editor so reporters would not have to bother relatives after the smash-up.

Very timely quite forceful, and effective.

We endorse this recommendation.

Mens Club Had Big Program

A very interesting moving picture of the activities of the Lutheran Church was presented at the meeting of the Men's Club at the Nazareth Lutheran Church Tuesday evening.

The picture "March of Faith" was explained by Rev. Hanson. Outstanding in interest was the life of the students and instructors in the church schools. In these scenes we had the pleasure of seeing Rev. Hanson in a class room at the Seminary ably answering a question of Dr. Bockman. We also saw Vernon Jensen of Mentor, former teacher in the Holt school.

Pictures of the Foreign Mission fields were very good and also the work of the Home Mission, life in the Sunset and Childrens homes, history of the church and the publishing house.

Doughnuts and coffee were served by the hosts, F. Stienhauer, W. Holst and G. Karvonen.

Two Local Men Injured

Herman Peterson had a narrow escape Snnday when a gasoline can ignited and he was severly burned in his face. He was rushed to a doctor at Thief River Falls and although he suffered much pain he will be entirely alright.

Mr. Peterson said their little girl, in her play, had put small stones and nails into the gas can and when he shook the can to get them out they evidently made enough sparks for ignition.

Thorval Kolden was injured one day last week while he was working on the sewer project at Newfolden. Consulting Dr. Lynde at Thief River Falls on Monday it was found by the use of X-Ray that he had two broken ribs.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson and daughter Joyce returned home last Friday from Fargo where they consulted a specialist for Joyce. It was found necessary to put her in a cast and will have to be treated that way for several months.

WANT to see what kind of role Clark Gable drew in his early days of making pictures? Then you'll have to go to "Painted Desert," recently made by RKO-Radio with George O'Brien, originally filmed by RKO-Pathe in 1930.

Lee Shumway plays the villain originally played by Gable.

By way of delving into the past again—all the still existing sets that were used for pictures made by Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks were demolished the other day. Some of them were nearly 20 years old. They'll make room for a setting for the next Goldwyn production, "The Last Frontier."

Pity Carole Lombard. When her pal, Alice Marble, our No. 1 woman tennis player, was winning the Eastern Grass Courts championship at Rye, N. Y., Carole had to depend on daily telegrams to inform her of her friend's progress, because the matches weren't broadcast. Luckily for her the last one was played on Sunday—the strain of trying to work while it was going on would have been terrific!

The latest fashion news is to the effect that soon the girls will be wearing adaptations of the styles of 1904—the reason being that Claudette Colbert will soon be seen in "Zaza," and that the clothes she wears in the picture are so fetching that everybody's going to want clothes like hers.

Felix Knight, the young tenor who's being heard more and more often on the air, is going to keep right on until autumn with his nation-wide program that is heard Fridays from 6:00 to 6:15, EDST, over NBC's red network. One of the things he gets excited about, between broadcasts, is the number of young people whose voices are being ruined because they're going to teachers who aren't really good. Says he knows any number of boys and girls in California, where he used to live, who would be successes if only they were properly taught.

But he can't tell them how to go about finding really good teachers—says that he just happened to be lucky; that he heard some people sing who sang the way he wanted to, and hunted up their teacher.

If you happen to be in New York and want to see some of your favorite radio stars when they're off duty, the place for you to go is the drugstore in the building where the NBC studios are located. Visiting movie folks and stage stars haunt the restaurants, but for some reason the radio stars turn like homing pigeons to that drug store.

Did you happen to be listening to the radio while the music from "Carefree," the new Rogers-Astaire picture, was broadcast with Irving Berlin, its author, in the studio? It's nice music, and apparently it's also a nice picture—but still the rumors grow and grow, to the effect that Astaire wants a new dancing partner, and Ginger wants a new leading man.

ODDS AND ENDS—Fred Ibbett, a veteran in the field of radio production, declares that his line of work offers the greatest opportunities to young newcomers of any phase of industry . . . Tyrone Power had a lot of fun on his trip East—one of his engagements being for luncheon with Madge Evans . . . Madge, incidentally, has fallen for the new fad of painting her finger nails white . . . Remember Julie Haydon, who left the stage for the movies, and couldn't get anywhere in the movies, and now is a terrific hit on the stage? . . . Well, the movie producers are after her again—can't see how it happened that she just never got any good parts when she was in Hollywood . . . "Four's a Crowd" is a pretty good picture; better put it on your list.

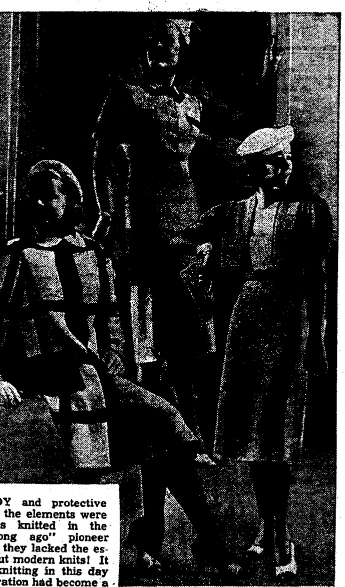
Hand-Knits Combine Style, Service for Campus Wear

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



STURDY and protective from the elements were things knitted in the "long, long ago" pioneer days, but they lacked the esthetic. But modern knits! It is as if knitting in this day and generation had become a magic art whereby designers have dramatized the theme to a point of high styling such as our faithful ever-knitting great-great ancestresses ne'er dreamed could be.

Back to college in a knit bolero frock such as the stunning model to the right in the group illustrated will cause one's sorority sisters to voice a chorus of oh's and ah's of admiration. It's worth the experiment, just see if it isn't! A bumpy crochet cotton lends itself beautifully to this knit design because of its resiliency and smart rough surface effect. Boleros come in so "handy" and you can wear this one separately with other frocks if you wish. You'll like the flattery of the figure-molding dress that, together with the bolero, forms as stylish a costume as ever might be.

With fringes all the rage this year you will be right on your toes come autumn if you wear a trim sports outfit as shown centered in the trio. It is knit of a nubby crochet cotton and what endless wear one does get out of these cotton crochets! Wash them and wash them and it never fazes their good looks. Then, too, being handknit, they have style and distinction. It is not only that the fringe that finishes the edges is definitely fashion correct but it gives opportunities for interesting color combinations. The jacket fits snug around the waistline to give a neat line, which is a highly important styling item—that of the fitted defined waistline.

Wouldn't any school girl, business woman, debutante, clubwoman—wouldn't any member of the fair sex that goes motoring, or treks about town love a handknit coat as here pictured! It surely is an inspiration to start knitting needles clicking. It is knit of a nubby crochet cotton in a striking plaid patterning with immense patch pockets of the darker color. They will tell you at any fancywork department where you get the yarn as to effective color combinations. You can make this colorful coat up very quickly if you get at it with a will. Grand to wear to the early autumn games!

Here are a few general items in regard to latest knitting trends. The tendency this season is to knit entire suits or ensembles, the exquisite simplicity of which achieves a smart tailored look. Interesting skirts are ribbed around to simulate pleats. Wear gold jewelry with your new black knit frock. Sweater jackets are "dolled up" with silver buttons of hand-wrought type. Knitted combined with woven fabric is very popular, as for instance a cloth jacket with knitted sleeves. Plaid skirt with bright sweater is popular schoolgirl formula.

© Western Newspaper Union.

Sweater and Skirt

Little fashion-correct "Missy" in this picture is dressed in her new sweater and skirt outfit ready to answer first-day-of-school roll call. It's the smart vogue this season for little girls to companion a suspender skirt of handsome wool with a sweater of exact color match. In this instance the skirt of fine Arlingcrest wool (comes in interesting colors of Scandinavian influence such as Viking copper and Peer Gynt blue, also navy, green and brown) has a novel suspender fashioning that widens as it buttons to the skirt belt.

Muffs Match Hats In Latest Trend

Muffs that match hats are among the latest fads to tempt women seeking the unusual in costume accents. Many different decorative fabrics such as matelasse crepe, embroidered wool and velvets are being used for these as are the numerous fur fabrics. The hats are of the turban type, always high and often draped. The muffs are variously shaped, depending upon the fabric. Fur materials, for example, are cut very simple, while the decorative materials are draped, twisted and bow-trimmed.

Don't Be Deceived By New 'Doll Hats'

It's a fact that doll hats are gay deceivers. They look so impossible off the head you think you can't possibly wear them. But you can! And to your amazement you will find them actually becoming. Step in to your favorite milliner's, try on a few, and you will find they are irresistible.

Just now the shops are displaying little black velvet types that pose over one eye with a head strap at the back which holds them firmly into place.

Veil Tied Over the Face

That is the way smart Paris women are wearing their veils—tied over the face. They are wearing veils to a far greater extent abroad than we in America are doing.

Huge Jeweled Pendants

The latest is to suspend a handsome antique-looking pendant from a thin necklace. Earrings are very much in evidence, too, and they also favor the pendant motif.

Jet Embroidery

See the hat and bolero "sets" of black velvet that are embroidered in jet. Newest thing out!

MILK IS FAVORED AS POULTRY FEED

Stimulates Birds' Appetites During Hot Weather.

By Dr. W. C. Thompson, Poultry Husbandman, Rutgers University.
WNU Service.

Because hot weather tends to lower feed consumption of poultry flocks, resulting in lower egg production, anything which stimulates the appetites of birds is of value in summer. For this purpose there is probably nothing better than milk.

Milk can be fed in the liquid form as either buttermilk or skim milk for drinking purposes when available in sufficient amounts. One hundred birds will consume between 35 and 40 pounds of liquid milk daily if they do not have water available, and a large quantity is needed when milk is used in this form. Ordinarily, it is not feasible to give birds milk only and, when a limited supply is available, it can be given the birds for a portion of the day, with water provided after the milk has been consumed.

The semi-solid or paste form of milk is very satisfactory for summer feeding, as it is palatable and the birds will consume it in rather large quantities, even under adverse weather conditions. When first used, it should not be fed to the extent of more than about 2 pounds for each 100 birds daily, but this can be increased gradually until 4 or 5 pounds can be fed without any detrimental results.

Milk in paste form is probably one of the best summer feeds for poultry. It is even somewhat superior to dried milk, unless the latter is used in a moist mash. Increasing the dry milk content of a dry mash does not usually produce any beneficial effects, because the birds do not increase their dry mash consumption during the summer, with the result that the increased milk content is of very little benefit. As a matter of fact, dry mash consumption is noticeably decreased during spells of hot weather.

The use of an increased quantity of milk in the proper form should be continued until late September, or until such time as more satisfactory weather conditions prevail.

Flies Not All to Blame For Drop in Milk Flow

Don't blame the flies for the drop in summer milk production, says H. R. Searles, extension dairyman, University Farm, St. Paul. Your feeding practices may need overhauling Summer is the low-cost period for the dairyman, and if cows go down in production when pastures begin to get short, he is losing an opportunity for profit.

The ripe mature grasses have about the feeding value of wild hay, and the dairyman can supplement these through a variety of ways. Second crop hay can be pastured, with some care to prevent loss from bloat when pasturing legumes.

Then, points out Searles, there is always regular barn feeding, which is practiced by the good dairyman every summer. Alfalfa or clover hay, if available, is cheaper than grain. Searles explains that the best dairymen of the state feed hay right through the summer, even when grass is plentiful. Feed what the cows will eat twice a day, he says. For the fresh, high-producing cows, a few pounds of grain will be needed, however.

Where hay is not available, about a half winter ration of grain will give excellent results. If there is a fair supply of grass, the ration can be any one of the farm grains available—corn, oats or barley. But where there is very little grass, the ration should be supplemented with its regular high protein feed, such as linseed oil meal, corn gluten meal, soybean meal, or cotton seed meal, up to 10 or 20 per cent of the grain mixture.

Agricultural Notes

Enjoy Making These Practical Designs

IF YOU like to look slimmer than you are, these designs are made especially for you! They are practical, pretty, easy to make,—the kind you'll use time and again, for they adapt themselves to every season of the year. Each is accompanied by a detailed sew chart, to guide beginners.

Trim, Fitted Apron.

Just five steps in your detailed sew chart,—and presto, your apron is finished! It fits so slimly and smoothly over the hips that it doesn't add a fraction of bulk. It protects your frock thoroughly, front, back, and up top. And it simply cannot slip off at the shoulders, when you have your hands in the dough! Percale, gingham, calico and batiste, plain colored or in pretty prints, are nice for this design. Trim it with braid or bias binding.

Slenderizing Afternoon Dress.

You'll find this one of the most becoming and comfortable dresses you ever had, and it's just as smart as it can be! It has the new kind of skirt, smooth-hipped and almost straight. Inside tucks on the shoulders give you the fullness you need over the bust. The v-neck, cut deep and rather narrow, is always flattering to large women. Make it up, for right now, with the short sleeves, in chiffon, georgette or soft silk crepe. Later, make it with the smart, long bishop sleeves, in thin wool or sheer velvet.

The Patterns.

1479 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 1⅞ yards of 35-inch material; 5 yards of braid or bias binding to trim.

1577 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4¾ yards of 39-inch material, for short sleeves; 5⅝ yards for long sleeves; 1⅝ yards edging for neck and bow.

Success in Sewing.

Success in sewing, like success in any other field, depends upon how you approach the task in hand. ## C. Houston Goudiss Enumerates the Nutritious Values of the BANANA

Explains How Our Most Satisfying Food Fruit Helps to Maintain Health at All Ages.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York City.

BEFORE the discovery of the vitamins and before we knew so much regarding the body's mineral requirements, interest in food was centered around proteins, carbohydrates and fats. Fruits which in general supply little protein and fat, and widely varying amounts of carbohydrates, received scant consideration as a source of essential nutrients.

But with our steadily increasing knowledge of vitamins and of the importance to the body of a long list of essential mineral elements, fruits have assumed a commanding place in nutrition. And those who follow the primary rule of a well balanced diet and serve fruit twice daily have been rewarded with increased health and vigor.

In addition to their minerals and vitamins, fruits are valued because of their bulk or cellulose which helps to insure regular health habits.

The Most Economical Fruit

Many homemakers consider that fruits as a class are among the more expensive items included in the food budget.

But that statement is far too general and indicates a lack of information concerning the comparative nutritive values of the different kinds of fruit. For example, it has been said of the delicious and economical banana, that it gives more nutritive as well as money value than almost any other food.

Fruits, in general, are frequently divided into two classes; they are known as flavor fruits when they contain 80 per cent or more of water and as food fruits when the water content is less than 80 per cent. Bananas are a food fruit of the first order!

Ripe bananas are rich in carbohydrates and furnish the body with splendid energy values, with a minimum tax on the digestive system.

Double Fuel Value

When fully ripened, this fruit provides quick energy because a certain amount of its sugars are almost immediately absorbed by the body. On the other hand, several hours must elapse before the remaining sugars are completely assimilated. Thus, eating bananas provides a continuous supply of energy for a considerable period. They not only help to promote rapid recovery from fatigue but also furnish a continuing supply of energy which keeps one from becoming hungry again too soon after a meal.

The edible portion of one average-sized banana weighs about 3½ ounces and provides 100 calories. It takes almost the same weight of white potato to yield the same number of calories.

Bananas a Protective Food

Bananas take an important position among the protective foods, because they are a good source of four vitamins, A, B, C and G, and contain a total of 11 minerals.

They leave an alkaline-ash following digestion.

Fully ripened bananas are easily digested and are mildly laxative.

Valuable in Child's Diet

Bananas deserve a prominent place in the child's diet from infancy to maturity. Some baby specialists prescribe mashed and strained ripe bananas as one of the first solid foods to be introduced in the infant's diet. The ripe banana is considered to be especially valuable at the time when sugar is withdrawn from the formula and the baby is given whole milk for the first time. The calories in the bananas take the place of the calories previously received from the sugar, and thus weight gains are steadily maintained.

Help Children Gain Weight

Because of their high caloric value, plus their content of minerals and vitamins, bananas may well be used regularly throughout childhood.

Bananas and milk make an excellent food combination because the milk supplements the fruit with protein, fat, minerals and vitamins. This combination is often used as a supplementary lunch for underweight children, and carefully conducted studies have indicated its usefulness in helping youngsters to gain weight.

Almost all children like the taste of bananas and they do not seem to tire of this bland and pleasing fruit. And though the banana is regarded as a solid food, it can, if desired, be mashed and whipped into liquid form and combined with milk to make a healthful and nourishing beverage.

Ideal for the Elderly

If elderly individuals are to maintain top health, fruits should be given a prominent place in their diet. But many fruits are avoided by individuals past middle age, either because their acid taste is displeasing or because they present difficulties in mastication. Ripe bananas, however, practically melt in the mouth. Being easily digested, they are a fortunate choice for elderly persons, providing necessary energy values with a minimum of digestive effort.

Most Versatile Fruit

Bananas are always in season and are usually most inexpensive. It is desirable, of course, that only fully ripened bananas be eaten raw. That is because their constituents vary with the degree of ripeness.

Bananas are picked when they are green and hard, and the carbohydrate content is almost entirely starch. As they ripen, the starch is converted into easily digested sugars.

In fully ripened bananas—those in which brown flecks appear on the yellow skins—the starch has almost entirely disappeared and the flavor has been developed to its highest point. The all-yellow banana is also ripe enough for eating and it is likewise firm enough for cooking. Partially ripe bananas—those which are yellow with a green tip—may be cooked and served as a vegetable or as dessert.

Considering their availability, ease of digestion, high food value and economy, bananas deserve to be classed as one of the staple foods in every well planned dietary.

Questions Answered

Mrs. G. R. McK.—When peas and beans cause discomfort, owing to their tendency to form gas, they can frequently be eaten without distress in pureed form.

Miss M. L. A.—Both sweet and white potatoes contain vitamins A, B and C; but sweet potatoes are a much better source of vitamin A than white potatoes.

HOW to SEW

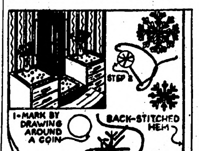
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

A LETTER comes telling the story of mats a clever girl designed for her dressing table. The problem was to make them to fit spaces of unusual size. Her room color scheme was blue and white and a design of white embroidered snow crystals on cool blue linen was what she wanted.



Here is the way she achieved a charming result.

The linen was cut the desired size and narrow hems creased with a warm iron. The hems were then backstitched in white from the right side with three strands of six-strand mercerized embroidery cotton. She wanted the arrangement of the snow crystals to be helter-skelter—just as they would fall; so she took a handful of coins and tossed them onto the linen. She drew around each coin where it fell.

Still using three strands of the white cotton she took four stitches across the marked circle and then brought the needle out in the center, as shown here in step 2, ready to take a tiny stitch to bind the long stitches together. The crystals were embroidered over the long stitches, the larger ones being more elaborate than the smaller as illustrated here. The stitch used is shown in step 3. Ninety other embroidery stitches are pictured in my Sewing Book No. 2. Also dozens of things you can make in your spare time to use or to sell. Order your copy today and be among the thousands of women who are finding this book useful. Enclose 25 cents and ask for Book 2. Address: Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Aardvark, First Animal Mentioned in Dictionary

Like something out of a dipsomaniac's dream is the aardvark. It is one of the strangest of extant animals—extraordinary in appearance, in structure and in habits. While not one of the animals most familiar to the average person, it enjoys, because of the spelling of its name, the unique distinction of being the first animal to be mentioned in the dictionary and its name is one of the first words of any kind to appear in lexicons. The name comes from the Dutch, means "earth pig," and refers to the creature's piglike snout and its habits.

However, in spite of its snout and its smooth, fat body, the aardvark is quite unrelated to pigs. In fact, according to Dr. Wilford H. Osgood, chief curator of the Field Museum of Natural History department of zoology, the animal has been something of a puzzle to zoologists and anatomists who have undertaken to find a logical place for it in schemes of classification of animals.

Aardvarks are common throughout much of southern and eastern Africa south of the equator. They live in relatively open, semiarid country wherever there is an abundance of the termites or so-called "white ants," upon which they feed almost exclusively. Individual aardvarks reach weights up to about 150 pounds and appear always fat and well conditioned. For such a large heavy animal to exist upon tiny termites is rather remarkable and testifies to the abundance of such food in Africa.

Osmium, Iridium, Thulium of Platinum Metal Group

Discovered in 1803, osmium is a rare, blue-white to gray metallic element, difficult to fuse, not affected by ordinary acids and insoluble in aqua regia. It is the heaviest of the elements. A member of the group of "platinum metals", it forms an alloy with iridium, labeled osmiridium, which is used in making fountain pen points.

Like osmium, iridium is a rare metallic element, conspicuously heavy, states a writer in the Kansas City Star. Silvery-white, iridium was discovered in 1804. It is important commercially for its alloys, which are used for making standard weights and parts of scientific apparatus which must withstand the action of the atmosphere and other factors; in electrical apparatus for contact points and other parts required to resist high temperatures and active substances, such as chlorine.

Among later elements found to be present in the sun, thulium is extremely rare, occurring in Nature with other metals of the rare earth's group. It forms a number of compounds, the characteristic color of which is light green. Discovered in 1879 thulium has no commercial use.

Red Honey Produced

Even reddish-brown honey can be produced, Paul Griswold Hayes writes in an article in Nature. Logwood blossoms on the island of Dominica in the West Indies produce a singular tasting variety, but the color comes from the sap of the tree, that contains a coloring principle much used in dyeing. Most famous of the dark honey of Europe is that from the Scottish heather, with a cheaper type being derived from the English heather. In Southern Europe the favorite honey is probably the Romarin, derived from the rosemary, and the Mt. Hymettus variety from the wild thyme of Greece. Although most ordinary honey crystallizes in six months after bottling, the white tueplo will remain liquid after 10 years. On the other hand, the blue-curl nectar granulates almost at once in the wax cells.

Monkey Business

"The Confusion in this City, occasioned by Counterfeit Copper English Halfpence amongst us, is almost inconceivable; for notwithstanding the la[illegible] Quantities of good Pence we h[illegible]ng had, there is now hardly any [illegible]um offered, but there are Counterfeit Ones intermixed; and to such a Degree of Suspicion, is the Common People raised, that many good Pence, which have passed current perhaps for above 20 Years past are now refused."—From the New York Post Boy of December 3, 1753.

The Great Dipper

The great dipper only appears to revolve, owing to the revolution of the earth. It makes an apparent revolution every 24 hours, the same as the sun. It is visible throughout the entire night because it is within what is called the circle of perpetual apparition, or that part of the heavens which is always in sight to the observer. This circle enlarges as one travels from the equator, where it is nothing, to the pole, where it takes in the whole Northern Hemisphere.

Walnut in Victorian Era

During the Victorian era walnut was used almost exclusively in the construction of practical furnishings —dining room and bed room pieces especially — though handsomely carved whatnots and other living room items, settees, small tables, occasional chairs and massive hall chests were also fashioned of the light-toned wood.

Oral statements will be heard but for accuracy of the record it is urged that six copies of all important statements be submitted in writing. Written statements may be submitted to the District Engineer at the hearing or mailed to him beforehand.

Justification of any proposed improvements must rest on a clear demonstration that such improvement would produce benefits in excess of the cost involved. Since consideration of any improvement will be based largely on the statements of interested parties, such statements should contain up-to-date facts relative to the economic factors involved, with special attention being given the following items:

a. Loss of life and property damage due to floods of various magnitudes on Red Lake River and its tributaries.
b. The character and extent of benefits which may be expected to result from a program of flood control work.

10 Day State Fair Next Year

The 1939 Minnesota State Fair will be expended to a ten-day exposition and will be advanced one week in date. It will open on Saturday, August 26 and will close Labor Day, September 4th. This action was taken by the board of managers following the close of the 1938 fair Saturday.

The inclement weather, which cut into the attendance at the state fair this year, was only one of four factors which prompted the board of managers to make the major change in the exposition's policy. The expansion is the culmination of three years' discussion on the advisability of holding a two-week fair. A large block of regular exhibitors and concessionaires have advocated this policy for some time because of the large expense involved in presenting exhibits of high standard.

Change in the dates and increase in the number of days of the exposition were premise on the following four factors:

Weather during the last week of August, records show, is warmer and more stable.

Educational opportunities for school children and teachers will be increased by holding the fair during vacation.

During the last week in August the Minnesota tourist season is still on, and more out-of-state visitors will be given an opportunity to attend.

Exhibitors and concessionaires will have an opportunity for a greater return from a substantial investment.

The State Fair was made an eight-day fair in 1919 and has continued on that basis since then. At that time the fair was expanded to eight days because of the growth of the institution—the same reason that prompted the action Sunday.

Growth in physical plant over the past five years has provided the facilities for holding an exsition that is world-wide in scope. A five-year construction program has virtually rebuilt the grounds and the addition of the 4-H club building scheduled for completion in 1939 will further augment the the physical properties.

The 1938 fair was the most successful in history, measured from every viewpoint excepting the weather. And even in face of five days of rain the attendance was only 12 percent below the record of a year ago. The attendance was 582,161.

"The officers of the state fair feel that the citizens have paid the fair a glowing tribute by the manner in which they attended despite the inclement weather" said Raymond A. Lee, secretary of the fair.

School Notes

The second week of school is about to close, The enrollment is about the same this year as last year. There is a slight increase in some grades while the highschool is somewhat smaller.

Parents are asked to cooperate with the teachers in their work by sending little visitors to school only the last Friday of each month. Little visitors are welcomed but it must be realized that they mean additional work to the teachers. The above mentioned day has been selected so as to give the teachers a chance to plan for their visit and there by make our little visitors day as beneficial as possible to them without interfering with the regular school work.

PWA Grant For Road Gravel

Marshall County's application for a Public Works Administration grant for graveling of county roads was approved by PWA officials in Washington last week according to a telegram received here. ## Fixing Up County Fair Grounds

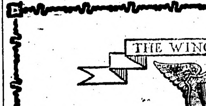
A new WPA project for the improvement of the Marshall county fairgrounds at Warren was begun September 13 under the supervision of Harold Anderson of Roseau, WPA area engineer. WPA allotted $7,918 to the project, which will employ approximately 20 men, and the Marshall County Fair Association put up $8,282 toward the improvement.

A new grandstand will be built and the grounds landscaped and graded.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Swan, who are employed with a carnival company, visited with Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Nyhus last week



It isn't the reptuation you gained for safe driving last year, or last week that counts, it's your driving today - right now - that makes safety records.

Safety precautions must be observed every minute; they must be eternal. They cannot be exercised at a few intersections or on certain hills; they must be kept up all the time you are behind the wheel.

The fact that you know the curves in the road or are familiar with its various hazards is a very poor excuse for violating all safety precautions.

Be safe all the time. The one time you neglect to be safe may be the time you will have a very serious accident.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Cuts High Floor Gloss.—To reduce the gloss of a too highly polished floor finish, rub the surface with oil and pumice powder. Pumice and water may also be used with success.

• • •

For Long Sheets.—When buying sheets, always allow at least 10 inches on each side and top and bottom, as the bed will never stay neat with sheets that are too short.

• • •

Teaching the Child.—The best way to help a child develop attractive manners and genuine courtesy is to set a good example.

• • •

A Tempting Dish. — Mashed sweet potatoes seasoned with powdered cinnamon or nutmeg are a favorite dish in some parts of the country.

• • •

Quick-Baking Pies.—Fruit and berry pies with lattice-style tops require less baking time than the regular two-crust pies.

• • •

Seal Linoleum Cracks.—To fill cracks in inlaid linoleum, melt some sealing wax of an exactly matching shade, run it carefully into the break and smooth it flat before it cools. Unless a crack is sealed promptly it will soon become scuffed by people walking over it, while any water allowed to seep into it will rot the undersurface.

• • •

Examine Soiled Cloth.—Before removing a soiled tablecloth and napkins look for fruit stains and put camphor on them. Then wash the same as any white goods.

Adm. William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, leaves the White House after conferring with President Roosevelt on next year's naval building program. The program will come before the next congress.

SHE WAS QUEEN OF GRAPE FETE

Though many California communities harvested grapes this autumn, and although many of them held grape festivals where they chose queens of the grape harvest, residents of Escondido, Calif., believe their queen is about "tops." She is Miss Margaret Wiley, who reigned supreme over the bounteous crop of grapes grown in that territory this summer. The celebration is an annual affair, bigger than usual this year because of the fruitful season.

This drawing by Walter Favreau of the Hayden planetarium shows the destruction of New York if an asteroid, such as Hermes, which came within 220,000 miles of the earth last year, were to fall in New York harbor. # HOW TO SEW

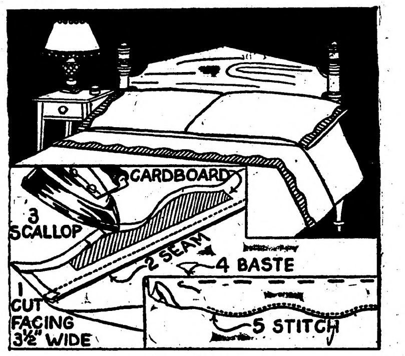
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



Distinctive bed linen in sets.

OPENING mail is always stimulating—especially so when one comes upon a letter like this: "Dear Mrs. Spears—If you could step into my house you would see in every room ideas I have gotten from your Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Your drawings are so easy to follow that I have made slipcovers and even reupholstered a wing chair. I never knew there were so many good ideas for curtains and bedspreads.

"All my friends admire those I have made. I am now planning to make some new sheets and pillow cases. I like to buy sheeting and pillow case tubing by the yard to fit different beds. Can you suggest some kind of trimming? I want something that will wash well and that I can make quickly on the machine. Sincerely, T. S."

I wonder if "T. S." has my Sewing Book 2, Embroidery, Gifts and Novelties? On Page 14 of that book is a suggestion that just about fills her requirements, and for those of you who are keeping scrap books of these sewing lessons as they appear in the paper, here is an idea for contrasting facings for sheets and pillow cases. The diagram shows each step in the making of the colored facings. Make your own cardboard pattern for the scallops by drawing part way around a small plate or saucer. Use this pattern to mark and cut the scallops. After the scallops are cut, turn the raw edge over the cardboard pattern with a warm iron as shown.

With the help of Mrs. Spears' Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator, you can make many of the things you have been wanting for the house. Book 2—Embroidery and Gifts is full of ideas for ways to use your spare time in making things for yourself or to sell. Books are 25 cents each. If you order both books, crazypatch quilt leaflet illustrating 36 authentic stitches is included free. Address: Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

C. Houston Goudiss Offers Timely Advice On Avoiding the Menace of Tooth Decay

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

ONE of the most serious indictments against our present-day civilization is its failure to preserve the teeth of men, women and children. Countless examinations in all parts of the country reveal that practically 100 per cent of the adult population is afflicted with some form of oral disease. And surveys of the physical condition of school pupils in different localities and under various circumstances disclose that tooth decay affects between 90 and 97 per cent of our school children.

Remarkable and widely heralded advances have been made in our knowledge of how to control and prevent many dangerous and debilitating diseases. Yet we appear to be complacent in the face of the fact that the majority of our population is handicapped by decayed teeth!

Nor does the mere statement of the case convey any idea of the seriousness of the situation. For it is unfortunate that diseased teeth and dental infections which may result from unchecked decay, seldom incapacitate the sufferer. Thus the victim does not become sufficiently alarmed to take the steps necessary to arrest the progress of the diseased condition.

Yet a single decayed tooth might be compared to a poison factory, distributing its noxious products to every part of the body, and tooth decay may be indirectly responsible for rheumatic ailments, neuritis, dyspepsia or duodenal ulcers. It may even be a contributing cause of heart trouble.

Possibilities of Prevention

Yet there is little or no excuse for the appalling amount of dental decay that afflicts the American people. For in recent years a vast amount of laboratory and clinical research has been undertaken in this field and there is impressive evidence that dental caries, or decay, may be completely controlled by dietary means. Then, too, our understanding of correct dental hygiene has advanced tremendously, and scientifically designed tooth brushes and skillfully compounded dentifrices are available in every town and hamlet throughout the country.

Diet and Dental Disease

Various investigators have advocated different dietary formulas for the control of dental decay. There is a lack of agreement among them as to which single element is the most important in constructing a diet to prevent caries.

But outstanding authorities hold that each of the five following dietary factors has a controlling influence: vitamins A, C and D; an adequate supply, in the correct proportions, of the minerals, calcium and phosphorus; an excess of alkaline or base-forming foods over acid-forming foods; and a generous allowance of raw foods, with emphasis on those that leave an alkaline-ash.

Vitamin A and Tooth Structure

Notable research has demonstrated that vitamin A is a definite factor in controlling tooth development. The development of the enamel is governed by a complex structure which begins to deteriorate as soon as vitamin A is withheld. When experimental animals are placed on a diet lacking in this vitamin, their teeth become brittle, chalky and white. This is due to the loss of the enamel, with its orange colored pigment, and the exposure of the dentine.

An English authority also claims that vitamin A is necessary to help prevent diseases of the gums.

Inasmuch as vitamin A likewise has many other important functions to perform in the body, every homemaker should see to it that her meals contain an abundance of milk and other dairy products, and the green, leafy and yellow vegetables which are a good source of this vitamin.

Vitamin C and Tooth Health

Vitamin C is closely associated with the health of both teeth and gums. There is strong evidence that this vitamin is essential to the dentine, enamel, cementum and the bone of the jaw. And there are on record remarkable experiments which demonstrate that dental decay and gum disorders are both prevented and arrested when extra amounts of foods containing vitamin C are included in a well-balanced diet.

Vitamin C is best obtained from the citrus fruits, tomatoes and raw leafy vegetables such as cabbage.

Vitamin D which we get from the sun, from fish-liver oils and concentrates, and from irradiated foods and those fortified with vitamin D concentrate, is necessary for the proper utilization of the calcium and phosphorus, which must be generously supplied if the teeth are to develop properly.

Importance of Dental Hygiene

Thus a carefully calculated diet, beginning before birth and continuing throughout life, is necessary to build teeth that are structurally sound. But even the most perfect teeth require constant care to maintain their soundness.

Thorough brushing is necessary after every meal to remove all particles of food which remain between the crevices and cling near the necks of the teeth. If not removed, this debris may ferment, giving rise to unpleasant odors and creating acids which may attack the tooth enamel.

It is important, however, that the brushing be done correctly, away from the gums and with a slight rolling stroke, so that the bristles can penetrate between the teeth. Never use a horizontal stroke nor brush toward the gums. This may irritate the tender tissues and may also force food particles under the gums at the necks of the teeth.

A Good Dentifrice Essential

The selection of a dentifrice is most important because an agreeable dentifrice encourages thorough brushing—an efficient dentifrice helps to float away minute bits of food not reached by the toothbrush.

It is also advisable to use a paste or powder which helps to restore luster to teeth which have been surface-stained by foods and beverages.

The use of an antiseptic mouthwash, at least once daily, especially before retiring, is commendable as it leaves the mouth fresh and clean.

It is also important to give the teeth regular systematic cleansing, and to see your dentist periodically for a careful checkup.

Questions Answered

Mrs. L. B. R.—Yes, lettuce and corn both contain copper, and so does beef liver. Copper is a mineral that is needed for the proper utilization of iron.

Mrs. F. L. S.—Children require about one and one-half times as much phosphorus as is necessary for a full grown man. That is why they must eat generously of whole grain cereals, eggs, dried legumes, leafy vegetables, milk and cheese.

Braid Trimming Is Smart

IT'S so easy to sew a few rows of braid onto a house dress or a little girl's panty-frock, and it's such a smart way to brighten up simple fashions and make them more becoming. So let's rejoice that the fashion of using braid trimming is back with a bang, this Fall. Here are two very attractive and unusual designs that you'll enjoy making at home, in pretty fabrics of your own selection. Each includes a detailed sew chart to guide beginners.

The House Dress.

Here's a style so becoming and attractive that you'll probably want to make it of thin wool or sports silk for general wear, as well as of percale, calico, gingham for the house. The very short kimono sleeves are just as easy to work in as no sleeves, and much more becoming. Straight panels front and back, gathers at the sides of the waistline only, give this design an unusually good figure line.

The Panty-Frock.

High waistline, puff sleeves, square necklines—they all look adorable on little girls. This flaring frock buttons down the front so that ambitious tots can easily dress themselves in it. This design will be pretty in so many different materials—gingham, challis, percale and dimity. A dress-up version in taffeta will be sweet, too; trim that with ribbon instead of the braid.

The Patterns.

1570 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4⅞ yards of 35-inch material without nap; 2¾ yards braid to trim.

1516 is designed for sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Size 4 requires 3 yards of 35-inch material; 4½ yards braid or ribbon to trim; 1⅜ yards ribbon for belt.

Fall and Winter Fashion Book.

The new 32-page Fall and Winter Pattern Book which shows photographs of the dresses being worn is now out. (One pattern and the Fall and Winter Pattern Book—25 cents.) You can order the book separately for 15 cents.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

The SALLY SMILE

—By—
D. J. Walsh

Copyright WNU Service

MRS. PINNEY had called to see Miss Bowman, and the two women were in close conversation in Miss Bowman's private office. Miss Bowman was chief executive of the governing board of the hospital, and Mrs. Pinney was a director.

"Well, it simply has come to this," Miss Bowman said, wiping her eyeglasses nervously, "we'll have to close the hospital, if we can't get something to run it on. The citizens have done nobly—nobly, but they can't do everything. It remains for some moneyed person to come to the front now."

"Like Mrs. Chichester?" suggested Mrs. Pinney. Mrs. Pinney was a small, eager woman, who looked rather worn from the long-continued struggle of keeping the precious little hospital going on next to nothing a year.

"Yes! Mrs. Chichester. She is our richest citizen. She could give $50,000 and never feel it."

"But would she?"

"There's the question. I'm afraid she wouldn't. I've approached her unsuccessfully—"

"So have I," moaned Mrs. Pinney. "Well, you can't force a person to give up her money, that's certain. I suppose it's hopeless."

"I don't know about that. I've been thinking I'd send Sally Drew to her and see what good that would do."

"Sally Drew!" Mrs. Pinney jumped. "She's the very one. I'll see her this afternoon."

Sally Drew was a tiny woman with hair like snowy wool and a pale pointed little face. Her eyes were wonderful, so bright, so black, so alive. They danced in her face. But her smile was more wonderful than her eyes.

The smile came now at sight of Mrs. Pinney.

"Julia!" she cried. "Come right in."

In Sally's small living room, so old-fashioned, so cozy, and withal so well suited to Sally herself, Julia Pinney told her story.

"Well, what do you want me to do?" Sally asked.

"I want you to go to Helen Chichester and get her to give us $5,000. That will keep the hospital running for one year. After that—but we'll hope."

Sally's smile vanished. She was silent an instant.

"I'll go, of course," she said quietly.

Mrs. Pinney arose.

"Sally, you're a dear. If any one can do it you can. You are our last resort."

At 9, just as Mrs. Pinney was ready to fly to pieces with suspense, Sally walked in. The Sally smile was bright indeed.

"I couldn't get away sooner. Helen wouldn't let me come. You see, we haven't spoken before in thirty years—"

"What?" gasped Mrs. Pinney.

"Thirty years," nodded Sally. "I did hate to go. But after I got there it was all right. Here's your money." She drew a check from her handbag and gave it to Julia.

"Fifty thousand dollars!" Mrs. Pinney could just articulate. "But we hoped your smile would do it."

"It did." Sally grew grave. "Thirty years ago Helen got the man I wanted. But no one ever knew it except her and me, for the day she was married I pinned on my smile and I've worn it ever since." She paused reflectively. "She says she was puzzled for thirty years over my smile. We made a fair exchange. I told her how I got it and she gave me $50,000 for my secret."

Herbert Chichester had only lived five years, but he had lived long enough to spoil the lives of two women. His wife had grown selfish and sore, but the woman she had won him from had "pinned on a smile" that had brightened a whole community.

A Costly Road

The Pulaski skyway is probably the most expensive road in the world for its length. The part of it that is raised is three miles long and cost $21,000,000. The approaches cost an additional $19,000,000. This roadway is 50 feet in width and can easily accommodate five lanes of traffic. It is estimated that 20,000,000 motor vehicles use it annually. It passes over both the Hackensack and the Passaic rivers and the New Jersey Meadows.

Farmers have been busy this week harvesting late sweet clover and flax. The wet weather last week retarded late harvesting operations in this area. Several farmers in the northeast part of the county still have a large acreage of sweet clover to cut.

Benson Gave Keynote Address

Several thousand people from all over the state gathered at Appleton on Tuesday evening to hear Governor Benson give his keynote speech. An autocade of about forty cars of Benson supporters from several of the counties in the Ninth District went to Appleton to hear the Governor. Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson represented Marshall county at the rally.

Striking out at the "fake liberalism" of the Republican party, Governor Benson in his keynote address at Appleton on Tuesday evening this week, declared the real issue of the campaign is whether Minnesota is to continue as a "progressive, New Deal state," or will revert to the "big business principles of the Hoovers, the Landons and the Glenn Franks."

"The Farmer-Labor party is fighting locally the same enemies that the New Deal is fighting nationally," the governor said. "We are fighting the same privately-owned economic empire which stands between the people and their government and which constitutes an overwhelming threat to the future advancement of democracy."

The Republicans, "unable to defend their record," have tried under the direction of "Roy Dunn, Republican national committeeman, and the rest of the Old Guard, to draft the 'liberal' Republican platform," in an effort to catch voters, the governor said.

Discussing the tax situation, Governor Benson said, "if returned to office, I propose to abolish at the next legislative session the entire state levy on real and personal property. It can be done by an increase in iron ore taxes an increased levies upon other forms of wealth which cannot be passed on to the people."

Lost Seven Good Cows

What is termed as one of the hardest streaks of luck to befall anyone here came to the J. O. Johnson family over the week end. They were moving a house onto their farm which they had secured from Anton Sagstuen for their son Morris and his bride to live in and it appears that at some time some sheep dip in powder form had been stored in this house and that they swept it out after moving, and the poison got out onto the yard at the Johnson farm.

The hard luck part came when their cows broke out through the fence the same night and ate some of it Seven of their best cows are dead as a result of this.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Wahlin and family of Maple Bay spent the week end at the George Fricker home.

Life Of C. F. Neilson

Carl Fredrick Nelson was born in Mohn, Denmark on Nov. 24, 1859. He emigrated from Denmark to Nebraska in 1893. Here he was married on March 3, 1890 to Emma L. Meier, who survives him. In 1896, he moved to Jackson county, Minnesota. From there he moved to Marshall county in 1902.

He is survived by his widow and the following children: Amelia, Mrs. Vlasak, Fremont, Nebr. Albert, at home with his mother. Fred, Kansas City, Mo. Marie, Mrs. Alvin Severson, Superior, Wis. and nine grandchildren.

A daughter Anna has preceded him in death.

He died at Warren on Sept. 10 at the age of 78 years, 9 months and 17 days.

Funeral services were held last Thursday from the Nazareth Lutheran church with Rev. Hanson officiating. Mrs. O. H. Nohre sang a solo. The pall bearers were Tom Risdahl of Strathcona, C. O. Larson, O. B. Johnson, Otto Johnson, Hilmer Moberg and Ole Maakstad.

Gunheim and Larson Funeral Service had charge of all arrangements.

Freedom of Religion

NEW YORK—This chaste figure of a young girl lifting her face to the skies will be dedicated to freedom of religion in the "Four Freedom" statuary group on the Central Mall of the New York World's Fair 1939.

'Harvest Festival Here Sunday

The Annual Nazareth Lutheran Church Harvest Festival will be held at the Church here on Sunday, Sept. 25. The services will begin at 10:30 conducted by Rev. Hanson who will preach a Mission sermon on the theme: White Unto Harvest. Then will be followed dinner served by the Ladies Aid. In the afternoon, Rev. Casper B. Nervig of Roseau will be the festival speaker. He was not available in the morning, hence the local pastor will conduct the worship. Rev. Nervig returned a year ago from Europe where he had traveled and studied for a year. Much of this time was spent in Germany and has therefore a very accurate and scholarly insight into the conditions of the cradle of Lutheranism which is very interesting due to the fact that the eyes of the world are focused upon Germany today. This should be a very interesting and worthwhile theme for such an occasion.

In the evening, Rev. Nervig will climax the day by showing the motion pictures of the trip, things of historic significance to Lutherans. They will be under the auspices of the Luther League which will be the entire program as the pictures take about one and one half hours to show. There will be no charge or collection and it is hoped that all will make use of this opportunity to hear and see the countries which are the homelands of our forefathers as the pictures include scenes from Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Germany and other countries. We invite all to partake in the festival of thanksgiving for the harvest and also call our attention to the spiritual harvest ahead of us in the work of missions.

Following is a menu for the festival dinner:

Menu
Fried Chicken Gravy
Mashed Potatoes
Scalloped Corn
Cranberries Carrot Pickles
Bread and Butter
Pumpkin or Apple Pie
Coffee

Watch Out For Children

"Watch out for children!"

With schools open again and youngsters, many of them venturing away from home alone for the first time, streaming across streets and highways four times each day, M. J. Murray, chief of the Highway patrol, last week issued this plea to all drivers.

Chief Murray pointed out that especially the youngest boys and girls are not accostomed to crossing traffic lanes and are not yet fully impressed with the dangers that lurk in traffic. It is the job of the drivers, therefore, he said to protect these little tykes.

He asked that utmost caution be used when driving near playgrounds and school yards. A sudden dart after a loose ball or a chase that leads into the street, he reminded motorists, is common to children and there isn't much that can be done to curb this natural thoughtless impulsiveness. "Expect the unexpected when children are in the vicinity of highways or streets," he advised.

The chief also asked parents to stress traffic hazards to their children each morning before sending them off to school.

Machinery Replaces Labor

The extent to which machinery is replacing men in industry is demonstrated in a recent report which shows that the iron ore industry in 1936 employed less men on Minnesota's iron range than at any time in this century at the same time shipping three times as much ore as in 1900.

While their iron ore industry in 1900 hired 6,000 men to take 10 million tons of ore from the iron mines of this state, in 1936 it employed only 5,000 men to dig out 31 million tons of ore. In seven years - from 1929 to 1936 7,000 men were dropped from the payroll, cutting production 32 per cent and payrolls 59 per cent. None of the tremendous profits of 1928 were used to sustain employment on the range.

Ideal Hot Dish Mats Made of Cable Cord

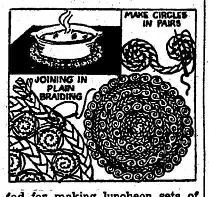
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THIS mat is made of white cotton cable cord such as you buy at the notion counter for corded seams and trimmings. The original mat from which this design was taken was made of—no one of this generation would ever guess—what! Corset strings. These were once a common commodity along with collar boning, hat pins and side combs. There was quite a fad for making luncheon sets of them braided or arranged in various designs and sewn with fine stitches on the wrong side.



The design shown here is compact and, copied in rather heavy cord, makes an ideal hot dish mat. Follow the sketches for directions. Make the circles in pairs, as shown, using No. 40 cotton thread to sew them. Braid three cords together and then sew the braided strip around and around to make the center of the mat. Sew a row of the circles to the edge of this center part, then add another braided row, being careful to "ease in" the inside edge just enough to keep the mat flat. Continue adding alternate rows of circles and braiding until the mat is the size desired.

To join the ends of the braided rows, pull one end through the braiding to the wrong side of the mat; then trim the ends and sew them flat. It is not too early to begin thinking of Christmas gifts—and you will be wanting to make something a bit unusual for that next bazaar when it comes rolling around. Sewing Book 2, Embroidery, Gifts and Novelties, is full of new ideas all clearly illustrated with step-by-step pictures. Send for it today and give life a new interest by starting some fascinating piece of hand work. Enclose 25 cents and address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Mistrial Ruling in Hines Case May Be Setback for Dewey

By Joseph W. La Bine

New York

Long before a racket conspiracy charge was placed against Tammanyman James J. Hines, New York's District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey was mentioned as a potential G. O. P. gubernatorial nominee, even as a 1940 presidential possibility. By the time the state finished presenting evidence in Jimmy Hines' trial, Tom Dewey's political importance was pretty well settled. So certain was this importance that observers tried to find political significance in repeated clashes between the district attorney and Justice Ferdinand Pecora.

Of one thing they could be sure: Justice Pecora's political background was the antithesis of Tom Dewey's. One-time assistant district attorney under Tammany regimes, later a New Deal district attorney candidate, still later a member of the securities exchange commission, Ferdinand Pecora had a thoroughly un-Republican background before he was named to New York's Supreme court in 1935.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY DEWEY
He tripped over the poultry.

Political or otherwise, Justice Pecora has found cause to sit emphatically and repeatedly on the vigorous young district attorney. Once, when Mr. Dewey pouted that he was being treated like an "interloper in the courtroom," the justice shot back that he resented the remark. By the time he was through presenting evidence, the 36-year-old racket smasher could rest assured he had built a good case, though his courtroom conduct had sometimes been irregular.

As the defense began its case, two abrupt developments threatened Tom Dewey's attempt to convict Jimmy Hines of conspiracy in Arthur ("Dutch Schultz") Flegenheimer's policy racket. First, Defense Attorney Lloyd Paul Stryker asked that the case be thrown out on grounds of insufficient evidence, but Justice Pecora denied the motion after a day's consideration.

Few minutes later, the district attorney began cross-examining Attorney Lyon Boston, who made an admittedly half-hearted, youthful investigation of Jimmy Hines while an assistant under William C. Dodge, Dewey's predecessor. Under discussion was William Fellowes Morgan, commissioner of markets, who testified regarding the poultry racket before New York's famed "runaway" grand jury in 1935.

Asked Dewey: "Don't you remember any testimony about Hines and the poultry racket there (before the grand jury) by him?"

"One moment!" boomed Defense Attorney Stryker. "I move for a mistrial."

The defense contended Tom Dewey had made unfair reference to grand jury testimony about a possible criminal matter with which Jimmy Hines was not charged. Though the prosecution claimed Attorney Stryker had opened the subject, Justice Pecora thought otherwise. Two days he pondered the mistrial motion. Then, to a tense courtroom, he read a two-hour opinion upholding the defense. Result: One juror was ordered withdrawn and the state's laboriously built case was thrown out.

Next day, Manhattan wondered whether Tom Dewey's defeat would cost him a chance to be New York's governor. A more pertinent question was whether he wanted the job. Biggest worry of Empire state Republicans who would run him for governor is that no one knows how he stands on labor, utilities, social security, relief, civil liberties or budget-balancing. But all-important to voters is the district attorney's record of law enforcement. So greatly is he feared that Franklin Roosevelt is willing to support Gov. Herbert Lehman for re-election despite the governor's opposition to New Deal reform measures.

Foreign

The fact that he became a grandfather for the second time was only one reason why British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain felt old. To offset a London Times editorial urging German annexation of Czechoslovakia's Sudeten population, the prime minister had to speak louder than usual. Lest Adolf Hitler think Britain was capitulating, lest France think Britain had deserted her in the hour of need, he told Ambassador Nevile Henderson to give Der Fuehrer another warning for good measure. The warning: That Britain means business in demanding Czechoslovakia's preservation.

Thus, armed with latest Czech concession offers, watched by pro-Czech allies that included Britain, France, Russia and Rumania, Adolf Hitler strode on the stage at Nuremberg's Nazi congress to speak his mind on the subject as he had never spoken it before.

His points: (1) That, if they cannot defend themselves, Sudetens will "receive help from us"; (2) that Czech President Edouard Benes spread false rumors of German troop movements during recent Czech municipal elections, thereby practicing intimidation; (3) that, though Germany wants peace with European democracies, nothing can prevent her from assuring self determination for Sudetens.

Actually, Der Fuehrer's only new assertion pertained to Sudeten "self determination." Did this mean he favored a plebiscite? That night, as Europe pondered his words, the consensus said yes. Did his speech carry a dangerous threat of war? Most observers thought not, though jittery France had rushed so many troops to her German border that it might be almost embarrassing to withdraw them.

Politics

In Maryland, Democrats could choose one of three nominees for the U. S. senate.

Senator Millard E. Tydings, whom Franklin Roosevelt wanted removed because his New Deal batting average is only .292. By record a political opportunist, Senator Tydings was once a ragged boy on the docks of Havre de Grace, rising to Maryland's house of delegates at the age of 23. His helper was Murray Vandiver, state Democratic chairman who helped him through school, guided him into politics, was later unseated from Maryland's treasuryship with Protege Tydings' aid. A distinguished war veteran, he rose to congress with the help of Vandiver's enemies, was boosted into the senate as compromise candidate by Gov. Albert C. Richie and Frank Furse. His favorable New Deal votes: Miller-Tydings price control act on trademarked goods, SEC, neutrality and "pump priming." His handsome wife of two years is the daughter of Belgium Ambassador Joseph Davies.

Rep. David J. Lewis, whose election Franklin Roosevelt urged in a Labor day speech at Denton, Md., since he has been a faithful New Dealer. David Lewis dug coal in Pennsylvania when nine years old, studied law at night, finally began practicing at Cumberland. In congress since 1911, he has fostered parcel post, social security and workmen's compensation. During the World war he handled telephones and telegraph. He fought the bonus, as did Veteran Tydings.

Arthur E. Hungerford, New Dealer whom the New Deal ignored, who closed his campaign by charging "there should be a grand jury and a federal investigation of the methods used."

On election's eve, PWA Administrator Harold Ickes spoke encouragingly of two proposed bridges over Maryland's Potomac and Susquehanna rivers. Anti-New Dealers charged Franklin Roosevelt was buying votes. Same day, the senate's campaign expenditures investigating committee found M. Hampton Magruder, Baltimore's internal revenue collector, had attempted to coerce non-civil service workers into voting for David Lewis. Thus closed the most heated campaign in Maryland's history.

By the time Maryland's first votes were counted next evening, Millard Tydings' nomination was certain, though more than one unprejudiced observer mourned the defeat of a great liberal, David Lewis. For governor, Democrats nominated Attorney Gen. Herbert R. O'Connor. Meanwhile, Republicans chose Oscar Lesser and Gov. Harry W. Nice for senator, governor, respectively.

● Nothing is more embarrassing to a politician than unwanted support. Hanging to the coat-tails of Maine's three Republican congressmen, Clyde Smith, James Oliver and Ralph Brewster, have been the Pine Tree state's Townsend pensioneers, providing a juicy topic of speechmaking for their Democratic opponents. Principals in the race that until 1936 was said to forecast America's political future ("As Maine goes, so goes the nation") have been Republican Gov. Lewis O. Barrows, seeking re-election, and ex-Gov. Louis M. Brann, seeking a third term. Maine's political visitors included Republican Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, Democratic Chairman James A. Farley. Adding a touch of color, Candidate Brann brought Crooner Rudy Vallee back to his home state, had him sing Maine's "Stein Song." If the nation goes as Maine goes, next November's elections will go Republican, for despite Rudy Vallee, despite Townsendism, the G. O. P. elected a governor and three congressmen.

White House

Fortnight ago, U. S. citizens were jerked into consciousness of war's proximity. At Bordeaux, Ambassador William S. Bullitt reportedly asserted: "The United States and France are indefectively united in war as in peace." In England, Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy spoke his mind about dictators. Meanwhile, back home, Franklin Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull were periodically mentioning America's inescapable interest in any 1938 foreign conflict.

What John Public deduced was that his government had joined European democracy's drive to "stop Hitler." (See FOREIGN.) But after the U. S. press had harped on this idea for a week, the President administered a verbal thrashing. At a Hyde Park press conference, he charged these interpretations of Roosevelt-Hull Bullitt statements were 100 per cent wrong; that there was political attempt to misinterpret the record; that Ambassador Bullitt never said the U. S. and France were "indefectively united."

Back at its Bordeaux correspondent for confirmation went Associated Press. Next day came an admission that Associated Press was wrong, that Franklin Roosevelt was right. Said the correspondent: There was a misinterpretation of the ambassador's words.

What was America's foreign policy? For an answer, the President referred reporters to the Roosevelt-Hull speeches on the subject. A few hours later came a typical Hull pronouncement on the subject, issued by way of accepting an invitation to the eighth international conference of American states.

Said Foreign Policy Maker Hull: "The nations of the world are faced with the issue of determining whether relations shall be characterized by international anarchy or by the principles of fair play, justice and order under the law. No nation and no government can avoid the issue. Neither can any nation avoid participation . . . in determining which course . . . will prevail."

● Non-stop from Hyde Park, the President sped to his son, James, bedded of a gastric ulcer at Rochester's Mayo clinic. Already there were Eleanor Roosevelt and James' wife, Betsy. Accompanying the President was son Elliott. Shortly after Mr. Roosevelt arrived, James went into the operating room, came out two hours later minus his ulcer. By evening he was resting well.

● To Brooks Hays, Arkansas Democratic national committeeman, the President wrote endorsing a proposed constitutional amendment abolishing poll tax. To his press conference, the President charged such taxes (effective in Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia) kept may people from voting. In the same category he placed Women's Rebellion, Inc., a New Jersey group trying to prevent WPA workers from voting.

Miscellany

Each September, Atlantic City woos beauty and publicity by inviting bathing-suited contestants from each state, by naming one of them "Miss America." To "Miss America" goes a silver cup and stage-screen tryouts. Last year's winner, New Jersey's Bette Cooper, scorned her honors and went back to school.

This year, Atlantic City hoped for better luck. Up and down before judges paraded 43 girls from almost as many states. Finally they gave the title to Marilyn Meseke of Marion, Ohio, gave second place to Claire James of Los Angeles, third place to Muriel La Von Goodspeed of Salt Lake City.

CALIFORNIA'S CLAIRE JAMES

Next day, Atlantic City felt repercussions. Stormed doll-like Claire James: "I am insulted . . . I can't stand any more . . . I am disgusted." Raged her mother: "Some of the judges called me this morning and said it was an outrage that Claire didn't get first place."

In New York, Producer Earl Carroll opined that Atlantic City's judges were incompetent, that Claire James was the "true Miss America."

● Sirkka Saloner, who has never used lipstick, rouge, face powder or cold cream, was named "Miss Europe" at Copenhagen.

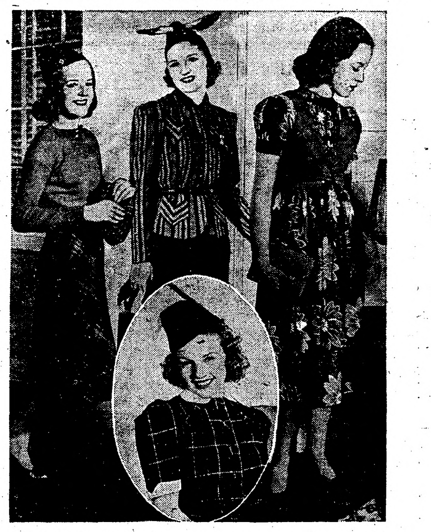
Plaids, Stripes and Prints Radiant With Fall Colors

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



AN EPIDEMIC of plaids is gripping the entire fashion world. It matters not whether you are a grown-up or a juvenile, or a junior or a between-age, you will never be able to remain immune to the wiles and winning ways of the gorgeous plaids that have come out in such brilliant array at the dawn of this new fall season. For that matter who wants to if they could resist the witchery of anything so intriguing as are the new plaids. So if you would be fashion-wise enter into the spirit of the current mode and "go in" for plaids with a will.

It certainly is an exciting story that the new plaids are telling. The plot carries on and on in endless variety via costume suits that are smartly tailored of glorified plaids and as to the separate skirts that are fashioned of plaid you couldn't keep count of their vast number if you tried. Then there are the cunning flattering shirtmaker dresses, the skirts of which radiate tucks or pleats from a slim waistline. Almost invariably the sleeves of these youthful frocks are short in defiance of most fashion reports that forecast "long sleeves for fall and winter."

The separate plaid jacket that is tailored to a nicety is also an important item and as for the plaid blouse, it's the rage whether in fine wool weave, or a synthetic material such as rayon or it may be of taffeta. Nor does the present plaid craze stop at the costume proper, but it carries on full force into the accessory area. With your sweater and plaid skirt if you play the game of fashion as it should be played on campus and in spectator sportswomanship at the gridiron series, you'll see to it that your costume is completed with a jaunty cap and bag of matching plaid.

In the illustration we are showing a plaid, a stripe and a gay print school-girl model. These fetching fashions had their initial showing at a prevue showing of fall styles recently presented at the Merchandise Mart in Chicago.

Off to school is the young miss to the left in a clever Scotch costume. The skirt is a red and black plaid, with a matching Scotch cap and purse. The sweater is also red.

"The Barber of Seville" is the appropriate name given to the gaily striped wool afternoon dress centered in the picture. The skirt is pleated and the new longer-than-formerly-shown jacket is striped in jungle green and dregs of wine (much exploited color this season). A green ascot tie completes the dress.

Bi-Color Suede

Suede gains in style importance. Now that this supple beautifully colorful medium is being worked just like fabric, the fashion-minded are calling for it increasingly each season. Here, as pictured, an oriole orange suede jacket is worn by Gloria Stuart of cinema renown, over a simple one-piece dress of paradise blue suede. Short sleeves and a sailor collar give the frock a youthful look. The blue suede cap is ideal for informal knockabout wear.

Autumn Costumes Favor Boxy Coats

Although the edict of finger-tip length jackets is general for first autumn suits, several French designers are defying this rule by introducing short, boxy ones to wear with contrasting dresses.

One of these brief coats is little more than waistline length and flares in all directions. Its roomy shoulder line and wide sleeves contribute to the carefree impression. Some striking color combinations are achieved with these jackets of light weight wool worn over wool dresses. Since mauve and violet tones continue to be popular they are being used extensively, often in alliance with blue or dark red.

The suit which has a jacket resembling an overblouse or a brief tunic is the one which designers regard with favor and which looks so much like a dress that it may be worn during cold weather under a fur coat.

Place for Watch

The new place for the watch, instead of hanging as a pendant on the tailleur lapel, is with the vanity and cigarette case, according to Lancel, stylist. The case comes in different shades of enamel and gold and silver, modeled in an oblong.

New Bonnets Appear

Little lingerie baby bonnets, often with a sophisticated nose veil, are the latest millinery conceit. They are not worn as dinner or evening hats, but to complete day costumes.

Monogram Shoes

Monogram shoes are the latest attention to the "personality" fads that increase in popularity with the seasons.

America in Print

A composite picture of modern America is featured on a print made into a simple evening dress.

Queen of Color

War Clouds Over Sudeten Harvest Festival

Uniformed Sudeten Germans marched in the parade which featured the harvest festival celebrations at Oberleutensdorf, Czechoslovakia, a short time before Adolf Hitler's momentous Nuremberg address. Konrad Henlein, Sudeten leader, was scheduled to address the thousands who attended, but was forced to cancel his appearance after being summoned by Lord Runciman to a parley in an attempt to settle the crisis. Declared Herr Frank, substituting for Henlein: "We have carried on a struggle for 20 years and the final battle is in sight."

PITT STAR READY

Marshall Goldberg, the University of Pittsburgh's all-American halfback of 1937, who starts the 1938 football season as the Panthers' fullback. For two years running he has outgained the Panthers' combined opposition from scrimmage.

They March With Spirit of Youth

Despite their advanced age these two Civil war veterans, with aid from younger arms, proudly marched in the G. A. R. parade, covering a distance of 15 blocks. Thirteen of the 15 veteran "youngsters" who participated in the parade successfully marched the entire route. Photograph shows two of the hardy ones: O. S. Pearce, 91, left, of Minneapolis, and W. C. Fisher, 89, of St. Paul.

Miss America Of 1938 Crowned At Atlantic City

The title of Miss America 1938 was awarded to blonde Marilyn Meseke of Marion, Ohio, at the national beauty pageant in Atlantic City. Miss Meseke, previously adjudged the "most perfect model," won the top title over a field of more than 80 American beauties. Claire James, "Miss California," walked out on the ceremonies because judges placed her second. Third place went to Muriel La Von Goodspeed of Salt Lake City, Utah.

President's Son Wins Siege With Illness

James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, who is recovering from an operation for the removal of a stomach ulcer. The operation was performed at Rochester, Minn., and was considered so serious that the President and Mrs. Roosevelt were both at their son's bedside.

Lumber Enough for 250 Houses

Not a sea monster, but one of the famed "benson rafts" is this enormous cigar-shaped bundle of logs. From the Columbia river in Oregon, these cargo-carrier rafts now travel 1,100 miles in the open Pacific to San Diego, Calif. Each raft is 835 feet long, 55 feet wide and 28 feet deep, carrying 6,000,000 board feet of lumber, or enough to build 250 houses.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Describes Diet After Middle Age; Shows How Right Food Can Prolong the Vigorous Years

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

ONE of the best prescriptions ever offered for longevity was advanced by the wise man who said: In the twenties, prepare for the thirties; in the thirties, prepare for the forties; and after that—prepare for a long and vigorous old age!

That advice is well worth following, for it has been estimated that by taking into account all the newer knowledge of nutrition, it is possible not only to improve health, but to add a number of years to the normal life span.

A Man Is as Young as He Feels

It has been well said that "the age of man has small relation to his years," for it has been demonstrated, both clinically and in the scientist's laboratory, that old age is a physiological condition rather than an accumulation of years.

In grandmother's day, a woman of 50 was considered old. Today that age is regarded as young, and much of the important work of the world is being done by men and women who can see 50 only by looking over their shoulder.

Importance of Correct Diet

On the other hand, thousands of Americans are unknowingly impairing their efficiency and shortening their lives through the misuse of food. They are eating the wrong kind of food—and what is equally disastrous—they are overeating! They do not seem to realize that eating too much does not strengthen the body, but exhausts it with the labors of digestion. The surplus nourishment clogs the system and may be indirectly responsible for headache, dyspepsia, biliousness and mental dullness.

Unless they change their habits of eating, they will inevitably become victims of their own indiscretions. For while it is folly to neglect the health at any age, to do so in middle life is to open the way to an early death or to an old age marred by sickness.

Keep Down the Weight

The first 25 years of man's life are devoted to growth. During this period of youth, the body usually has a large fund of reserve energy which can be called upon in times of stress. During the next 25 or 30 years, the weight should remain constant. If the diet is properly regulated, and sound habits of hygiene are followed, a man or woman will come into middle age full of vigor and with mental and physical capacities undiminished.

Unfortunately, however, the laws of hygiene and nutrition are often broken during the active middle years. As a result, bodily reserves are depleted and middle age finds many men and women near the danger line, no longer able to resist infections and the degenerative diseases.

That is why it is so desirable—if you hope to be vigorous at 50 and after—that you begin to plan for it many years earlier.

Live sensibly. Avoid overwork. Regularly take a moderate amount of exercise. Get enough sleep so that you avoid that chronic "tired feeling." Above all, eat enough, but not too much, of the foods that build and maintain health: milk; eggs; fruits and vegetables; protein foods in amounts just sufficient to meet your requirements, so that there is no excess to be eliminated; enough fuel foods to give you plenty of pep and power, but not in amounts that will cause the weight increase which many people erroneously believe inevitable during the middle years.

Curb the Appetite for Rich Foods

It is most important to avoid overeating. For muscular activity decreases with the passing years. The middle aged individual often rides where a younger person might walk or observes active sports from the sidelines where he formerly played them with zeal. Unfortunately, however, the appetite seldom diminishes in proportion to the lessened fuel needs. That is why every individual who has entered upon the middle years should check his or her weight frequently, and promptly reduce the fuel foods if a significant gain is noted.

The protein requirement diminishes somewhat after the age of 60 for no new tissue is being built. It is, furthermore, advisable to take a large share of the protein in the form of milk and eggs.

Vegetables should be used freely and if there is difficulty in mastication, they may be finely chopped. Fresh fruits may be eaten as long as they do not cause fermentation; otherwise cooked fruits should be used instead. Contrary to popular opinion, sweets can frequently be eaten in considerable amounts without causing indigestion. Fats, however, should be used sparingly.

Hot Foods Beneficial

Hot foods are often more easily digested than cold, and it is helpful to begin a meal with hot broth, in order to stimulate the secretion of digestive fluids. A hot beverage may also be beneficial at bedtime.

It is sometimes observed that five or six small meals are more easily digested than three large ones. Each person should discover what meal schedule best suits individual requirements and then abide by it. For it is indeed true that middle age—and the years beyond—are largely what you make them!

Fall Styles That Flatter

HERE are two charming fashions with the crisp, slim-waisted, very feminine look that proves they are new and smart! And you'll notice that the sleeves are proudly puffed up, not out—they give height, not width, to the shoulders. These two simple designs, each accompanied by a detailed sew chart, make it very easy for you to have two leading fashions of the coming season at very little cost.

Two-Piecer With Jacket Blouse.

This charming fashion is extremely good this fall. It's tailored or dressy, according to the materials in which you make it up. The skirt is slim and plain. The jacket-blouse as youthful and becoming as it can be. For street, make it of wool crepe, flannel or faille. For afternoon, choose velvet or broadcloth for the skirt; satin, velvet or silver cloth for the jacket blouse.

With Smart, Slenderizing Lines.

Notice that the front panel of the skirt is cut in one with the midriff section—that's a smart detail that you see in expensive models, and it's excellent for large women. You can trust the suave, slick lines of this dress to make you look several pounds slimmer. It fits beautifully. Shoulder darts, and gathers above the waistline, ease it over the bust, without any hint of bulkiness. Make this of satin, silk crepe, velvet or sheer wool, and you'll like it better than any dress you've had for a long time.

The Patterns.

1477 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 2 yards of 39 inch material for the jacket-blouse; 2 yards for the skirt.

1585 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 5⅛ yards of 39 inch material for long-sleeved dress; 4⅞ yards for short-sleeved.

Fall and Winter Fashion Book.

The new 32-page Fall and Winter Pattern Book which shows photographs of the dresses being worn is now out. (One pattern and the Fall and Winter Pattern Book—25 cents.) You can order the book separately for 15 cents.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Who gets that $3,500,000? Is it Oscar Peterson who owns that quarter section of barley north of town? Or Otto Kueffner who operates the cafe on Main Street? Well, they both get a share of it . . . so does everybody else in the state.

Minnesota produces the world's finest top-fancy malting barley for which Minnesota brewers pay a big premium price! Minnesota farmers have received as much as $3,500,000 a year for barley and corn used in beer.

But don't overlook other benefits in which the whole state shares.

The Brewing Industry of Minnesota keeps approximately 25,000 persons employed at good wages. Its product—beer, promotes moderation and well-being. Its "Code of Practice" pledges cooperation with authorities for enforcement of regulations. And it pays millions of dollars for taxes annually.

Here, indeed, are social and economic gains that Minnesota can retain with increasing profit.

Ram Sale At Warren Oct. 6

Thick, blocky, growth rams to head flocks in this county -- that's a chief aim of a ram sale and exchange day to be held October 6 at the fair grounds in Warren announces, R. A. Reierson, county agricultural agent.

Following a plan initiated last year, a committee has been set up to arrange the ram sale and exchange. Good rams, capable of improving flocks of Marshall county, will be trucked to Warren, where they may be seen by flock owners, and purchased at a laid-down price quoted by owners of the rams. No flock owner will be under obligations if he inspects the rams, says County Agent, R. A. Reierson, but when a ram is purchased, full payment must be made at the time the ram is taken. The committee will withhold part of the payment from the breeder until registration papers are delivered.

Last year 11 northwestern Minnesota counties sponsored rams sale and exchange days. That the program was successful is borne out by the fact that 22 counties have adopted this method of improved sires for flocks of sheep. It is estimated that nearly 400 rams will be secured through the sale and exchange days. The rams will come from some of the best flocks in the state.

County Agent R. A. Reierson reports that a special feature is to be presented the day of the sales. This will be a demonstration of methods recommended for the control of parasites that annually cause many thousands of sheep to reach market in an unfinished condition. Specimens of these parasites will be shown. On display also will be feeding equipment suitable on Minnesota farms.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Maijala and family who have been renting the Christ Engen farm in Rihgbo the past year, have now moved onto a new farm near Middle River.

Seed Growers Organize

The Northern Minnesota Sweet Clover Seed Growers Association met at the Badger Community Hall on Monday evening, Sept. 26, 1938 at 8 o'clock. Again the Hall was filled with enthusiastic sweet clover growers from Roseau and other Northwestern Minnesota Counties.

All the farmers voted to continue holding their seed for five cents per pound.

As a means of helping growers who need cash at this time the group voted to take advantage of the assistance available from from the Seed Growers Cooperative at Williams, Minn. This plan calls for setting up warehouses in various parts of Roseau Countythat can be bonded under the Williams organization. The Seed Growers' Cooperative at Williams is so situated that it can borrow money from the St. Paul Bank for Cooperatives at 2 per cent interest to advance farmers on their seed.

Location of warehouses and procedure to follow in delivering seed under this plan will be announced within the next few days.

Roseau County farmers will then be able to put their grass seed in these bonded warehouses and obtain an advance of approximately two cents per pound on their clover seed. At the same time they will have control over their seed to sell it when prices becomes more favorable. The Williams organization will also be in a position to clean this seed later in the year and market it under their brand through their selling organization.

Such a plan of marketing will make it possible to deliver a true quality of Northern Minnesota Seeds to farmers in various parts of the seed buying sections of the United States. Only in this way can we keep the good reputation established for Northern Minnesota Grown Grass Seeds. Farmers interested may contact Mr. Bennie Brandt, of Roseau, Minn., President; Mr. Jalmer Wellen, Badger, Secretary or the County Agent's Office, Roseau, Minnesota.

Farmers present from other northwest Minnesota Counties urged Roseau County farmers to continue efforts to secure their demands.

Roseau County farmers also urged renewed activity on the part of sweet clover growers in all Northwestern Minnesota Counties to follow the plan they have started to secure a fair price for sweet clover seed.

Jalmer Wellen, Secretary.

In Memoriam

In memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Hans C. Knutson who passed away one sad year ago today September 31st.

The depths of our sorrow we cannot tell
Of the loss of one we loved so well
And while she sleeps a peaceful sleep
Her memory we will always keep
Faithful and honest in all your ways.
Devoted and true to the end of your days,
Gone, dear mother, gone forever
How we miss your smiling face.
But you left us to remember
None on earth can take your place

Sadly missed by the

Elect AAA Officers For 1939

Community and county committeemen to administer the 1939 AAA farm program will be elected during a series of meetings in Marshall County the week of October 3 to 8, R. A. Reierson announced today.

The elections will be made by members of the Marshall County Agricultural Conservation association, and officers will be chosen from this membership. A member of the association is a person participating or cooperating in the farm program, or who has an interest in a farm and who states in writing on a form prescribed by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration his intention to participate or cooperate in the program.

Community committees shall consist or a chairman, vice-chairman, a third member plus two alternates, making five men in all to be elected as community officers.

This year a new method will be used to elect the county committee. Each cummunity will name a delegate so a county convention, at which the community delegates will elect the county committee. The Marshall county convention will be held in Warren at the Court House on Friday, October 7, at 10:00 a. m, The county committee, as last year, will consist of three members, with two alternates to serve in case a regular member cannot act on the committee.

Mr. Reierson urges farmers to attend the community meeting in their own communities. These committees not only serve as local administrative officers and sources of information about the program, but they are representatives of the farmers in their communities. This makes it obvious said Mr. Reierson that it is important for all farmers interested in the program to attend these community elections.

The Community Election for Holt, East Vally, Excel and Agdar Townships will be held in the Community Hall in Holt on Tuesday, Oct. 4th, at 2 p. m.

Aunt Tibby's Trunk

By D. J. WALSH

Copyright—WNU Service.

"BUT, Mazie," remarked Bert Howard to his pretty little wife, "it isn't quite fair that Aunt Tibby should want to come back so soon; it's less than three weeks since she left, and she had been here six months. I have no objections to your aunt; she's a nice old lady, if a bit eccentric, but you always work so hard entertaining her that you wear yourself out. Between worrying over her comfort and fussing about the safety of that old cowhide trunk, home becomes a place of torment for me instead of a haven of rest."

And then Mazie, whose bobbed crown of glory was decidedly of the shade beloved by Titian, and with a temper to correspond, replied thus: "If you were properly interested in the welfare of your family you'd want to keep Aunt Tibby here all the time! Do you fancy that she herself would be so particular about that old cowhide trunk, as you are pleased to call it, if it didn't contain valuables? She told me—no, I won't say she exactly told me, but she gave me to understand, and, I know all the family have the same impression—that in it she carries her stocks and bonds. She has bequeathed the trunk to the one in whose home she happens to die."

"Mazie!" exclaimed Bert, putting his arms around his wife, "waiting for 'dead men's shoes' is sorry business! Do what you can for your aunt without making your family unhappy, but put all such ideas as you've just mentioned out of mind; they are unworthy of you!" and Bert stopped to kiss his wife good-by.

The first evening of Aunt Tibby's arrival Mazie began, "Barbara! do sit still! You'll make Aunt Tibby nervous!" or "John! don't walk so heavy!"

Aunt Tibby had been with them several weeks when she came down with a cold. The doctor called pronounced the trouble pneumonia. "Which at her age," said he (Aunt Tibby was 86), "is a serious matter. You had better get a nurse." Aunt Tibby had been so humored by her niece, however, that the nurse could do little to suit her, and Mazie was obliged to fetch and carry, to run up and down stairs until, ten days later, Aunt Tibby sank into her last sleep.

After the funeral the relatives who had gathered from far and near demanded that the will be read at once. So the old cowhide trunk was brought down to the living room and opened in the presence of all. It contained Uncle David's army uniform, a few books, half a dozen packages of old newspapers—and a long letter written by Aunt Tibby herself. This was addressed to her relatives in general and was a sort of confession. In it she stated that her income since Uncle David's death had been limited to a pension of $6 a month. That in some way the story had been circulated that this old trunk contained valuables and she had never contradicted it, fearing if she told the truth some one might put her in an old ladies' home, an institution she detested. She trusted her relatives would pardon her and that the old trunk would be kept for her sake; that it might prove a magic casket to the owner, just as it had to her.

The trunk was left with Mazie, as she was the only person who displayed the least desire to possess it. After everyone had departed she threw her arms around her husband's neck and cried, "Oh, Bert, can you ever forgive me?" Judging by the sigh of contentment she uttered Bert's answer was satisfactory.

Aunt Tibby was right; the trunk did prove a magic casket for Mazie. It stood in the upstairs hall where she had to pass it many times a day and whenever she was seized with envy, stubbornness or a desire for finery she could not afford, one glance at the old trunk was sufficient to dispel such feelings in a twinkling.

On the Highway

It is a curious trait in human nature that we will take off our hats when a woman enters an elevator, and be most apologetic if we bump into somebody inadvertently; but the instant we get our hands on a steering wheel we damn all mankind—woman and man alike.

Too often, we are inclined to look upon traffic guides and regulations as irritating restrictions designed primarily to keep us from having a good time, when the truth of the matter is, they have been devised solely for our convenience and comfort.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses Sugar, Sirup and Molasses; Describes Correct Use of Sweets, Peerless Body Fuel

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THERE is an old saying that good things come in small packages. That is particularly apt when we pause to consider the nutritive value of sugar in its various forms. For two scant tablespoons of sugar supply as much caloric value as does three-fourths cup of cooked farina, or one and one-third eggs, or the lean meat of one lamb chop.

Sugar is a highly concentrated fuel food which burns quickly and completely in the body furnace.

The Sugar Bowl Is a Dynamo

It has been said that our present day civilization could not have reached its present heights without the driving force that sugar gives to men and women. And it is a fact that until comparatively recent times, only the very wealthy could afford this quick energy food which we now consume at the rate of more than 4,000,000 tons a year, or more than 100 pounds annually for every man, woman and child.

This peerless fuel food was once regarded almost as a medicine because of its ability to relieve fatigue and sustain vitality. And no wonder! For sugar is transformed into heat and power in less time and with less effort than any other foodstuff.

A Real Stimulant

While starchy foods require an average of from three to four hours for digestion, the body begins to burn a ration of sugar from 10 to 30 minutes after it is eaten.

It reaches the blood and muscles in a few minutes—as rapidly in fact as alcohol! That is why concentrated sweets, which are largely sugar, are so effective in combating fatigue.

Athletic coaches are well aware of the unique power of sugar as a stimulant and restorative of energy. That is why school and college youths are so frequently given highly sweetened beverages and other concentrated sweets before engaging in athletic competition.

Military leaders also appreciate how it increases endurance, and sweets are an important part of the soldier's ration. During the World war civilians were urged to reduce their consumption of sugar in order to make larger amounts available for the army, and most people found it difficult indeed to forego this agreeable food.

Indispensable for Most People

Sugar is such an indispensable ingredient in cakes, cookies, pies, puddings and ice creams, it is so necessary in beverages, on breakfast cereals and with fruits that it seems a great hardship to do without it even for one meal.

We are extremely fortunate, most people will agree, to live in an age when sugar is so high in quality and so reasonable in price. In the Thirteenth century when sugar was introduced to England through India, it cost the equivalent of ten dollars a pound in the monetary terms of today.

Refined sugar is now priced at a few cents a pound and one pound supplies over 1,800 calories! Moreover, when you buy a branded product, backed by a well-known name, you have the assurance that quality and purity are of the highest.

Moderate Use Desirable

Like all sources of great power, however, sugar must be handled with care. Too much sugar may prove as disastrous as too little. Possibly because of this, several false notions have grown up regarding this splendid food.

It is often charged that sweets cause indigestion, and it is true that when consumed in excess, they may ferment and result in irritation. Therefore, moderation should be the watchword.

But that is an excellent rule to follow in regard to all kinds of foods. For when consumed to excess, any food ceases to be beneficial.

It has also been charged that sweets are harmful to the teeth. But recent investigations suggest that the teeth are far more likely to deteriorate because the proper minerals and vitamins have not been included in the diet.

It is, however, desirable to restrict the amount of sugar given to children. That is because it quickly satisfies the appetite and may therefore decrease the consumption of other good and necessary foods, particularly those containing an abundance of minerals and vitamins. Children therefore can best take sweets in the form of sweetened puddings, gelatin, cooked and fresh fruits, and fruit juice and milk beverages.

A Food of Many Forms

The quick pick-up of sugar can be obtained in many forms besides the sparkling crystals of granulated sugar with which we are most familiar, or the brown sugar which is quite similar in composition, except for a larger moisture content, despite popular notions to the contrary.

Most fruits contain easily digestible sugars, the percentage in dried fruits ranging from 50 to 75 per cent. Milk sugar is also easily digested. Honey, molasses, corn sirup and the popular blended sirups are usually eaten in combination with other foods and are therefore unlikely to be consumed in too large amounts.

Corn sirup is often added to milk, fruits, vegetables, cereals, breads and desserts. It helps to make these foods more palatable and adds 60 calories with every tablespoon. It is so easily digested that it is often used in infant feeding.

Molasses provides significant amounts of both calcium and iron and is a good sweet for growing children. One and one-half tablespoons of molasses supplies as much calcium as one and one-half cups of diced carrots. It is a wise mother, therefore, who uses it in making the cookies that children like so well.

The mixed or blended sirups that are so popular with griddle cakes and french toast on cool fall days, also add palate appeal and energy values to the diet.

For in whatever form sugar is consumed, it remains nature's shortcut to press-the-button heat and quick, healthful stimulation.

HOW to SEW

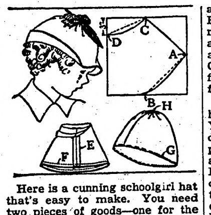
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



Here is a cunning schoolgirl hat that's easy to make. You need two pieces of goods—one for the hat and one for the lining. They may either match or contrast. Each piece should be 1-inch longer than the measurement around the largest part of the child's head. The depth of the pieces should be half their length. The diagram at the upper right of this sketch shows how to make a paper pattern for the hat. Cut a square piece of paper ½-inch wider and deeper than half the head measurement. Mark point A on the right edge half way between the top and bottom as shown. Points B and C are marked at the center top and bottom of the paper. The dotted lines are guide lines to help shape the curved lines between A and B and C and D. Point D is the center front of the top of the hat pattern and is placed on a fold of the goods in cutting each of the two layers. The diagonal line from A to C is the center back seam line.

Stitch the back seam of both hat and lining and press it open as at E. Now, place the two pieces right sides together and stitch as at F. Turn right side out, baste along turned edge and stitch as at G. Gather the top as at H and finish with a ribbon or a stitched fabric bow and a feather.

NOTE: Use what you have on hand to make things of real value. You can save by doing—instead of doing without. Mrs. Spears planned Book 2—Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery—to help you. Every page contains complete, clearly illustrated directions for things you can make at almost no cost. Enclose 25 cents and address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

You're Likely Wrong If You've Said—

Lightning never strikes twice in the same place—For the Empire State building is struck regularly during every severe storm that passes over it.

If one fell from a skyscraper or an airplane he would be dead before hitting the ground—For many airmen have fallen a mile or more without opening their parachutes, then opened them and landed safely. In the interval they remained perfectly conscious and unharmed.

Night air is harmful—For scientists say night air is only dangerous in malarial districts where mosquitoes may enter an open window and infect the sleeper.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

First All-United States 'Old Glory'

"Old Glory" itself, the first American flag to be made with American-manufactured bunting, is the treasured possession of A. N. Goldsmith of Los Angeles. Approved by Abraham Lincoln three days before his assassination, the flag has 13 stripes of red and white and 37 stars, all but 10 of which are arranged in a diamond-shaped pattern on the field of blue. It is the only flag of this type in existence. It measures 12 feet by 6. Holding it are Mary Long (left), and Bettye Knapp.

FLEET-FOOTED COP

Don Lash, former Indiana university and U. S. Olympic track team star, who has become a member of the Indiana state police, appears in his new uniform. Lash, who holds a top position among the world's two-mile running stars, was named by the state police board along with 47 other "rookies" who attended a police training school at Indiana university.

They Sailed Alone From Hawaii

Pictured on their arrival at Santa Catalina island, Calif., are Mr. and Mrs. William Crow, who completed a 3,000-mile voyage from Hawaii in their 40-foot home-built schooner. With no other crew than themselves, they were out of sight of land for 47 days, encountering adverse winds and two weeks of continuous rains in mid-Pacific.

Woman Pilot Sets Soaring Record

In the glider above is Helen Montgomery, pretty Detroit girl and the only woman soaring pilot entered in the American open soaring meet at Frankfort, Mich. She set a new American woman's duration record by keeping her motorless craft in the air for 7 hours and 22 minutes.

CZECH LEADER

President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia is shown in a recent study. Called Europe's "smartest little statesman," Benes is attempting to preserve the sovereignty of his people in the face of tremendous odds. He was elected in 1935, succeeding Prof. T. G. Masaryk, who held office for 17 years, since the republic was set up.

Central Europe's Trouble Spot

Map shows Czechoslovakian districts inhabited by other racial groups. The areas shown in black are largely occupied by Germans and would eventually be ceded to the German Reich under the Anglo-French proposal for dismemberment of Czechoslovakia.

By Virginia Vale

ZASU PITTS has been having a lot of fun on her personal appearance tour, and has learned a good many things about her own box office value.

She has brought crowds to the theaters where she has appeared, and motion picture exhibitors have told her that it hasn't been their fault that they haven't shown her pictures. They've begged for them. Any picture that she is in makes money for them, it seems, no matter who else appears with her.

Zasu Pitts

"But you just haven't been making any pictures, Miss Pitts," they said to her.

There's a good reason why Miss Pitts hasn't been making pictures, these last months. A number of other actors, also big ones, haven't been making pictures either. Not that she hasn't been offered roles that she really wanted to play. But the companies who sent for her wanted to cut her salary to the bone. These days the big money is likely, it seems, to go to newcomers to the screen—foreign importations, cute girls who are being built up. Some of the big players have to swallow their pride, and do, and take the cut; others stay off the screen. Maybe that's why you've been missing some of your favorites.

Miss Pitts has two opportunities to make her debut in New York as an actress; one in a musical show that, because of its authors, is practically sure to be a hit, the other in a play. If her husband and children weren't so firmly established in California she wouldn't hesitate about accepting one.

*

Remember passing mention that was made here some time ago of Charlie Chaplin's new screen find, Dorothy Comingore? He had seen her in a little theater performance at Carmel-by-the-Sea, where he had gone to work out the script of a new picture.

FREDRIC MARCH

Just in case you have wondered what happened next, she has changed her name to Linda Winters, and you'll see her in "Trade Winds" with Joan Bennett and Fredric March. Here's a chance to see if you agree with the great comedian on what constitutes good screen material.

*

When you see "The Great Waltz" you'll see some lovely bits of scenery used as background, American scenery in Geneseo, N. Y. The reason is that Richard Rosson, Metro director, lived there for a while when he was a boy; now he's back in the old home town, shooting it for the public.

*

Cal Tinney has had such fun on the air with his "If I Had the Chance" broadcasts that he's been tackling his co-workers in the studio and quizzing them about their hidden ambitions. Fred Allen said he'd like to run a grocery store in a small town in Maine, and Jack Benny declared that he'd like to be a racing driver, and find out what it's like to tear across the salt flats at Bonneville, Utah, at 350 miles per hour. As for Cal himself, his suppressed desire isn't so hard to attain; he just wants to learn to play the piano.

*

ODDS AND ENDS—"Carefree" isn't up to the usual Rogers-Astaire standard . . . Jon Hall was rushed back from New York to Hollywood in order to be sent to England to make "The Thief of Bagdad" . . . "Sing You Sinners" is such a good picture that it's a hit in London—first time that's happened to a Crosby picture—and Paramount will make a sequel to it . . . The Voice of Experience took a vacation that included a tour of Oregon and a visit to Joe E. Brown in Hollywood, and now is back in New York and on the air . . . Remember "Asta," the dog in "The Thin Man" and its sequel? . . . You'll see him soon with Constance Bennett in "Topper Takes a Trip" . . . Spencer Tracy has another grand part in "Boys Town."

THESE ARE LIFESAVERS

THAT'S what Consumers Information calls these workers in a Pittsburgh glass plant, who are testing and finishing non-shatterable glass for use in automobiles. It is explained that one of the greatest hazards in auto accidents used to be flying glass, which was the most common cause of injury. Now all American cars are equipped with the shatter-proof variety, developed by American industrial research experts especially for this purpose, and the saving of many lives is the result. The man shown above keeps a constant vigil with his pyrometer, to assure proper melting conditions. The girl is polishing the edges of a car window.

Guy A. Anderson Retires

Guy A. Anderson, veteran mail carrier on rural route No. 1 out of Holt for over thirty years, retired from active service with the government on Friday last week when he made his last trip over the route here.

Mr. Anderson started in with the work as mail carrier here in the pioneer days when the roads were only a trail more or less and, he had to cover part of his route on foot. He continued his work by walking, riding a bicycle and with horses. After the community became more settled and the roads got fixed up a little better he started to use some of the first makes of automobiles that came out.

The new cars at that time were not as simple as now and, Mr. Anderson spent many an hour trying to coach a White Steamer along the muddy roads to give daily mail service to the pioneers of this community.

In the past few years the roads have been rebuilt and better cars have been made so that the work as mail carrier has become a little more pleasant job then it was in 1908. Especially so in the winter time when he could use a snowmobile instead of the horses to cover the long trip.

Mr. Anderson will retire to his nice farm northwest of town on which he has made his home the past 17 years. The News joins his many patrons on the route and friends in expressing their thanks and appreciation to Mr. Anderson for the splendid service he has rendered this community in the past thirty years and wish him a pleasant future in his retirement.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gullingsrud of Thief River Falls spent Sunday afternoon at the Walter Larson home.

Travel Roads Cautiously

With the duck season underway since Saturday and pheasant shooting to start Oct. 15, W. F. Rosenwald, traffic engingeer of the Minnesota Highway department, cautioned hunters not to let the excitement and hurry of the season cause them to forget the simple rules of traffic safety.

At the same time he asked each hunter towing a trailer to be certain that the vehicle complied with all the traffic laws and that boats are lashed securely. A weaving, loose trailer is one of the worst of menaces on the highways, the traffic chief said, and hinted that some hunters might have to detour via a judge's desk to their favorite duck pass if their trailer equipment endangers other users of the highways.

Mr. Rosenwald also asked duck and pheasant hunters to keep their guns trained away from the highways unless they were out of range.

Extra driving precautions will be necessary, the traffic engineer said, because the shooting season always loads the main thoroughfares with heavy traffic on weekends. "A good hunter should be as careful with his car as with his gun" he admonished.

Fashion Embarks on Wild Color Career in Fall Garb

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FASHION is about to go on a great color spree. For that matter the new clothes have already started out on a mad color career that promises to outcolor even the most colorful seen for many a year.

Not that this color orgy writes finis to the simple black foundation dress that provides such dramatic setting for stunning costume jewelry and for accessories that splash color accents in vivid highlights. No indeed! The black dress with dashes of color is holding its own.

The intriguing thing about the colors exploited this season is that they are distinctively out of the ordinary.

The colors heard most about and seen dramatized throughout Paris collections are the purples and plums, the mauves and violets and fuchsia shades. In fact the entire gamut of violine shades is run. Comes next in the limelight the much talked of teal blue and fog blue and that rapturous blue made famous in the ever-beloved Blue Boy portrait painting. In fact, we are to enjoy a season of "blues" that are subtle and lovely beyond description.

The suit of refined elegance which you see pictured to the right in the picture is made of an imported wool in an exquisite scarab blue tone. It is trimmed with sheared beaver, a fur which is very much in use this fall. Self bows tie at the collar and belt which is significant for much emphasis is given to tie-fastenings throughout current costume design. Two wide bands of shirred, matching silk are set into the top part of the dress underneath.

Wine dregs is a shade that is making special appeal with American women. There are also a number of fascinating greens in the present fashion spectrum, notably bronze, hunter, laurel and tapestry greens. Autumn rust and coppery tones are also going big.

Coats are yielding to color to a surprising degree. Leading stores are devoting entire window displays to coats in purples and deep plum or wine-dreg tones. These are superbly colorful and with opulent furs present about the handsomest array of coats ere seen.

As to the gorgeous plaid or striped wool coats so outstanding in the new fashion picture, the only way to resist them is to close your eyes and flee their color glory. Better still, why not make up your mind to indulge in a richly colorful plaid or striped (fashion favors both) wool coat at the very start. The striped coat centered in the group above reflects rich autumnal colors that take on an added note of luxury in a trim of luxuriant fur.

The swank jacket suit pictured to the left abounds in color intrigue. The color formula adopted is blue spruce and dark brown. The dress, the trimming on the coat and the hat are of lightweight woolen in the subtle blue spruce. The short swagger coat is brown in a new deep pile wool that looks velvety and soft. The velvety wool weaves are among the smartest shown this season and fashion is placing considerable emphasis on them.

© Western Newspaper Union.

Fur Jacket Adds Chic to Costume

For ultra chic on an autumn day the smartest formula calls for a dress of an alluring wool weave topped with a youthful and jaunty fur jacket. No-end versatility is expressed in these voguish fur-jacket costumes.

A likable model includes a conservative black dress of handsome dull-finished velvety surfaced deep pile wool. With this milady wears a swank short skunk jacket. There is a huge gold jewelry piece at the throat and the belt of the dress is detailed in gold.

A gray tweed coat dress is topped with a gray kidskin lumber jacket. A bolero of sheared beaver surmounts a dress of brown cloque weave and so on.

Even Trimmings Turn to Jewels

The flair for jewelry display is reflected in the new jewelled trimmings that are worked about the necklines of many of the newest daytime dresses. The latest models are arriving, bedecked with necklace effects that are jewel-appliqued right on the very fabric itself. So realistically is this done to all appearance it seems like an actual necklace or perhaps huge pendant suspended from a chain.

The idea is clever and presents no-end opportunity for ingenious design. Not only jewels but metal cabochons and locket effects and leaf motifs combine to add a decorative note.

Femininity Note

The feminine lingerie effect is not limited to blouses and vestees but frequently characterizes the whole dress.

Trends for Fall

Day dresses for fall show a tendency to wider flared skirts with accentuated hip lines.

Drape Technique

Practical and Pretty At-Home Wearables

YOU'LL be indoors more from now on—busy at your own fireside. So it's time to make yourself some pretty new work clothes. Here are some that combine comfort and practicality, and they are so easy to make that even if this is your first sewing venture, you'll succeed beautifully.

Slenderizing House Dress.

Everything about this dress is designed for working comfort. The waistline, although it looks slim because it's drawn in by darts, is unhampering and easy. The skirt gives enough leeway to stoop and climb and stretch. The armholes are ample, the sleeves short and loose. This dress is easy to do up, too, because it fastens in the front, and can be laid out flat on the board. Its utter simplicity, long lines and deep v-neck make you look slimmer than you are. Make it of calico, percale, linen or gingham.

Three Pretty Aprons.

Any of the three of them will be mighty handy to have all fresh and ready, when you want to prepare afternoon tea or a hasty pick-up supper for unexpected guests. Each of them protects the front of you efficiently, and looks so crisp, feminine and attractive. Make several sets—you'll want some for yourself, and also to put away for gifts. They're so pretty for bridge prizes, and for engagement remembrances. Choose batiste, dotted Swiss, lawn or dimity.

1615 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 requires 4¾ yards of 35-inch material. Contrasting cuffs would take ⅓ yard.

1595 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires, for apron No. 1, 1⅞ yards of 35-inch material and 6 yards of ricrac braid; for apron No. 2, 1½ yards of 35-inch material with 5¼ yards braid; for apron No. 3, 1⅝ yards of 35-inch material, with 11 yards of braid.

Rug From Old Coat And Scraps of Felt

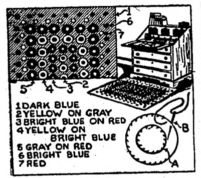
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THE directions for making the rug in my book—SEWING, for the Home Decorator, have brought many letters from readers describing rugs that are new to me and very interesting. The reader who shares with us this idea for using pieces of heavy woolen and scraps of felt, tacked her rug to the side of the house and took a snapshot of it which she sent me.

The finished rug is 34 by 23 inches. Half of it is shown here at the upper left. The foundation (1) is made of the back width of a very heavy old coat. An allowance was made for a hem to add weight to the edge. The foundation may be pieced if a large section of heavy cloth is not available or felt purchased by the yard may be used for it.



Next, circles of felt in two colors, cut from old hats and discarded school pennants, are sewn together with heavy black thread as at A. These are then sewn in place as at B beginning at the center of the foundation. The large circles in the three center rows are two inches in diameter. Those in the next two rows are 2½ inches. All the small circles are one inch.

You can make slipcovers, all types of curtains and many other things for the house with the help of Book 1—SEWING for the Home Decorator. Just follow the pictures. Step by step you learn to make the lovely things you have been wanting for your home. Book 2—Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery—illustrates 90 stitches; also dozens of things you can make in your spare time to use or to sell. Books are 25 cents each. If you order both books leaflet on crazy-patch quilts will be included free. Address: Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

New Farm Program

Radio promotion of Goodyear products for farm use began September 26 over a huge Blue network of 48 broadcasting stations of the National Broadcasting company. Fifteen-minute daily sectional programs will be broadcast each Monday to Friday, inclusive, from 1:15 to 1:30 p. m. eastern standard time, 12:15 to 12:30 p. m. central standard time and 11:15 to 11:30 a. m. mountain standard time to farmers living between the Atlantic ocean and the Rocky mountains, and from Texas to Canada.

The new Goodyear broadcasts will supplement the National Farm and Home Hour, which for ten years has given American farmers up-to-the-minute news and expert counsel on rural problems. The new broadcast immediately follows the Farm and Home Hour program.

Information of vital local importance, including weather forecasts, shipping advice, commodity prices, sectional crop conditions and other such items will be featured in these regional broadcasts. Complete regional offices, competently staffed, and equipped to gather and make available the necessary regional news and information, will be set up and maintained. These will be in charge of farm experts who also will direct the program and see that they are keyed to local needs.—Adv.

California, Home of Pensions, Tries Another Plan This Year

By Joseph W. La Bine

Politics

Choicest haven for U. S. old people is sunny California, which annually beckons retiring farmers who want escape from midwestern winters. Before Depression, many farmers leased or sold their homesteads and went to California expecting to enjoy old age on this income. Not expected were drouth and low prices which wiped out this revenue, making California a paradox in whose Utopian climate men were going hungry.

Since Utopian climates may produce Utopian ideas, 1934 found Upton Sinclair barely missing gubernatorial election with an elaborate pension plan called EPIC (End Poverty in California). Later came Dr. Francis E. Townsend whose old age revolving pension of $200 a month went into eclipse last year when business got better, has since come back with new vigor.

Townsendism's chief onetime supporter was 54-year-old Sheridan Downey, who wrote a book called "Why I Believe in the Townsend Plan." But a month ago Sheridan Downey won Democratic senatorial nomination on a new plan that gives California's orthodox financiers a bad case of jitters, that has far greater implications than either EPIC or Townsendism.

SHERIDAN DOWNEY

The Man: Soft-voiced Sheridan Downey attended the University of Wyoming, entered politics at 24 by winning the county attorneyship at Laramie while his wife worked for women's suffrage. Now living in San Francisco's exclusive, suburban Atherton, Pensioneer Downey garnered enough votes to beat Sen. William Gibbs McAdoo in the primary last month.

The Plan: "$30-every-Thursday" springs from a seed transplanted last year from far-away Austria. Original sponsor was one Robert Noble, whose radio lectures urged $25 every Monday for each Californian over 50. Later sponsor was Hollywood Attorney Lawrence Allen who changed payday from Monday to Thursday, boosted payments from $25 to $30. To each, every Thursday, would go 30 state warrants valued at $1 apiece. On the back of each warrant would be spaces for 52 two-cent state stamps to be purchased in cash. Once each week, Californians would dig out all warrants in their possession, affixing a stamp to each. Thus at year's end each warrant would have $1.04 in two-cent stamps, would be traded by the state for $1 in cash. Extra four cents would cover costs.

Though "$30 - every - Thursday" dares not infringe on the U. S. right to coin money, pension warrants would nevertheless be valid for intra-state taxes and debts (except gasoline tax and pension stamps). Private business need not accept warrants, but 50 per cent of all state purchases must be paid with them.

Biggest stumbling block is that pension warrants would largely eliminate California's use of U. S. legal tender, yet the state must dig up about $690,000,000 in Uncle Sam's cash on January 1, 1940, to redeem warrants which would be issued next year to at least 500,000 pensioneers. To make matters worse, 1939's state revenue from stamp sales would be only $322,750,000, since only a small part of the year's warrants will be completely stamped. Example: A warrant issued the last Thursday in 1939 would carry only two cents in stamps at year's end.

But this technicality does not worry the 800,000 signers on whose petition California will decide next November. Required are 1,300,000 votes, since a majority ballot gives approval. Automatically, Pensioneer Roy G. Owens of Los Angeles would be named administrator at $7,800 a year (payable in warrants). Probable immediate result of easy money would be rising prices and inflation, a possibility the amendment would solve by increasing pensions. Where such a vicious circle might end, pension opponents are trying to figure out.

By last week, as California politicians were arguing hotly over "$30-every-Thursday," the idea began spreading throughout the U. S. In Ohio, where two rival groups planned to introduce an initiative petition in November's election, chief battle was whether $30 shall be paid on Wednesday or Thursday.

Foreign

Since he became German chancellor in 1933, Adolf Hitler has held an unknown quantity in his mailed fist, has scared the world with threats that may only be bluffs. A master of psychology, he renounced Versailles when France and Britain were worried about Italy's invasion of Ethiopia. In 1936 his Rhineland coup was staged under similar circumstances. By last spring, when he marched into Austria, the bluff had been so successful that none arose to challenge him.

But two months ago when Reichsfuehrer Hitler began bluffing his way into annexation of Czechoslovakia's Sudeten frontierland, Britain and France were ready to bluff in turn. Franco-British bluff was a promise to defend Czechoslovakia. Germany's return bluff was defiance, delivered at September's Nazi congress in Nuremberg. Then, weary of whistling to keep up their courage, Paris and London offered peace via capitulation. Terms: (1) Berlin's annexation of Sudeten areas 75 per cent German; (2) plebiscite in Sudeten areas from 50 to 75 per cent German; (3) German promise to guarantee Czechoslovakia's independence.

Fortnight ago, when British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain delivered these terms at Godesberg, democracies called it a "sell-out." But to Adolf Hitler even this was not enough. He wanted more land, moreover refused to guarantee Czechoslovakia's future. His deadline for Czech agreement: October 1.

If Der Fuehrer had bluffed too far, if Democracies had scored a point and made Germans wonder about their chancellor's wisdom, it was no stroke of genius on Neville Chamberlain's part. Upshot of Godesberg was a vindication of the British prime minister and swift turning of world sentiment against Germany. But greater upshots were Czechoslovakia's amazingly fast mobilization, France's decision to fight, and London's offer to follow suit.

To London, where only a week before he had helped draft the first proposal, went French Premier Edouard Daladier. Still anxious to keep peace, Europe's last two great democracies offered a new agreement. Terms: Transfer without plebiscite of areas over 50 per cent German; (2) exchange of populations in other areas; (3) international guarantee of Czechoslovakia's independence.

But Adolf Hitler was still ready to bluff. Facing rising anti-war sentiment, forced to show his hand, he summoned countrymen to Berlin's vast Sportspalast, told them his Godesberg terms were final, that Germany's bluff has been backed all along by real strength.

Excerpts: "I can tell you now that I have spent billions for armaments . . . We have created an unparalleled air force and tank force. I want to declare regarding the Sudeten problem, that my patience is exhausted . . . The Sudeten Germans will now take the liberty denied them for 20 years."

But at the very moment Der Fuehrer spoke, a world moving swiftly to war knew the eventual lineup of European power would place Germany at disadvantage.

REICHSFUEHRER HITLER
Would No. 1 bluffer be outbluffed?

Prague, virtually shut off from the world since her mobilization, heard that Russia's lumbering, untested military giant was poised to bring aid. Thoroughly scared, France called almost every reservist to the colors, had 1,500,000 troops along her Maginot line, advised Parisians to evacuate. Also scared, Britain called Parliament, inspected ARP (air raid precautions) equipment, finally ordered partial mobilization. With October 1 but a few hours away, Europe wondered whether her No. 1 bluffer would be outbluffed by rank amateurs.

Business

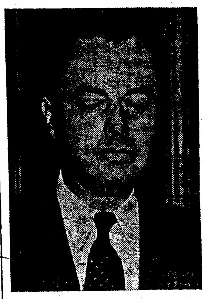
Simpler than ill-fated NRA, the wage-hour law which goes into effect October 24 decrees minimum wages of 25 cents per hour, maximum work week of 44 hours for industries dealing in interstate commerce. But to U. S. employers seeking the law's application to their business, wage-hour regulation has become complex through its simplicity.

Since NRA's greatest weakness was its iron-clad system of regulation, the new act repents, places compliance squarely on the shoulder of industry. Though Administrator Elmer F. Andrews will issue opinions guiding employers in determining their status, he has also pointed out that wage-hour regulations will offer no "pat definition" of interstate commerce.

Thus, last week, firms engaged partly in interstate commerce, partly in intrastate commerce, were at their wit's end. At Chicago, the National Hardwood Lumber association devoted much of its convention time to wondering if sawmill and yard superintendents were subject to the law's provisions, if computation of hours begins when a logger starts to the scene of operations or when he starts actual work.



ADMINISTRATOR ANDREWS
Less bluster . . . less coercion

Special industrial wage standards committees will eventually be established for most trades, but lack of funds prevents formation of more than three or four committees this year. Already requested is a deficiency appropriation to expand this work.

Meanwhile, each employer's independent decision on his compliance requirements looms important. Should a low-paying, long week manufacturer decide his business was mainly intrastate, therefore not requiring compliance, his employees might later prove otherwise and collect back wages.

But, counteracting this inconvenience, employers know that Administrator Andrews' tendency to proceed cautiously will help avoid NRA's bluster and coercion, would probably result in reducing the act to a workable, successful basis.

White House

"If you will forgive me for saying so, the United States has been a veritable fortress of silence."

Thus scolded by Beverly Baxter, member of the English parliament, U. S. radio listeners were still content to remain aloof from Europe's boiling cauldron (See FOREIGN). Though Franklin Roosevelt's domestic policies might find 50-50 acceptance and refusal by his constituents, most citizens were agreed that his treatment of Europe's crisis was satisfactory, that his Secretary of State Cordell Hull was doing an admirable job.

But as the Old World veered into what was almost certain war, President Roosevelt thought it was time for the fortress of silence to speak. Alone in his study from 10 o'clock to midnight, he drafted a message to Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and Czech President Eduard Benes, then jerked sleepy correspondents from their beds.

Excerpts: "The fabric of peace on the continent of Europe, if not throughout the rest of the world, is in immediate danger . . . The United States has no political entanglements . . . But in the event of a general war (the American people) face the fact that no nation can escape some measure of consequences . . .

"It is my conviction that all people under the threat of war today pray that peace may be made before rather than after war . . . On behalf of 130 millions of Americans and for the sake of humanity everywhere I most earnestly appeal to you not to break off negotiations looking to a peaceful, fair and constructive settlement . . . So long as negotiations continue, difficulties may be reconciled. Once they are broken off, reason is banished and force asserts itself. And force produces no solution for the future good of humanity."

Next day, a German spokesman said the President's message "was sent to the wrong address. Prague is the proper address."

Miscellany

In 1918, Private Bert Fenning of the famous "Lost Battalion" lost his arm in the Argonne, became a hero. Twenty years later, day before the "Lost Battalion" assembled to commemorate its feat, Private Fenning became a hero again, drowned trying to rescue a swimmer in New York's Long Island sound.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Relates the Romance of Wheat and Discusses Flour, the Basic Food

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THE story of wheat flour is the story of civilization. Before man learned to cultivate this golden grain, he was obliged to move from place to place, with the seasons, in search of food to sustain and nourish his body.

Then, on one happy and momentous occasion, perhaps 6,000 years ago, an inspired nomad plucked the kernels clustered at the top of some waving grasses, observed that they had a nut-like taste, and passed along the far-reaching discovery to his fellow-tribesmen.

The beginnings of wheat cultivation are lost in antiquity. But we do know that for thousands of years, it has been one of the most important crops in the world—so necessary to man's well being that the supplication, "Give us this day our daily bread," has summed up his most fervent desires.

Food for the World

Today, nearly three quarters of a billion people use wheat as food. And modern methods of milling have developed flours of such superlative quality that breads are more appetizing and more attractive than ever before; special flours make cakes and pastries light as the proverbial feather; and there are prepared mixes available for biscuits, waffles, muffins, griddle cakes, pie crust and gingerbread.

For Energy and Vitality

The form in which wheat flour makes its appearance on the table is of less importance than the fact that it is and should be an essential item in the family food supply. That is because it offers a rich supply of fuel value at little cost. The different types of flour contain from 61 to 76 per cent carbohydrates, from 11 to 15 per cent protein, and varying amounts of mineral salts and vitamins.

It is necessary to know something of the structure of the wheat kernel and to understand how the various flours differ, in order to select the flour best suited for each purpose. A kernel is made up of several outer layers of bran; a layer of cells high in phosphorus and protein, just inside the bran; the endosperm, composed of cells in which starch granules are held together by proteins; and the germ. The starch cells are so small that one kernel of wheat may contain as many as 20,000,000 granules.

White and Whole Wheat Flours

White flour is made chiefly from the endosperm. Whole-wheat, entire-wheat and graham flours are loosely applied terms which refer both to products made by grinding the wheat berry without the removal or addition of any ingredient, and also to a flour from which part of the bran has been removed or to which bran has been added.

One of the most prolonged discussions of the last two decades has involved arguments for and against the use of white or whole wheat flour in making various types of bread and muffins. As a result, many people have been confused and misled—often at the expense of their enjoyment in meals.

Here are the facts: White bread contains important energy values, proteins, some minerals, chiefly potassium and phosphorus, and when made with milk, it also supplies some calcium. It is easily and almost completely digested, tests indicating an average digestibility of 96 per cent.

Bread and other bakery products made from whole wheat flour also contain proteins and carbohydrates, plus good amounts of iron, copper, phosphorus and potassium; and vitamins A, B and G.

The whole grain products are less completely digested than those which are highly refined, however, so some of their nutrients may be lost to the body.

When the two types of flour are considered as sources of protein and energy alone, they are regarded by nutritionists as practically interchangeable. Whole wheat flour is conceded to be richer in minerals and vitamins, but where white bread is preferred, these elements easily can be supplied from other sources.

As a matter of fact, foods made from both types of flour belong in the well-balanced diet, where they add variety and splendid food values at minimum cost. And it goes without saying that for many purposes, only white flour is suitable.

Bread Versus Pastry Flour

Different types of wheat differ in their proportions of protein and carbohydrates, and that accounts for the difference between bread and pastry flours. Bread flour is made from wheat containing a large amount of gluten, which gives elasticity to a dough and helps to make a well-piled loaf. Pastry flour contains less gluten and more starch and has a lighter texture that produces fine-grained cakes. All-purpose flours, as their name implies, are usually a blend of different types of wheat and are designed for general household use.

A Symbol of Progress

It is a tribute to American enterprise that the world's largest flour mills are now to be found in this country, and that tremendous staffs of technicians and research chemists supervise every step in the preparation of the flour which may pass through as many as 17 grindings and be subjected to 180 separations.

Experts begin by checking the quality of the grain while it is in transit to the mill. But their work does not end when the flour emerges pure white in color and unbelievably fine in texture, after having passed through silk bolting cloths of 100 mesh or finer. After that, there are baking tests, day after day, to be sure that every sack which is sold is of uniformly high quality.

Self-Rising Flours

An interesting development of recent years has been the self-rising flours and other ready-to-use mixtures. Some of these contain only a leavener; others include dried milk and eggs; fat; and baking powder, so that only a liquid is needed. All are planned to save the homemaker's time and maintain her family's interest in their most important energy food—the products of wheat—the foremost cereal grain.

Proposed Amendments to the Constitution of Minnesota

To be submitted at 1938 General Election

STATE OF MINNESOTA
LEGAL DEPARTMENT

WILLIAM S. ERVIN
Attorney General.

St. Paul, Minnesota, June 8, 1938

Honorable Mike Holm,
Secretary of State,

Dear Sir:

In compliance with the provisions of Section 46 of Mason's Minnesota Statutes of 1927, I herewith furnish you a statement of the purpose and effect of all proposed amendments to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota which are to be submitted to the electors of said state at the general election in 1938 in accordance with certain acts adopted by the 1937 legislature.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT NO. 1.

By the adoption of Chapter 492 of the Laws of 1937, the legislature has proposed an amendment to Article 8 of the State Constitution. The proposed amendment, if adopted, will not alter the form of any existing section of the Constitution but will add a new section to be known as Section 8 of said Article 8.

The proposed section reads as follows:

"Section 8. Any of the public lands of the state, including lands held in trust for any purpose, may, with the unanimous approval of a commission consisting of the governor, the attorney general and the state auditor, be exchanged for lands of the United States and/or privately owned lands in such manner as the legislature may provide, and the lands so acquired shall be subject to the trust, if any, to which the lands exchanged therefor were subject, and the state shall reserve all mineral and water power rights in lands so transferred by the state."

The Purpose and Effect of the Proposed Amendment

The purpose and effect of this amendment is to confer upon a commission consisting of the governor, the attorney general, and the state auditor the power to exchange any of the public lands of the state, including lands held in trust for any purpose, for lands of the United States and lands privately owned, such exchanges to be made in such manner as the legislature may provide. In the case of certain trust fund lands exchanges cannot now be made because the State Constitution does not permit the legislature to authorize the sale of said lands except by public sale. This amendment will make it possible for the state to acquire compact areas of land for forestry and other conservation purposes by exchanging land outside of state forests and other conservation areas for lands of the United States within such areas and for privately owned lands within such areas.

The amendment requires that all mineral rights and water-power rights in lands so transferred by the state shall be reserved. The land so acquired will become subject to the same trust, if any, as the land disposed of. For example, if school land is given in exchange, the land received will become school land.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT NO. 2

By the adoption of Chapter 493 of the Laws of 1937 the legislature has proposed an amendment to Section 36 of Article 4 of the Constitution of the State of Minnesota.

This section now reads as follows:

"Any city or village in this state may frame a charter for its own government as a city consistent with and subject to the laws of this state, as follows: The legislature shall provide, under such restrictions as it deems proper, for a board of fifteen freeholders, who shall be and for the past five years shall have been qualified voters thereof, to be appointed by the district judges of the judicial district in which the city or village is situated, as the legislature may determine, for a term in no event to exceed six years, which board shall, within six months after its appointment, return to the chief magistrate of said city or village a draft of said charter, signed by the members of said board, or a majority thereof. Such charter shall be submitted to the qualified voters of such city or village at the next election thereafter, and if four-sevenths of the qualified voters voting at such election shall ratify the same it shall, at the end of thirty days thereafter, become the charter of such city or village as a city, and supersede any existing charter and amendments thereof: Provided, that in cities having patrol limits now established, such charter shall require a three-fourths majority vote of the qualified voters voting at such election to change the patrol limits now established. Before any city shall incorporate under this act the legislature shall prescribe by law the general limits within which such charter shall be framed. Duplicate certificates shall be made setting forth the charter proposed and its ratification, which shall be signed by the chief magistrate of said city or village and authenticated by its corporate seal. One of said certificates shall be deposited in the office of the secretary of state, and the other, after being recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county in which such city or village lies, shall be deposited among the archives of such city or village, and all courts shall take judicial notice thereof. Such charter so deposited may be amended by proposal therefor made by a board of fifteen commissioners aforesaid, published for at least thirty days in three newspapers of general circulation in such city or village, and accepted by three-fifths of the qualified voters of such city or village voting at the next election and not otherwise; but such charter shall always be in harmony with and subject to the constitution and laws of the state of Minnesota. The legislature may prescribe the duties of the commission relative to submitting amendments of charter to the vote of the people, and shall provide that upon application of five per cent of the legal voters of any such city or village, by written petition, such commission shall submit to the vote of the people proposed amendments to such charter set forth in said petition. The board of freeholders above provided for shall be permanent, and all the vacancies by death, disability to perform duties, resignation or removal from the corporate limits, or expiration of term of office, shall be filled by appointment in the same manner as the original board was created, and said board shall always contain its full complement of members. It shall be a feature of all such charters that there shall be provided, among other things, for a mayor or chief magistrate, and a legislative body of either one or two houses; if of two houses, at least one of them shall be elected by general vote of the electors. In submitting any such charter or amendment thereto to the qualified voters of such city or village any alternate section or article may be presented for the choice of the voters, and may be voted on separately without prejudice to other articles or sections of the charter or any amendments thereto. The legislature may provide general laws relating to affairs of cities, the application of which may be limited to cities of over fifty thousand inhabitants, or to cities of fifty and not less than twenty thousand inhabitants, or to cities of twenty and not less than ten thousand inhabitants, or to cities of ten thousand inhabitants or less, which shall apply equally to all such cities of either class, and which shall be paramount while in force to the provisions relating to the same matter included in the local charter herein provided for. But no local charter, provision or ordinance passed thereunder shall supersede any general law of the state defining or punishing crimes or misdemeanors."

If amended as proposed by the legislature, this section will read as follows:

"Section 36. Any city or village in this State may frame a charter for its own government as a city consistent with and subject to the laws of this State, as follows: The legislature shall provide, under such restrictions as it deems proper, for a board of fifteen freeholders, who shall be and for the past five years shall have been qualified voters thereof, to be appointed by the district judges of the judicial district in which the city or village is situated, as the legislature may determine, for a term in no event to exceed six years, which board shall, within six months after its appointment, return to the chief magistrate of said city or village a draft of said charter, signed by the members of said board, or a majority thereof. Such charter shall be submitted to the qualified voters of such city or village at the next election thereafter, and if four-sevenths of the qualified voters voting at such election shall ratify the same it shall, at the end of thirty days thereafter, become the charter of such city or village as a city, and supersede any existing charter and amendments thereof; provided, that in cities having patrol limits now established, such charter shall require a three-fourths majority vote of the qualified voters voting at such election to change the patrol limits now established.

Before any city shall incorporate under this act the legislature shall prescribe by law the general limits within which such charter shall be framed. Duplicate certificates shall be made setting forth the charter proposed and its ratifications, which shall be signed by the chief magistrate of said city or village and authenticated by its corporate seal. One of said certificates shall be deposited in the office of the secretary of state, and the other, after being recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county in which such city or village lies, shall be deposited among the archives of such city or village, and all courts shall take judicial notice thereof. Such charter so deposited may be amended by proposal therefor made by a board of fifteen commissioners aforesaid, published for at least one day for four successive weeks in any daily newspaper of general circulation in such city or village, or if there be no daily newspaper of general circulation in such city or village then for four successive weeks in a weekly newspaper of general circulation in such city or village, and accepted by three-fifths of the qualified voters of such city or village voting at the next election, and not otherwise, but such charter shall always be in harmony with and subject to the Constitution and laws of the State of Minnesota. The legislature may prescribe the duties of the commission relative to submitting amendments of charter to the vote of the people and shall provide that upon application of five per cent of the legal voters of any such city or village, by written petition, such commission shall submit to the vote of the people proposed amendments to such charter set forth in said petition. It shall be a feature of all such charters that there shall be provided, among other things, for a mayor or chief magistrate, and a legislative body of either one or two houses; if of two houses, at least one of them shall be elected by general vote of the electors. In submitting any such charter or amendment thereto to the qualified voters of such city or village, any alternate section or article may be presented for the choice of the voters, and may be voted on separately without prejudice to other articles or sections of the charter or any amendments thereto. The legislature may provide general laws relating to affairs of cities, the application of which may be limited to cities of over fifty thousand inhabitants, or to cities of fifty and not less than twenty thousand inhabitants, or to cities of twenty and not less than ten thousand inhabitants, or to cities of ten thousand inhabitants or less, which shall apply equally to all such cities of either class, and which shall be paramount while in force to the provisions relating to the same matter included in the local charter herein provided for. But no local charter, provision or ordinance passed thereunder shall supersede any general law of the State defining or punishing crimes or misdemeanors."

The Purpose and Effect of the Proposed Amendment

The purpose and effect of the proposed amendment to Section 36 of Article 4 of the State Constitution is to change the requirements for the publication of proposed amendments to charters of cities having home rule charters.

The changes proposed are as follows:

Said Section 36 now provides that a proposal for the amendment of the charter of such a city shall be published for at least thirty days in three newspapers of general circulation in such city. If amended as proposed said Section 36 will provide that a proposal for the amendment of the charter of such a city shall be published for at least one day each week for four successive weeks in any daily newspaper of general circulation in such city or, if there be no daily newspaper of general circulation in such city, then for four successive weeks in a weekly newspaper of general circulation in such city. The proposed amendment, if adopted, will reduce from three to one the number of newspapers in which a proposal for the amendment of a home rule charter of a city must be published, change the period of publication from thirty days to four weeks, and require publication in a daily newspaper of general circulation in such city, if there be one, and otherwise in a weekly newspaper of general circulation in such city, instead of publication in newspapers of general circulation in such city without specifying whether they shall be daily or weekly. The proposed amendment, if adopted, will reduce the cost of such publication.

Yours very truly,
WILLIAM S. ERVIN,
Attorney General.

Marconi (1874-1937) was twenty-two years old when he got his first patent for a practical system of wireless telegraphy in England, his mother's country. In 1899 he impressed Europe by spanning the channel to establish Franco-British contact without wire. His successful experiment of sending the letter S across the Atlantic came in 1901.

Engine failures are few and far between in modern railroading, because rigid inspection after each run turns up any sources of likely trouble. The picture shows a big passenger engine being groomed for its next trip. Steam pressure and oil are used to cut the accumulated grease off the engine's wheels and under-carriage.

Wages Are Your Problem Too

How much you can pay and how much you are willing to pay for railroad transportation must, in the end, control the wages the railroads pay.

For wages, like all other costs of furnishing your railroad transportation, must be paid out of what you and others pay us.

More than 42 per cent, or nearly one-half, of what you and others paid the Great Northern for transportation during the year which ended July 31 last, was in turn paid out to our employees.

The Great Northern Pays—

| | Average per Year* |
|---|---|
| Engineers and Motormen | $3,477 |
| Firemen | 2,429 |
| Conductors | 3,310 |
| Brakemen and Flagmen | 2,450 |
| Baggagemen | 2,758 |
| Clerks | 1,889 |
| Shopmen | 1,782 |
| Sectionmen | 1,232 |

*These figures are fairly representative of average wages received by approximately 17,000 employees who had more or less steady employment during year ending July 31 last. Shopmen would have received substantially more if need for drastic economies had not necessitated periodic shutdowns. (Averages were arrived at by dividing payroll for the year period by average of employee counts made at middle of each of the 12 months.)

Following the general decline in business which set in about nine years ago, the Great Northern has resorted to every possible economy in an effort to keep "outgo" within "income".

But these economies, together with the small increase in rates (averaging about 5 per cent) which the government permitted the railroads to put into effect, have fallen far short of overcoming (1) declining business, (2) new taxes for pensions and unemployment insurance, which amounted to $1,833,000 for the year which ended July 31, and (3) enforced wage increases since 1929 despite lower living costs.

The Great Northern wants to pay its employees well. It believes they are entitled to "good wages".

On the other hand, we do not believe that the 15 per cent reduction in wages which the railroads have been obliged to propose, will leave our employees with less than what is commonly regarded as "good pay".

And especially is this true in relation to what we can pay; and in relation to what those who use the services of the railroad can or are willing to pay; and in relation to what the 31,856 stockholders who own the Great Northern have received during the last 6½ years, which has been only one dividend of $2 per share during that entire period.
